TEA PERFECTION

What we would like you to answer for your own satisfaction, as well as ours, is this: Would BLUE RIBBON TEA ever sell so steadily and largely as it does if it did not possess these two outstanding characteristics?

Most economical to the housewife

Best value for the dealer to recommend

You cannot sell tea to-day unless it possesses these features to some extent, and you cannot sell tea as largely as we sell BLUE RIBBON TEA unless it possesses these outstanding qualities in a very marked degree.

There are other features favoring BLUE RIBBON TEA that we need not dwell upon, but we would gladly tell you about them.

Long datings, free deals, or 5% discounts go hand-in-hand with heavy stocks :: :: :: ::

Heavy stocks mean slow turnovers.

Slow turnovers mean deterioration, and in many cases absolute ruin to the goods.

Every advance in modern business is toward smaller stocks and frequent purchases of quality goods that can be quickly and conveniently sold.

An article that deteriorates as quickly as tea must reach the consumer fresh. It can only reach the consumer fresh by being moved quickly and often. If you purchase more than you can dispose of in four months—interest on your capital eats up your discount—but worse still, the tea has deteriorated seriously in quality.

It is very unwise to keep any tea in stock more than four months; in that time it will deteriorate in value over five per cent.

With "SALADA" Tea you know just what you are selling and how long it will take to sell it. Every tea purchaser is ensured plantation goodness and freshness.

Your money is not tied up. It keeps on the move. It earns more money for you. The freight is prepaid—the sale is guaranteed—you can return it any time if you're not satisfied.

Merchants Didn't Know Invoice Costs

Incidents Which Happened in a Country General Store Illustrating Haphazard Methods of Doing Business—A Raw Oil Sale—Price of Rolled Oats Cut in Two and Dealer Didn't Realize It Till He Had Lost Money—Sold Sugar Without Seeing Invoice.

No one knows but a merchant himself the trouble he frequently has with competitors not knowing what goods cost when they come to make a sale. But very often apparent losses to the former are really blessings in disguise.

The writer was in a country store last week—a village with a population of about 200 and surrounded by a good farming community—and watched an incident of this nature with a great deal of interest.

A farmer who was a regular customer pulled a long black bottle out of his overcoat pocket and wanted to know the cost attached to getting it filled with raw oil.

Without waiting for a reply he remarked: "I can get it filled for 15 cents over at Tom's."

Tom is a competitor around the corner.

"I couldn't fill it for that money,"

He pulled a long, black bottle out of his pocket . . .

replied the merchant," why it costs me more than that."

The farmer persisted that he had got it filled for 15 cents the last time and he had brought it in to see if the merchant could do the same.

"I know I can get it for that price," he said with emphasis on the know, "and it holds more than a pint too."

"If that bottle holds more than a pint, Tom is losing money."

The customer insisted that it did. The merchant decided to find out just what that bottle would contain and went into the storehouse. The writer watched him pour out the oil into a half-pint measure and fill up the bottle. It held 1 pint and a little over a quarter of another.

This was explained to the farmer and he was told it would cost him 22 cents which meant about 18 cents a pint or about $1.40 a gallon.

Of course he didn't buy, stoutly maintaining that he could 'get the bottle filled for 15 cents.'

The merchant quietly advised him to do so refusing to sell him the oil at a price which meant an actual loss. And there that transaction ended.

Sent Him Away Happy.

There happened to be several axes lying on the counter which opened up a new line of conversation.

"What are those axes worth?" inquired the farmer.

"A dollar a piece."

"I bought an axe here some time ago for a dollar and it was no good; it went all to pieces in no time."

"Why didn't you tell me about it before," replied the merchant, "I would have split even on it with you. Occasionally every merchant happens to get a poorly tempered axe but it doesn't often happen."

After a few minutes further conversation along similar lines the merchant made him an offer of one of the axes for 60 cents, making it plain, however, that it was purely in consideration of the fact that the other axe had been a poor one. He emphasized this so that the farmer would be positive that he wasn't simply cutting prices.

The offer was accepted. The customer went away pleased and the merchant had made a profit on the axe because he had purchased it when axes were cheaper. The farmer left to get the oil from the competitor for 15 cents. In a few minutes he returned and bought some tobacco and other goods mentioning nothing about the oil.

It is safe to assume that while away he purchased nothing but 15 cents' worth of oil which meant a loss to the man who sold it and yet did not gain him any more business. Diplomatic independence and salesmanship were instrumental in holding him.

A Rolled Oats Episode.

This same merchant knows of many similar instances where his competitors have actually not known the cost of goods and have sold them at prices below invoice costs not even taking into consideration expense of doing business.

"One day," he told the writer, "one of my customers came in to say that he had just bought a sack of rolled oats pretty cheaply. I asked him where he got it and how much it cost him. He happened to be standing in front of the door when the competitor was selling a sack of the rolled oats for $1, so he bought one on the spot and carried it home on his shoulder.

"I said to him that he got it very cheaply; he replied that that was what he had thought and the reason why he bought it. I pointed out too that it ought to have sold for about $2 instead of $1.

"That day I asked several of my customers if they wanted some cheap rolled oats advising them that my competitor was selling them cheaper than they could be purchased anywhere else and that they had better hurry up before he found his mistake. He soon sold all the rolled oats he had and there was a big demand for more before he discovered the cause. He had previously been buying rolled oats in barrels and he thought that by cutting the price in two he would be making money on the sacks at $1. He hadn't studied the invoice.

Didn't Know Cost of Sugar.

"Another time," went on this merchant, "a competitor began selling sugar at a cut price. I found it out from the driver who handled the freight."

The freight handler had an opportunity to buy some cheap sugar, but . . .

This village is located some miles from a city and is without railway connection so all the freight has to be hauled by teams. The freight handler had casually asked the price of a sack of sugar and in his estimation it was lower than usual.

"He came over to me," said the merchant, "to find out my price. I told him and he intimated that I didn't know very much about sugar because B———'s were selling it at so much less. I have been in business a good many years and explained that I believed I knew a little more about sugar than he did.

"Anyway he claimed that my price was away up so I advised him to go right over that minute and buy all the sugar he could pay for — that he wouldn't get such a chance again. He was going after another load the next day and therefore was not inclined to be in any hurry; he could get it any time he said.

" 'You go right over now,' I advised 'for by to-morrow he will have his invoice and will put up the price.'

"But he didn't go. The following night he was in my store again so I asked him about the price sugar was selling now.

" 'I wish I had taken your advice,' he confidentially said; 'it has gone up since last night.' "

These incidents serve to illustrate what some men do not know about their own businesses. Selling goods at a loss is a poor enough policy at any time but when a merchant doesn't know it, there is something radically wrong.

Exposing Co-operative Store Methods

Ottawa Man Gives His Reasons Why Right to Organize These Joint Stock Companies Without A Charter Should Not be Granted—Advises That an Eye be Kept on Each Individual Member of Parliament—A Promoter's Scheme, He Declares.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—Your reference to the probability of the Co-operative Bill, which has been defeated on two occasions at considerable cost to the trade of the country, again being brought before Parliament, should be met in a different way than merely to wait until some member can be induced by fair or unfair means to introduce it. If the nature of the bill, and its objects were understood by the people it would be found that the provisions of the bill are so entirely in the interests of a number of promoters and so diametrically opposed to the general interests of the public that nobody outside of the "gang" would want it to become law. Few members in the house would dare introduce it.

The promoters of this bill evidently see a "gold mine" behind it for themselves which they are endeavoring to reach by trying to fool the buying public with the idea that it would be to their advantage. Fortunately, however, while a great many can be fooled, there are always some that cannot.

A Pertinent Question.

Suppose co-operative stores are such a great boon to the public as they are said to be and suppose these men who are so anxious to secure this legislation are sincere, why are they not starting these stores when nothing stands in the way except the small cost of a charter? If these stores were so desirable and of such a great benefit to the consuming public, surely a few hundred dollars would not be a serious obstacle. But when a few promoters are anxious to send agents all over the land, to stir up discontent, by what I claim to be misrepresentation and secure their subscription at a commission of 25 per cent., then it must mean a great deal to them. Imagine what it would mean to have the country invaded by smooth-talking agents leading people to believe, who know little of trade, that they are being robbed by the merchants and that they can make large savings through the operations of the stores. Imagine too, an agent pocketing $1,000 out of every $4,000 subscriptions.

Now also imagine these stores being managed and conducted by salaried men who have no other intent in the business than their salaries; imagine further that by means of keen competition the profits will by no means pan out as stated; imagine once more the disappointment, the dissatisfaction and the loss which will follow at least in nine cases out of ten. The natural outcome would be disaster. The regular stores would suffer during the time these so-called co-operative institutions were losing their money and the whole community would be disorganized, disrupted and paralyzed.

The Stores in England.

It is all very well to say that co-operative stores are successful in England, but while some have developed into gigantic concerns, the fact is that many have failed and those which do remain are by no means a benefit to the people. It must also be taken into consideration that conditions in England are entirely different from here. Here the country is sparsely settled and spread over an immense area, while in England it is the very opposite. Co-operative stores have been tried in various parts of the Dominion and nearly all have failed, and they did so, not because they had to pay the small cost of a charter, but because they are not based on business principles and therefore could not be a success. No financial authority would recommend them as a safe investment. Viewed from a promoter's standpoint it looks different. People, as a rule, are not familiar with trade conditions, and it is an easy matter to make them believe that they would derive great benefits, and induce them to subscribe for stock. When this is done the promoter gets his fat commission and leaves for new pastures. A good agent, with a catchy scheme and profuse representations would likely take $1,000 a month as commissions from the pockets of the "suckers" among whom he would operate.

To do this they are asking the government to give them special privileges in passing a law to enable this "gang" to do this work. Not only every merchant, but every voter should keep his eye on the member who represents his constituency and if he should support such legislation to turn him down, good and hard, at the next election. PROTECTION AGAINST FAKE ADVERTISING.

The Advertising Club in Winnipeg Aims to Save the City Several Thousands of Dollars Every Year—Committee Passes on all Propositions.

Winnipeg, Nov. 30.—The Advertising Club of Winnipeg, met recently, and elected officers for the ensuing year. C. A. Abraham, editor "Winnipeg Telegram," retiring president, occupied the chair. W. T. Devlin, representing the Retail Merchants' Association, was appointed on the Protection Committee of the club.

The Protection Committee was appointed after a lengthy discussion of clause 4 of the report of the executive which was as follows:

"Your committee recommends that a committee of five be appointed to pass upon the merits of all advertising schemes offered to the members of the club. That this committee consist of the president of this club, a member who is also a member of the Retail Merchants' Association, another who is a member of the Winnipeg Industrial Bureau, a member of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, and also one who is a member of the Real Estate Exchange. It is proposed that suitable cards be printed and placed in the offices of the club members, stating that before any proposition would be considered it must have the approval of the protection committee of the Winnipeg Advertising club. It would be the duty of this committee to look carefully into the merits of the proposition, and if worthy, to issue a permit to the agent to be recognized by advertisers who are members of the club. Your executive believes this plan will relieve the merchants and advertising public of Winnipeg of many fake schemes, and save to the city several thousand dollars annually."

Protection Committee: — Hugo Ross, representing the Real Estate Exchange; H. J. Hardie, Board of Trade; C. F. Roland, Industrial Bureau; J. J. Foot, representing the Advertising Club; W. L. Devlin, Retail Merchants' Association.

In the election of officers which followed J. J. Foot, manager McClary Manufacturing Co., was elected president.

Over one hundred new members were admitted, and the club starts the New Year with bright prospects. E. S. Horne and William E. Campbell, both former presidents of the Kansas City Advertising Club, were among those who spoke, and they offered many valuable suggestions.

Advertising Educates the Advertiser

Digging down for First Hand Information Makes a More Intelligent and Better Merchant—Interesting Facts About the Coffee Bean and Salmon—The Art of Capitalizing Handicaps and Its Advantages—An Example of the Value a Merchant Can Make of Something New is Given in Uncolored Green Tea.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

This thought of education being "a drawing out" will lead us just about as far as we can follow; and we have seen that advertising is education. Moreover, like all other educational effort, advertising educates the educator more than the educatee. Do you get that? What I mean to convey is, that every effort you make to educate another so stimulates your own mental activity that you get a reflex benefit, an added exact, analytical knowledge that will always be wonderfully beneficial to yourself. Hence, the greatest benefit of advertising is that it makes you a better merchant.

Studying the Coffee Bean.

Let us study a little together. Let us take a trip to Brazil and look into the coffee question. We shall find, as a starter, that coffee grows in berries containing two grains, or "beans," normally flat on one side and convex on the other, growing with the flat sides face to face. There are, however, occasional freak, or imperfect berries which contain only one bean; and that bean, having nothing to support it but the skin of the berry, becomes rounded and in commerce is known as "peaberry." This imperfect berry matures the same as any perfect berry so that in the cup its flavor, body and pungency is no way distinguishable from the normal berries; but its presence makes the coffee lack uniformity of appearance. Thus, as coffee, like many other things, is sold measureably on its good looks, aside from its drinking properties, these imperfections are sorted out and put into a classification by themselves. Alone in this way, peaberry looks normal and, indeed, attractive.

If, now, peaberry were sold as a freak, an accident, a culling, peaberry would have to be sold for a lower price than regular gradings, but it is not sold that way at all. No: here comes in that fine merchandising trick called "capitalizing a handicap" and a defect is made into a point of merit, so that peaberry, because of the limited supply, first sold at a premium and is now actually cultivated. This, through the study to overcome a disadvantage, wise merchants sharpened their wits and really created a new department in the coffee trade. The educator was educated.

Selling Sockeye Salmon.

Chinook salmon is the finest grade, but there is never more than enough to go around. Sockeye is next—rich, solid, very red and just a shade less delicate and flavory than Chinook—and there is generally a good supply, though no surplus to speak of. How to handle the problem, with a second choice only to be had? Very simple, when you stop to think. Omit all mention of Chinook and talk up Sockeye to beat the band. You have a great advantage in the popular conception of salmon as red, for Sockeye is the reddest of all. All fish is the handsomer and gains popular favor through being flakey—and Sockeye flakes beautifully, with large, clean-cloven flakes. Richness is prized in salmon; and, while Chinook is really the richer fish, Sockeye has plenty of oil, which is also probably more apparent to the eye than in the case of Chinook—hence this point can be exploited to the limit.

Not Practicing Deception.

Maybe you will think that all this is but a training in deception. Such, however, is not the case. If you, yourself, know all these things and others of like character, you will be able to tell your customers the true facts. You can truthfully tell them about the coffee, and its value. If one of the cultivated varieties of peaberry is actually good value, maybe somewhat exceptional, you will be the better able to say just why it is better because you know the origin of the variety; or, on the other hand, you can tell the merits of your plain Santos as opposed to a peaberry which is not so good. Again, knowing about salmon, you can tell the facts. If you have Chinook, you have the best there is, according to size and shape of package, and can exploit it fully and fearlessly. If Chinook cannot be had, you can talk Sockeye on its merits, likewise because you know what you are talking about. As a matter of practice, however, your coffee knowledge does not need to be passed to the customer as so little coffee is sold in the raw these days and, in fact, only a small percentage goes out unground; but knowledge will always be good for YOU as applied to ANY of your goods. And knowledge, through constant use and study of the art of advertising, will gradually be transmuted into what is better than any assemblage of facts; for you will acquire wisdom.

Advertise Pepper Quality.

Some day you will discover that black pepper is not only "half p's" and not merely hot, but that it has many distinct flavors, depending on the district whence it comes, the growth, curing, selection, etc. This will lead you, in your advertising, to lay stress on certain points about your special pepper with which the other fellow, down the street, is not familiar.

In these days of much talk of purity in foods, you will hear about the difficulty of finding olive oil—a comparatively new comer in foods of general use—that can be depended on for purity. Then you will study olive oil for awhile, because your advertising experience will have taught you that you must dig, and dig, and dig, deeply into the underlying whys and wherefores of all things. You will learn that California olive oil is one thing and Italian oil another thing; not only as to flavor, but as to chemical composition. This gives you an advantage over the man who does not know. You will talk, of course, about the flavor and aroma of the true oil from California or Italy; the pungency, etc., but what you may know through careful study will have made you sure of your ground.

An Uncolored Tea.

Why, only last week I learned of a Ceylon tea which the importer described as "green." It looked black enough to me, and really was black in color; but it was cured by a simple drying process, like the Japan process, instead of being subjected to a near-fermentation, which is the process whereby all black teas are cured. But note that I counseled the importer to label his green Ceylon as "uncolored," but not to call it green, for the reason that consumers would not recognize it as green any more than the consumer will know what you are getting at if you speak of "raw" coffee.

Now have I made it somewhat clear why I say that advertising is educational to you and me? Why, it is the most broadening study we can take up. Better than that, or I should say fully as important, is the fact that this "taking thought" about our business will bring joy to our hearts and put a song on our lips on the grocery business. For it is an eternal verity that nothing can be earnestly studied without yielding pleasure as well as profit to the student; so the way to gain the view that the grocery business is the finest, most broadening, most dignified, most useful calling in the world is to STUDY IT!

Send Messages to Mother.

And it cannot be studied in any way so advantageously as through an earnest attempt to advertise it. This is the way to become able to say something "different" about your goods without straining after effects. This is the way to send a new message—not to Garcia this time but—to "Mother" in your evening talks. For instance:

> "Uncolored" Ceylon Tea really means unfermented—called "green" in trade circles. The partly-fermented teas are dead black and to many seem "bitter." If you have not hitherto quite liked Ceylon tea, try some of the uncolored; you will probably find it "just right."—

Fought in Boer War Against the British

Beno Berman is Now a Retail Grocer in Montreal — Some of The Obstacles He Had to Overcome—Methods He Has Utilized in Developing His Selling Power — Believes in Giving Children Exactly What They Ask For.

The old saying that "it is an ill wind, etc.," is well illustrated by entering the grocery store of Beno Berman, corner of Van Horn and Park Avenues, Montreal. The Modern Supply Stores, as they are known, are a credit, not only to their owner, but to the grocery business itself. The story of their inception and growth reads almost like a romance.

Through the Boer war Mr. Berman fought against the British, under General Botha, until the end. Left practically penniless he decided to try other fields, and came to this country. Four years ago he came to the conclusion that the grocery business offered as good an opportunity for the pusher as any, and accordingly made his plans. At first the going was somewhat difficult, as lack of capital, and knowledge of the language were certain to make it. Where there is a will there is a way, however, particularly in this case, where the language was concerned, as Mr. Berman was already master of five languages.

Sleeping Rooms for Employes.

Beginning with a small stand in one of the outlying sections of the city, the business has grown until now it occupies almost the whole of a large new building, and in addition has modern stables in the rear for the accommodation of its delivery service, and arangements for the sleeping accommodation of the clerks. Bare existence was all that could be drawn the first year, and calculation was necessary even for that.

The section of the town was a new and growing one, and gradually customers came. Once well under way the store personality took affect, and they stayed. Not only that, but they brought friends, recommending the store and its methods all through the neighborhood.

Early in the history of the business Mr. Berman took up the question of advertising. How to do the necessary amount in the best way, and most economically, was a process worthy of the thoughts of an experienced retailer. It was solved by the personal weekly letter to old and new customers. The business grew beyond the possibility of this, but it is still in operation by means of the letter. By making this a bright, attractive list of goods and prices, and reasons for dealing at the store, instead of at the department stores down town, he has succeeded in building up a very strong position.

Gets Corporation Trade.

Not content with just the ordinary run of business, he next went after some corporation trade. The C.P.R. Outremont section is now buying its supplies from this store. Of course, this is by no means the most profitable kind of business, but it is the advertising given the store among railroad employes, who are thickly settled hereabouts, which gives it value.

As to the store itself, the accompanying cut will give some idea. Built for a grocery store, the equipment is much more complete than is ordinarily the case. Extra wide plate glass windows give possibilities of display that are being utilized to their fullest extent. In each one the display is changed at least once a week. Two doors add to the front appearance of hospitable display, and go to help the general exterior view materially.

Unique Display For Tobaccos.

Inside there is system shown throughout the store. Shelves are large and cover three sides of the grocery section, which is now kept entirely separate from the meat section. Show cases are in general use in all parts of the store. In this connection a case originated by Mr. Berman is deserving of special mention. This is one for cigars, cigarettes, tobaccos, and pipes. It is a movable, four leg, glass stand, in which are four trays. On these trays are arranged the articles above mentioned. They can be readily seen from the outside, as all sides of the case are glass. Drawing out one tray is a matter of a moment only, and then the articles may be examined more closely. Humidor arrangements are inside to keep the moisture at the proper stage, and the display is very effective.

Interior of Montreal Store Belonging to a Former Soldier in South African

Mr. Berman is a great believer in having the store systematized. In working toward this he has placed his meat market in an entirely separate section. Even in the grocery section almost everything is subdivided. Groceries naturally have the largest but a considerable section is laid aside for kitchen utensils and table ware. Then his liquor department is a large one, almost as large as the grocery section itself.

One of the best features of the store is the large and complete basement and cellar. The floor is entirely of cement, with perfect drainage facilities in case any water should appear. The walls are brick and the whole cellar is airy, dry, and constructed to meet the most exacting demands of the modern grocer.

Regarding delivery, Mr. Berman says he believes thoroughly in spending enough money on it to make it as complete as possible. Many grocers in his position would only have one wagon. Mr. Berman has two. Not only that, but he has built a modern stable, cement and brick, in which to keep horses and wagons. In building the stable he took the opportunity to make comfortable sleeping quarters above it for such of his employees as wished to rent them. This has been taken advantage of by several of them, and they pronounce them ahead of the average city boarding house.

Children Get What They Want.

As to his store policy, Mr. Berman has decided ideas. For instance as regards children buying: Instruction to the staff are that "children must be given exactly what they want, and more care must be exercised to see that they get it than for the older customers." "The reason for this is plain," said Mr. Berman, "Children are told to get a certain article by their mothers. They come home with a substitute, and are not able, as the grocer might be himself, to explain its quality and advantages over the other. Naturally the mother will think twice before sending to the same store again.

"A child can do more damage to trade than most grocers think. An older person can exercise his own judgment in buying but the youngster only knows that he must get what he was sent for or report why he doesn't. If the grocer has substituted, well he only gets what he deserves for substituting on a child. Yet such shortsighted policy is often followed in the trade."

Methods for Increasing Christmas Trade

What Some Westmount and Montreal Grocers Are Doing—A Christmas Card With November Monthly Accounts — One Dealer Anxious to Get His Telephone Customers Into the Store—A Free Bunch of Holly—Another Makes A Specialty of a Brand of Cheese.

Montreal, Dec. 1.—What are you doing to increase your Christmas trade this year?

It is about time to have decided upon your plans, as it is not always easy to put good ideas into effect at the last moment. Further, if you do not plan, you cannot expect your business to increase as much as it should, simply because nothing which is left to run itself turns out as satisfactorily as it would were intelligent attention given to it.

There is always a good deal said about the window display for Christmas goods, but if displays in other parts of the store are not correspondingly attended to, the effect of the windows will not be so great.

With the Xmas season approaching, grocers should bear this fact in mind. Every grocer believes in the advertising and selling value of window displays, but not every dealer realizes that one of the main mechanical details is to have everything scrupulously clean. Any evidence of inattention to stock either in window or store itself has an immediate effect on the average observer, the very person to whom he wishes to appeal.

Backs Up the Window.

E. J. Quinn, who controls a high-class trade in Westmount, Que., is a strong believer in the efficacy of window dressing, and states that he does not only use high-class goods in his display, but also has an equally superior quality of goods, artistically arranged inside the store to back up, as it were, goods in the window.

By dint of handling only the best class of groceries Mr. Quinn now caters to a select clientele. Regarding the handling of Xmas trade he stated that for one thing he gets supplies of the finest fruits, vegetables, etc., from New York and California.

"It pays me to stock the best of everything, especially," he says, "at this season, although I experience considerable difficulty with freight systems and deliveries."

A Card to Customers.

Jas. Graham, a new St. Catherine St., Montreal, grocer, is this year sending out a neat little card, which calls attention to the choice stock of holiday goods he is handling, and his facilities for satisfactorily serving his patrons. He makes special mention of high-class food specialities which are likely to be purchased at Xmas time more than other seasons. Eating raisins in attractive cartons, fancy cheese at high prices, the best confectionery, biscuits home and imported, all receive due notice on his card, while he does not forget to tell of staples, such as raisins, currants, candied peels, etc., which are purchased in such quantity at this time.

Wants to See Customers.

Another grocer, when interviewed, stated that he was quite confident of disposing of an even larger stock of goods than last year, as he had arranged for the majority of his telephone customers to come down and look over his stock personally instead of ordering over the phone for Xmas requirements. "I arrange My Christmas novelties in an attractive manner which catches their eye," said he, "They then purchase articles they would never have dreamed of had they given their orders over the phone."

The Westmount Grocery Co. have found it a good idea to begin talking Xmas to customers when taking orders not only over the phone, but at the counter, from the beginning of December. It has, in many cases, the effect of educating them to get their Xmas shopping over early. Consequently the grocer and clerks are not subject to the strain caused by a rush, while people have not to waste time waiting attention at a crowded counter. Past experience has proved this to be the most satisfactory method.

A Good Advertisement.

When questioned about the sale of holly and evergreen, one grocer stated he made a practice of giving each of his customers a free bundle. He would not think of charging for it as he realized that the gift was appreciated much more than calendars which he had formerly supplied.

C. E. Box, a West End grocer, is looking forward to the Christmas trade. He, too, believes in sending an attractive card, with his monthly statements, and is careful to have a good supply of all the articles quoted on his lists. His Xmas card is a special one. Mr. Box has a good demand for a special brand of cheese all the year round, but the quantity sold at Xmas is remarkable, and at this season he features this particular specialty. He has customers in his own locality and in various other portions of the city.

A number of grocers do not seem to realize that plans made early for Xmas trade will allow them more time to attend to detail in store arrangement.

The Puritan Yeast Company, Ltd., with head office in Toronto, Ont., has been granted an Ontario charter to deal in and manufacture yeast cakes, cereals, spices, etc. The capital stock totals $100,000 divided into 100 shares of $100 each. The provisional directors are J. B. Hallworth, E. James and A. M. Bright, of Toronto.

Mardel's grocery store, Norwich, Ont., was forcibly entered on Sunday night, Nov. 20, by thieves who pried open his desk and till and succeeded in getting five dollars in cash. They also helped themselves to buns, cakes, bread and cheese. Admittance was gained by breaking the glass in the front door.

A clerk in a St. Louis grocery store gave a woman $3 worth of goods and only charged her 45 cents. The proprietor chanced to notice the transaction and investigared. The clerk confessed to giving overweight and to undercharging.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

St. Thomas Dealer Thinks Bi-Monthly Wages to Railway Employes Would be Detrimental—Minimizes Possibility of Garnishment — A Good Salesman Must Know His Goods, Says Edmonton Merchant—A Grocer Who Gives Away No Calendars—How Halifax Dealer Figures Profits — Merchants Take a Hand in Cleaning Streets.

Against Bi-Monthly Wages.

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 1.—There is considerable talk among the trade here about the proposal advanced by railway employes to have their wages paid bi-monthly, instead of monthly as at present. Mention of this, in fact, was made in a recent issue of The Grocer.

While this is favored by many merchants on the grounds that they would be paid more regularly, others view it with some alarm. Among the latter are Moylan & Moylan, retail grocers, Talbot St.

"If wages are paid bi-monthly," said a member of the firm, "to my mind we would be worse off than at present. You know that the garnishee law at present stipulates that the wages of a laborer can only be garnisheed when he has more than $25 coming to him.

"Now if a railway employe gets $50 a month, and he owes us $25, we can get that now by garnishment. But if he is paid bi-monthly, there is never any more than $25 coming to him at one time, and that prevents us from getting anything at all.

"The law in New York state, I understand is different," he added. "Over there if a man owes money all one has to do is to call up the superintendent of the division, or some other authority, and tell him. He quietly tells the debtor to pay up, and if he doesn't, he has to leave the job."

Salesman Must Know the Goods.

Edmonton, Dec. 1.—A local dealer in commenting on the selling possibilities of the dealer, states that in his opinion one of the greatest requirements is the knowledge of goods.

He does not think that any clerk or grocer can sell new goods or raise the standard of staples unless he thoroughly understands them.

"Let a traveling salesman who has made a success at selling drygoods, for instance, and who has even sold these goods over the retail counter with the best of success, come into my store, and no matter what his selling ability is, he would fall down as a superior salesman.

"A clerk in order to be a real salesman must have a good knowledge of tea, sugar, butter, cheese etc. He must have other qualities, of course, but he must know the goods first of all."

Gives No Calendars.

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 1.—As the time is again coming around when retailers distribute calendars, etc., to their customers, it will be interesting to know that many merchants here do not give away anything of this nature.

Last year the Retail Merchants' Association decided to eliminate these free gifts to customers. Wm. Anderson, grocer, in referring to this question, states that he still adheres to this decision.

"When a man makes only about 5 per cent. net profit on his sales, he cannot afford to give any portion of it away," is the way he puts it.

What do other dealers think of his decision?

Figures Profit on Sales.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 1.—"Some of us retailers have no end of difficulty with the traveler who tells us that we are making 20 per cent. on an article that costs us $1, and which sells for $1.20," declared a merchant the other day.

"Why when it costs me 12 per cent. at least to do business, it is quite simple that I'm making no 20 per cent. on cost. I may be making it on invoice cost, with or without freight, but not on what the article is actually costing me before it leaves my store.

"I have to point this out to the traveler, and tell him that I'm making but 16 2-3 per cent., because I figure my profits on sales. I calculate my expenses on my turnover, and therefore to know where I am at, I have to do the same with profits.

"Figuring profits on invoice cost and expenses on sales would cause quite a mix-up," he affirmed.

Dealing With Complaints.

Calgary, Alta., Dec. 1.—When asked what he considered the best method of dealing with complaints, a local merchant said that this was a question calling for discreet and careful tactics.

"When a customer brings back an article which she thinks is not, according to her understanding, exactly as she expected or if it is defective, a dealer should keep his temper," he maintains.

"He should look the case over, taking everything into consideration. It may be a just claim. Put yourself in her place. Before you say a word as to the merits of the case, decide in your own mind what you are going to do, and have the nerve to stick to it.

"For, if a merchant says to a customer that he cannot allow for a claim, and then argue the matter and finally give in, the customer has the same opinion of him that she would have had, had he refused to allow her anything in the first place. and the chances are she will think less of you.

"It is probably best to be on the liberal side when a claim is made, but it is undoubtedly proper for a dealer to do what he is going to do with as much despatch as possible, and without a word of grumbling. Grumbling is what drives the customer away — constant grumbling on the dealer's part.

"If a merchant is going to replace the poor piece of crockery or the spoiled basket of fruit, do it with the grace of a prince. If he is pleasant about it the customer will think more of him and will give him his business in the future."

Merchants as Street Cleaners.

London, Ont., Dec. 1.—Impressed by the complaints of women shoppers in regard to the muddy condition of the sidewalk on the south side of Dundas street. between Talbot and Clarence, merchants in this district took the matter of reform into their own hands the other morning.

This is one of the busiest parts of the city, containing among others, Scandrett Brothers' grocery store, in the block east of Richmond; and in the block running west to Talbot are Smallman & Ingram's, J. A. Wilson's butcher shop and Russell Smith's fruit store.

J. P. Cook went down his side of the street with an agreement, which almost everybody signed, and at 8 o'clock next morning representatives of every place of business in this section were out armed with hose, brush and broom, to inaugurate a scrubbing bee. The streets have been torn up to install conduits and for repair work, and the mud and clay had been tramped along the sidewalks until people would scarcely use that side of the street.

Not only sidewalks, however, but windows and store fronts were washed by the hose and brush brigades, and even merchants on the other side of Dundas and in adjacent blocks caught the spirit of the thing, and came out to clean up.

The city engineer will now likely be appealed to to clear the mud off the crossings, so that the cleaned sidewalks may remain clean.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

With the approach of the holidays, everybody is thinking of gifts to buy and are making plans to make glad their friends. Are you keeping in line with modern dealers, and are you ready to supply your trade with everything that is best in the beverage line? It will certainly interest you to read the announcement of Laporte, Martin & Co., Ltd., in this issue. The line of goods they advertise have a world-wide reputation. They are all select goods for select people.

ANOTHER CO-OPERATIVE BILL.

The persistency with which F. D. Monk, M. P., introduces Co-operative Bills in the Dominion House of Commons is to be commended, even if the bills have few worthy features. Last week he gave notice of the introduction of a bill presumably along similar lines to the one thrown out last year in committee and the first one which reached the Senate stage.

It is now up to the retail merchants of every section of Canada to assert their rights in a forcible manner. The best plan of action to follow is to wire, write or tell the member for your constituency in the Federal Government that this bill should not be passed and explain to him why he should use his vote and influence against it.

There is no good reason why promoters should be given the privilege of establishing joint stock firms of this nature which do not have to secure a government charter or be under government control. On general principles, favors to the few are to be discouraged and for Co-operative Societies to ask the right to form companies without having to purchase a charter and thereby come under government control, does not even smack of fairness.

This is a bill that every merchant whether in Western or Eastern Canada should oppose; and the opposition should be voiced immediately.

A STRONG POTATO MARKET.

Dealers who are particularly interested in potatoes should keep a close watch on the market movements. Reports from all over Canada indicate that the supply is going to fall short of the demand and already prices are going up.

It may be that farmers are holding for better prices. In fact it was thought this was the case a few weeks ago but later developments point to a real shortage.

In New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island the situation is quite firm. New Brunswick is importing from Maine to supply Western Canadian demand. A Halifax dealer has recently bought up 10,000 bushels and Montreal buyers have been in Prince Edward Island on a similar mission.

Potatoes are therefore on the upward trend at the present time and deserve considerable attention.

LOSING 9 PER CENT. ON SUGAR.

There was a retail grocery dealer in St. Thomas, Ont., last week selling No. 1 extra standard granulated cane-refined sugar at 20 pounds for the dollar. He advertised it in the window.

The cost of this sugar in that city was $4.95 last week. The dealer was therefore actually making 5 cents on a turnover of 100 pounds, or 1 per cent. on sales. Figuring that it costs him at least 10 per cent. to do business, he was losing 9 per cent. on sugar alone—9 cents on every dollar's worth sold.

Evidently he is either going out of business or he is a philantropist on a little smaller scale than the Carnegie type.

It is a pleasure to state, however, that this case is an exception for St. Thomas as the grocery dealers there have been accustomed to maintaining established prices pretty well.

ANOTHER DOWN FOR SUGAR.

It never rains but it pours. Sugar dropped another notch during the week, the decline amounting to 10 cents per cwt.

On September 30 the price of standard granulated on Montreal market was $5.05 where it had been from Aug. 5. From that time sugar began to slump until now it is $4.60 or 45 cents per hundred pounds cheaper. It is now 5 cents lower than at this time last year.

The weakening of this market has not been unexpected. The condition of the raw market as well as lack of brisk demand has warranted it. The visible supply of raws is away ahead of last year at a corresponding period and the continuous string of drops has been quite natural. The statistical position still denotes weakness.

The $4.60 price mentioned is the lowest reached this year for standard cane refined granulated. Last year the lowest was $4.35 during the months of January and March.

ROOM FOR ADVERTISING.

The tea commissioner for the Japanese Central Tea Traders' Asssociation of Japan, was in Canada during the week to find out why the imports of Japan tea by Canada and the United States had decreased from 10,000,000 to 5,000,000 pounds in the past 10 years.

He discovered that the cause was due to the fact that Japan was not pushing the sale of tea on this continent like companies in other tea producing countries were doing. When he goes back home he will advise that an advertising campaign be carried on here, and that more attention be paid to quality and price.

This is another instance of the value placed on the power of advertising as a selling agent. A nation will undertake it just as did the government of Ceylon when it decided to utilize the tea cess for advertising purposess in foreign lands some years ago. Everyone knows the result of the campaign.

If a similar campaign were carried on by the Government of Greece, the demand for currants would soon spread so that there would be no necessity of any talk about uprooting the vines to maintain prices. The coffee of Brazil forms another example. If the crop is extra heavy, coffee would go a-begging for buyers and return the growers little money if the government did not buy in the surplus.

The salvation for such conditions appears to be a big, carefully executed advertising campaign in the most receptive countries.

DIFFERENCES IN SALMON.

Here are a few simple facts about Sockeye, Cohoe, and Humpback salmon that every dealer ought to know.

Of the three, Sockeye salmon is, of course, the best. It has color and flavor not common to the others. Cohoes are paler in color and Humpbacks are more so, therefore they are cheaper.

This season it is learned that packers have been able to forward practically 100 per cent. of Sockeye orders but only about 40 per cent. of the others. Since the best salmon gives the best satisfaction retailers should exercise their selling power to sell it. Once the public has been educated to purchase the better goods, no further trouble will be experienced. And then the inferior grades of salmon will not last long if they are pushed very hard this year.

A broker told The Grocer recently that

Spring salmon. Out at the coast he says the best hotels and best families use little else. This salmon is not uniform in color—although it is in quality—and this explains the reason why eastern people do not demand it more often. They think that because the color is not always there, the quality must be that of the Cohoe or Humpback.

Salmon, like every other article in the store, ought to be thoroughly understood. When it is, the dealer is able to utilize his selling power with better effect. He can not only increase his sales but at the same time raise the standard of quality —two things to be always desired. They mean better profits and greater satisfaction.

THE SECRET OF ADVERTISING.

"In advertising one must lay the facts before the public in a manner that stimulates thought and mental debate so that people may arrive by the usual educational processes at conclusions of their own, which, being reached by their own reasoning powers, they will regard as irresistible and settled for good and all."

Those who read the article in a recent issue by Henry Johnson, Jr., read the above. It strikes the nail on the head and means a great deal. It certainly is the key note in advertising.

In future arrange your copy in the daily newspaper to bring about the required attention.

MARKING CHARGE CHECKS.

On all charge checks there should invariably appear not only the full name of the person in whose name the account stands, but also the full name of the person who makes the purchase. If the charge customer makes the purchase in person, add on the line below her name, "by self." If the purchaser is some other member of the family, set down the name correctly. Sometimes there are several members of a family who buy on the same charge account, and it is not sufficiently definite to set down "daughter." This is apparently a trivial matter, but it sometimes turns out to be important. Where bills are rendered at intervals of thirty days, and are not always paid promptly, the customer may easily forget one among many purchases. It is, therefore, just as well, for the store's protection, to be able to state positively by whom the purchase was made.

NEITHER HERDING NOR HOUNDING.

The daily and weekly newspapers throughout the country are taking up more enthusiastically than ever before the work of developing a greater loyalty in the matter of home trading. It has been discovered that considerable patronage goes to the mail order house by the business man himself, and that on different sides the attitude assumed is that it is a poor melon that isn't ripe on both sides. In other words, a man in one line of business has to complain of mail order trade, though he patronize it himself, he has no right to object if men who could use his goods, send away to have their requirements filled. In some towns there seems to have been no attempt at co-operation among merchants to deal with this problem.

WORK PROPOSED FOR BOARDS OF TRADE

If each merchant felt positive in his own mind that there was no business whatever going over his head to mail order houses, a great weight would be removed. True there are many who do not give the catalogue houses in the big centres very many thoughts. They have been able to offer their customers goods of such a value as to persuade them that nowhere else could they secure the same or better for the money.

But in almost every town, village and country community there are heard complaints about money going direct to mail order houses—houses which never pay a cent of taxes in these places—and the merchant is not only losing but the community is becoming weaker.

There are two classes of people affected in most districts. There are the farmers and the townspeople. The question arises how can each class be convinced that it is to its own monetary interests to deal at home? The argument has been put forth that to confer on the question with the farmer he must be met at his institute or club. The labor men similarly could be reached through their unions but what about the remainder of the townspeople?

A prominent agriculturist—one who holds an important position with a provincial government—says that the people in the villages and towns send much more money to the mail order houses than do the farmers.

To stop this drain on the resources of a community which benefits only the big cities, he suggests that the boards of trade take up the matter. By holding public meetings and announcing a subject such as "Why the General Public Should Support Their Home Towns;" "Advantages in Spending Your Money at Home to Yourself and to Your Community," or "How to Make Your Home Town Prosper," the citizens could be taught to buy solely from their local merchants.

Speakers from neighboring towns could be secured to give facts and figures illustrating how money can actually be saved. Statistics could be presented showing localities where mail order house competition had reduced the population, the standing of the community and the value of the property; it could be demonstrated how villages and towns are dwarfed from the present system of sending money out of a community to enrich another a hundred or two hundred miles away.

But the question would have to be treated on a sound business basis. Complaining simply about mail order houses selling lower than local merchants would be of no avail. Figures must be quoted pointing out where catalogue prices are above those of the home merchants, the quality being equal or superior. The on-the-spot service which the catalogue house cannot give could be pointed out. The drifting away of young people and the depreciation of property values are other items to be considered.

By such methods people could be taught that they have been mislead by a few paltry bargains, often on inferior goods handed out as baits; that these bargains are seldom included in catalogues; that one must be in the city in which the house quoting the alleged bargains is situated in order to get them; that they can buy better goods at home at the same or lower prices; that the value of their property is being depreciated by sending out their money; that it is not honest for them to pay the mail order house cash for goods every time and allow their own dealer who takes a personal interest in serving them to wait long periods of time; that these catalogue houses pay no taxes in support of their municipalities; that the great burden of taxes rests on the local merchants and that the local merchants are the nucleus of the community.

When these facts have been driven home by a board of trade anxious to built up the town by not only getting new industries but by circulating more money in it, then a greater prosperity ought surely to follow their efforts.

Their meetings, of course, would be given wide circulation through the daily press but care must be taken that there should be no spirit of "knocking" shown. The matter must be presented in a fair, business-like method—on a dollars and cents basis—so that everyone will be convinced of the sincerity of the agitators in advising people to deal at home.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Spices—Several advances.

Coffee—Prices are higher.

Sugar—Decline of 10c.

Canned Goods—Up 2½c doz.

Toronto, Dec. 1.—There is a feeling among certain Canadian grocery jobbers that the coffee market is not as strong as the daily reports would make it. The opinion is more or less entertained that speculation is behind stories of short crops. The trade is not denying these reports regarding the shortness of crops but they have a feeling that the market is being boosted and the stories inflated beyond their due. However, prices are going up just the same and every day brings confirmatory reports of strength, although of late the market has shown a slight weakness.

Some one has asked the question, "Will there be the usual amount of dried fruit sold this year," and another has been inclined to give a negative answer. The latter states that grocers will have to "sell" their goods this year. That is, they will have to employ more salesmanship on account of the higher prices confronting the fair purchasers.

It is passing among the trade even that there is an "insurgent" feeling among the women who are beginning to think about their Christmas puddings and cakes. The point is mentioned because several who handle raisins have heard, not far from their own hearths, statements that showed a feeling against buying the usual requirement of fruit at present prices.

Canned goods all advanced this week as per schedule and it is well to note that in many cases the wholesalers are above even the new quotations.

Sugar is down again and at the ten cent reduction is considered firm, although there are jobbers who claim that in their opinions the bottom price has not yet been reached.

Sugar.—The decline in the price of sugar announced to the trade on Saturday was not unexpected. The drop this time was ten cents. At the present figure the market is generally considered steady but jobbers state that the bottom had not yet been reached. Some of the trade say that the price is now almost at the cost of production and the margin left is not a big one.

Dried Fruits.—Seedless Valencias are easier and also dates. Fresh arrivals of the latter were received this week and no more are expected till about the 15th of December and the price is not likely to be changed then. Prunes are strong and the primary currant market has advanced a shilling recently, showing new strength. A recent letter from Spain in regard to Valencia raisins says growers sell but small quantities thinking they will obtain higher prices later on. The trade has fallen off somewhat but it is generally admitted that many markets have not yet taken anything like their usual supplies. Some jobbers held off not wishing to take a chance of being caught by the high opening prices.

Coffee.—Prices have been climbing of late and the firmness in the market is unweakened. True, there has been a slight falling off to the extent of a few points, but following the strength that has been manifested up to the present this is not expected to have any effect in stopping the upward movement. It will be noted that prices show a big advance on those that were quoted a few months ago and it is fully believed that under present conditions the upward movement is likely to continue.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS.—

Refined Sugar.—Decline of 10c.

Canned Salmon.—Increase 2½c from 1st Dec.

Canned Strawberries.—Increase.

Montreal, Dec. 1.—The coffee markets still command close attention. The advance has been no more radical than was anticipated, and many believe that the top has not been reached yet, and, therefore, many smaller dealers will be forced from business.

With the demand for sugar limited last week, and the U. S. and European markets so unsettled, the decrease in refined sugar was no more than was expected.

From the 1st December there will be a rise of 2½c per dozen in all canned goods. The demand for these lines is so unusually strong that jobbers do not expect this increase to have much effect on the present satisfactory conditions.

Sugar.—A weaker feeling developed in the local market for refined sugar this week, and prices for all grades declined 10c per 100 lbs. The demand of late has been limited, and this, combined with the unsettled nature of the U. S. and European markets, were probably the reasons for the reduction.

Dried Fruits.—Advices received recently from San Francisco and other packing points in California reflected a strong feeling in the market for prunes. At this period of the year, sellers gradually make concessions to secure orders, but this year orders are hunting them, and it looks as if there will be a rise in prices before the spring sets in.

California seeded raisins remain dull, and the market has an easy tone.

Currants are in fair demand, and the tone of the market is firm.

Dates are strongly inquired after, and spot stocks are clearing up. The cargo of the "Bantu" is going off with a bang, and quite a little business is being done.

Tea.—The end of November marks the close of the fall season, and is regarded as one of the dullest of the year; yet business is a trifle better than usual.

Ceylon greens are about exhausted, and it is not likely that there will be any more shipments until the New Year, as prices on the other side are so high.

The market for Japans remains unchanged. Although a steady demand is reported, there is a tendency to more or less neglect tea, and pay more attention to Xmas goods.

Coffee—Coffee prices are unchanged this week. In spite of the recent heavy advances many spot men are telling their customers that they expect still higher prices in the near future. Brazil is as stiff as ever, and no concessions on any grades or character of coffee are likely to be made. The growing crop is short, and as the crops in Brazil and at European points are held in strong hands, dealers can afford to wait for higher prices.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS.—

Valencia Raisins—Lower.

Peel.—Stocks out.

Beans—Reduced.

Coffee—Advanced.

Winnipeg, Dec. 1.—The demand everywhere continues excellent for the complete range of grocery lines, in fact there is an enormous rush for a great many more lines than are reported here. A few weeks ago there was some fear entertained among the local jobbers and wholesalers that the retailers were not going to come up to the mark in their holiday ordering. Notwithstanding this fact, however, wholesalers stocked heavily in a general line, and were prepared for whatever trade might come. It was for this reason perhaps why they were anxious that their large stocks should move off. At the present time, however, there is no anxiety among the local jobbers that the demand will not be large, but there is anxiety that they will not have enough of certain goods to satisfy the demand.

The dried fruits that are rather short on the market are particularly, prunes, peel, shelled walnuts and apricots. It may be that the retail trade generally is well stocked with these lines, but it will be almost impossible to fill large orders from this city during the next few weeks.

There are some weaknesses and reductions noted this week, due to the large crops in the lines so affected.

Sugar—Still another decline in sugar is recorded. This was announced on Saturday morning, and was in keeping with the general tone of the raw market.

Foreign Dried Fruits—Valencia raisins are a little lower. This weakness is what was expected several weeks ago, before the goods came on the market. It was believed at the time by local buyers that the price was inflated, and strictly accurate information regarding the crop was not furnished. Consequently the buyers held off, and the prices had to weaken somewhat. Prunes are scarce on the market, and prices are on the firm side. The output has been large, and the demand continues. Currants are also higher, as natural at this time of the year. Apricots are firm. The ordering for peel is extremely heavy, the price is high, and stocks are low here.

Syrup and Molasses—The market continues weak, and local buyers do not look for any advance soon. Some reports came in that an advance was to be made, but were unfounded. At the present condition of the syrup market if advances are made, it will be due to the manipulation of the market, as the cane crop is heavy, and there are lots of goods to supply the world market and leave the quotation at the figures quoted below for Western Canada.

The molasses market was never better, and jobbers only wish that the demand would continue for a longer period of the year.

Beans. — There is a large stock of beans, both in crop centres and in the West. The demand has not been up to the mark but it is expected to improve after the New Year. As result of the present condition, prices have gone down 5 cents. Jobbers claim that the commodity is popular with the dealers, and anticipate a better showing within six weeks. For this reason it is expected that the prices will not go lower.

TORONTO.—An advance of 2½ cents on canned goods occurred automatically this week on all canned fruits, vegetables and some canned salmon. Thursday, Dec. 1st, was the day announced early in the season by the canners for the advance, as has previously been pointed out several times by The Grocer. However, the wholesalers, who now hold practically all if not all of the canned goods in the country, are bound by no list of prices, although, of course, they are not supposed to sell below the minimum figures. There may be some line in which there was an abundant supply in which there is a general price but this kind is few.

The canners state that they are sold out of beans, carrots, corn, corn on the cob, peas, gallon pumpkins, spinach, tomatoes and apples, blueberries, cherries, currants, gooseberries, raspberries, rhubarb, and strawberries. Outside of these 'few' lines, the canners may have some supplies but this is doubtful. As before stated, the stocks of the goods just enumerated are now in the hands of jobbers and retailers and there are those houses who are looking forward to favorable prices between now and the next strawberry season and in fact even after that. The possession of stocks of these canned goods has made the possessors as independent as little czars and they manifest this independence by quoting prices with the air of "well if you don't like the price you need not buy." This may be overdrawing it to a certain extent but the jobbers themselves admit that they are not at all anxious to sell some lines. One order came from Winnipeg this week for 5,000 cases of tomatoes but after covering the trade 800 cases were all that could be secured. The Independents are also short and the general impression is that canned goods are scarce throughout the country. Gallon apples, for instance, are quoted at several prices. Some say they are getting $3.25, others $3.50 while some say they have not raised their price.

New prices for potted poultry and soups are out and some information in regard to the extent of the pack. The latter shows that only sixty per cent. of the chicken orders will be able to be filled by one factory, only 15 per cent. of turkey and 10 per cent. ducks. But 60 per cent. of potted soup will be delivered. The shortness of the pack is explained in that the canners could not get the stocks they had expected. The fowl were gone when they went for them, someone else having been around beforehand.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Dec. 1.—Potatoes are steadily climbing to the high figures. Locals are quoted at $32 a ton, but it is likely that another week or so will see a higher price. With the potato crop a partial failure in Canada, it will not be so easy to get supplies from eastern Canada, so it is expected that before spring the price will be very high. Ashcrofts are $40, and Chilliwacks, $32. Ashcrofts are not made a feature, as they keep the best, and an effort is being made to sell off the locals. After they are gone the white potatoes are still in good shape and command the best prices.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 1.—The chief feature of interest in the local market this week is another advance in the price of potatoes. Large shipments from Prince Edward Island continue to arrive, but the demand is great. The potatoes on the Island are selling at 35 to 38 cents, the crop is short. Up to to-day potatoes have been selling here at fifty-five cents per bushel, but now they are quoted at sixty cents, and it is predicted that they will go still higher. One Halifax dealer alone has bought up ten thousand bushels and representatives of Montreal firms are buying up up potatoes on the Island. One Montreal firm is said to have secured 30,000 bushels in Aroostook County, Maine. A steamer has been chartered and these potatoes are intended for the Newfoundland market.

Hams are firm at 21 cents, bacon, rolled 16 cents, and bacon sides at 21 cents. Sugar went down again this week 10 cents.

The flour markets are active. Prices are considered low, and the dealers report large sales. One Halifax dealer is reported to have turned over five thousand barrels during the past three months. The stocks on hand are fairly heavy.

Lemons which sold last week at $4 per crate of 420 count, are now quoted at $6. Jamaica oranges repacked are selling at $4.50 per barrel. The quality of the fruit on the market is only fair.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKET.

St. John, Dec. 1,—Ontario flour advanced 20 cents per barrel last week and is now quoted at $5.45 to $5.70. Manitoba is unchanged. Oats advanced 4 cents per bushel. Potatoes have also advanced, the price now being $1.90 to $2 per barrel.

All grades of refined sugar declined 10 cents per hundred pounds on Monday (Nov. 28.) Standard granulated is now $4.75 to $4.85.

Provisions Show Another Decline

Compound and Pure Lards Are Down Again, in Addition to Ham and Bacon—Dealers Are Now Looking for the Bottom of the Slide, and Believe They Have Reached a Basis That Should Hold For Some Time—New Laid Eggs Are Higher, and Also Cheese—Fresh Creamery Butter, Like New Laid Eggs, Is Scarce, and Is Quoted Higher.

There has been a certain amount of activity in the markets during the past week. Cheese shows a slight increase, creamery butter is up also, eggs are decidedly firm especially those that cannot be got, and provisions have reached a lower level.

The stand made by cheese is due to the export enquiries and the trade already transacted. Butter production has of course fallen off considerably and fresh creamery prints, the butter that is in heaviest demand, are in supply. Storage stocks are being used now that the country is not able to furnish the quantity that is generally required.

Eggs have no reason to show a weakness and they are living up to the expectations as t othe scarcity of new-laids and the high prices for the same. The price already reached is appreciable but dealers expect to see it go a little higher before the season of limited supplies is concluded.

Poultry is rather quiet just at present with a steady trade passing. Honey is running along doing a fair business but nothing out of the ordinary.

The further decline in prices of pork products is somewhat of a surprise as it was thought the tendency in this direction had already been retarded in view of so many declines in the past. Those in the trade state that they are unable to arrive at a conclusion as to when a halt in the decline will be called, but they seem to feel that a price has been reached which should at least hold for some time. The live hog market shows no change with the exception of a slight easing off in the Montreal market.

Provisions.—While the price of live hogs has been holding around from $6.65 to $6.75, prices of products have continued slumping. Hams and bacon show lower quotations; both pure and compound lards are lower. The market is bound to hit the bottom of the slide one of these days, but of late it has been acting consistently in the downward direction. Demand is fairly good, and is likely to remain in about that position for the rest of the year.

A Pretty Face
Does it sell goods?

"Chocolate Bordo"

You have probably read that article on "Shop Assistants who Travel on Looks."

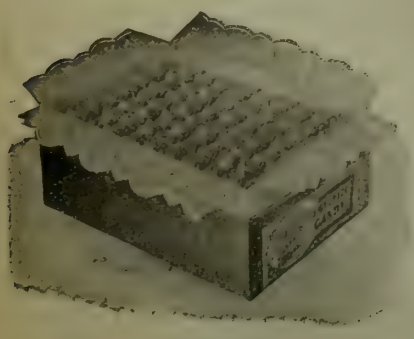
That is a very old fashioned notion isn't it—getting a pretty girl to stand behind your counter and believing she will sell goods because she is pretty. How is she to "pull" trade?

She can attract customers already in the shop, perhaps, but it is the getting in of the Customers that is the real problem. Once get a customer into your store, and the face behind your counter is not going to make a great deal of difference one way or another if you have the goods.

We can tell you how to get hold of a sure means of attracting Customers from the outside of your store to the inside.

Let it be known that you handle Our Chocolate "BORDO" which is becoming a greater attraction every day and which is drawing more people into stores to buy "BORDO" than any other Chocolate ever placed on the market. Then trade will come to you.

We want you to know more about this specialty too; if not already acquainted with it, it will be a good thing for both you and your Customers.



You will find it such a helpful line to have in your confectionery department.

It will pay you to investigate, and get "Bordo" into stock before your competitor gets hold of it.

Send us your enquiry for samples and particulars; it is a pleasure for us to furnish same.

MERCHANTS ELECT OFFICERS.

Three Chatham Grocers on The List—Transient Traders Discussed.

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 1.—The Chatham Retail Merchants' Association held its annual meeting on Tuesday evening, when the following officers were elected:

President.—T. Walter Poile.

First vice-president—Harry A. Andrew.

Second vice-president—W. M. Grant.

Secretary—J. H. Kadwell.

Treasurer—H. G. Hodges.

Auditors—A. D. Westman and John McCorvie.

Members of the grocery trade figure largely in the list of officers, the first vice-president, the secretary and Auditor McCorvie all being grocers. Secretary Kadwell is an English grocer who has been in business here, only a few years.

A vote of thanks was passed to the retiring president, A. D. Westman, for his services during the past two years. Dominion secretary, E. M. Trowern, of the R. M. A. was unable to be present; but an informal discussion was held on transient traders and kindred subjects. Though the association starts the new year with a somewhat smaller membership, on account of the increase in the fee from $2 to $5, it still numbers in its ranks many of the old enthusiasts.

An all-the-year-round Success!

Rolled Oats Have Advanced 15c a Bag

Went up Ten Cents on Monday and Soared Another Five on Wednesday, Making a Total of 15 Cents a Bag—Should Hold At That Figure—Millers are Busy Meeting Cereal Demand—Flour is Normal, With Wheat Market Weak.

In last week's issue it was stated that cereal millers were looking forward to higher prices for rolled oats. On Monday an increase of ten cents a sack was announced, and again on Wednesday another increase of five cents was made known. This was a total advance of 15 cents a bag on the Toronto market. Thus the ground lost some weeks ago was recovered to a certain extent.

The week has been rather uneventful, and from a news standpoint is saved by the movement in rolled oats. Mills have been busy, the demand has been good, but the situation was not entirely satisfactory to the millers. The decline referred to, occurring some weeks ago, is said to have been due to a certain amount of priec cutting. At any rate millers stated previous to the advance that if conditions then existing continued, they would have to advance the price. Since the first increase oats have shown a slight weakness, but not likely sufficient to affect the price of the cereal.

Rolled wheat is in good demand, and mills have been working overtime in many instances. On the whole the business in cereals is quite satisfactory.

Wheat weakened on Saturday when news was received from Argentina that the quantity for export would likely be 100,000,000 bushels instead of 82,000,000, as previously reported. The United States visible supply of wheat this week was 42,485,000 bus. as against 43,320,000 last week, and 29,417,000 bus. for the same week a year ago. The Canadian wheat supply this week was 12,048,000 bus.; last week 12,381,000 bus., and the same week a year ago 10,000,000 bus. On the whole the flour market is rather quiet at present.

The following is a review of the world situation in wheat.

The closing of navigation means an advance in the cost of moving grain to the east. Some of the millers state there is a possibility of an increase in the price of flour, but they do not say so with a positiveness that marked statements previous to the advance in rolled oats.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—The demand in the flour market has been chiefly for small lots to fill actual wants. Prices for all grades are steady, and the volume of business passing is just fair.

Flour.—The market here is quiet. Some expect present prices to rule for a time, others believe the close of navigation will have the effect of strengthening the market, and probably bringing up the price again. At present wheat is inclined to be weak, and the world's review does not suggest firmness.

MARKET BY LAWS VIOLATED.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 30.—The investigation into the affairs of the country market, which was ordered recently by the city council, is still going on. Much evidence has been secured showing some loose methods and violations of the by-laws by grocers and meat dealers of the city. It is anticipated that after the report of the committee is sent to the council, some official heads will fall.

In the police court last week two of the leading grocers and meat dealers were fined ten dollars each for violating the game laws by having partridges for sale.

A MANY LANGUAGED MAN.

The partnership existing between Soskin & Many, general merchants, Welland, Ont., has by mutual consent been dissolved and the business will hereafter be conducted by Mr. Many. The latter when he went to Welland could speak seven languages but he contemplates learning another in order to more intelligently meet the needs of the cosmopolitan population of that town. This is surely a record.

Why Grocers should stock CHRISTIE'S Plum Pudding

THE day of the Home-made Xmas Plum Pudding is past. ¶ Few Housewives now attempt to make one, because they realize that the facilities of the Modern Bakery are far superior to that of the ordinary kitchen. ¶ More than that, the baking of the Home-made Pudding is generally deferred and the Festal Day finds it immature. ¶ The Christie Plum Pudding maintains the high reputation of the Big Canadian Bakers for purity and quality. ¶ Every ingredient entering this pudding is guaranteed to be of the highest quality. ¶ You'll oblige many of your customers by stocking this pudding and its rich, delicious flavor will certainly please them.

Odds and Ends from Here and There

Big Pecan Crop for Texas—No Santos Coffee — California Walnut Crop—Argentine Flour Making Inroads Into West India Market—California Dried Peaches Lower in Price Than Prunes for First Time in History.

The largest pecan crop on record for Ellis County, Texas, will be gathered this fall. The crop grows mostly on wild trees and this year the nuts are larger than usual, and it is stated some of the trees are so heavily loaded they are beginning to break.

A New York grocer, resisting a robber, who had entered his home one night, last week, was struck dead by a blow from a blackjack.

There is no such thing as Santos coffee, strictly speaking, as Santos is only the port through which the coffee is exported.

It is estimated that southern California will produce about 9,000 tons of walnuts this season. More conservative estimates place the crop this year at about 600 tons short of last year, when the total shipments amounted to 9,300 tons.

Trading stamps have practically been ousted from the District of Columbia, U.S.A. The Retail Merchants' Association of Washington has been largely responsible.

The fact that the ladder to success looks long and steep as you see it from a distance need not worry you. You climb it one step at a time, not all at one jump.

Millers of the Argentine recently landed what is claimed to be the first of heavy shipments of flour at Jamaica, W.I. This indicates a new competitor for the West Indian trade which has been divided between Canada and the United States. An agent commenting on the West Indian market says it is a desirable one and that it ought to be possible to enlarge it. The people probably would eat more bread if it were decently made, and were they to become flour eaters they would always be flour buyers, because they never will be wheat growers or millers.

Grocers of Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky, at a meeting held at Evansville, organized a co-operative wholesale house recently, to be known as the Merchants Grocery Co. The company will have $100,000 capital with $50,000 common stock and it is the plan to have fifty retail grocers in the three states, each take $200 in stock. They will have no traveling salesmen and will do a strictly cash business. They are now ready for business.

For the first time in the history of the trade California dried peaches can be secured at a lower figure than that quoted for California prunes.

RETURNED SUGAR.

Shipment of 70,000 lbs. Sent to England is Returned, and Finds no Buyers, Even on This Side.

As touching on the low price of sugar and the prospect of its becoming still lower, there is a condition present in the sugar market to-day which is almost unprecedented in the history of the industry. Granulated sugar shipped from the United States to England several months ago has become a drug on the market there, and is being brought back to the United States and offered at a shade below the current market and a sharp decline below the price paid for it.

All told, 70,000 tons of U. S. refined sugar were shipped to Europe, mostly to England. The very large crop of raw sugar and the general weakness of the sugar situation prevented its sale, and holders are now offering it delivered in New York or Philadelphia at 4.45 cents per pound. It cost over 5 cents per pound, so that the holders stand to make a round loss. Nobody has bought it in this country, however, for several reasons. Our own sugar market is getting pretty low, and the sugar offered from abroad is in 100-lb. bags, and several months old. Nobody knows what condition it is in, and it will take two weeks to find out, by which time currently made sugar may be obtainable for just as little money.

Tea Production and Consumption for Entire World

London (Eng.) Times.

It is difficult to give exact figures as to the amount of tea grown throughout the world, as a great deal is consumed in the countries of production, particularly in China and Japan, where it is grown on small farms and consumed locally, so that it does not appear in any returns. Probably the world's production is about 1,200,000,000 pounds annually, viz.:—China, 600,000,000 pounds; India, 262,000,000 pounds; Ceylon, 191,000,000 pounds; Natal. 2,000,000 pounds; (Japan, 63,000,000 pounds): Java, Formosa, and all other countries, 82,000,000 lbs. Thus 455,000,000 pounds are produced in the British Empire.

It is estimated that 400,000,000 pounds of the tea produced in China is consumed locally and 200,000,000 pounds exported. Of the 63,000,000 pounds produced in Japan, 26,000,000 pounds are consumed in that country. The greater part of the Japanese tea exported goes to the United States. The Japanese are not taking quietly to the reduction in the foreign consumption of their tea, consequent on the growing popularity of Indian and Ceylon teas. A ten years' campaign has been arranged for the United States, at an annual cost of $80,000, toward which the Government, it is hoped, will give a subsidy of $50,000. There is a possibility that the treaty recently concluded between Russia and Japan may encourage the import of Japan tea into Russia. It is also possible that the treaty, * * * may seriously affect the trade between the United States and Japan. Should that happen, there will be more room for British-grown tea in America, so that India ought to profit, whatever may be the effect of the treaty on the countries most nearly concerned.

At the beginning of the year under consideration (1909-10) there were large stocks of tea in the United States, collected in anticipation of an import tax. These stocks kept imports down for some time; nevertheless, imports reached 104,250,000 pounds, rather less than one-half of which came from Japan and Formosa, nearly a third from China, and the rest from India and Ceylon.

Tea drinking is steadily increasing in South America. Argentina is rapidly becoming a tea-drinking country. On the continent of Europe there is an increasing demand for British-grown tea, instead of that from China. Germany, in spite of her increased duty, has taken more tea during the year. Austrians are said to use a higher average quality of tea than any other people except the Russians. Reports of increased sales also come from France, Holland, Sweden and Norway.

A GOOD MEMORY.

Mrs. Jones's favorite warning to her young progeny when they were in mischief was that she would tend to them in a minute. "Tending" was accomplished by applying her open hand where it would do the most good. When Harry was 4 years old he was sent for the first time round the corner to the grocery. In a few minutes he came trotting soberly back with the nickel still in his hand but no bag of onions.

"What's the matter?" asked his mother.

"I'm 'fraid of the man," he said solemnly.

"Oh, he won't hurt you," reassured Mrs. Jones. "Run along and bring the onions. I'm in a hurry for them."

A second time Harry disappeared round the corner, and a second time returned without the purchase.

"I'm 'fraid of the grocer man," he explained, as before.

"Well, what makes you afraid of him?" demanded his mother impatiently.

"Why," answered the little fellow, "bofe times when I goed in he looked at me and said, "I'll tend to you in a minute!"

Infuse Loyalty into Your Customers

Double Your Sales

Isn't your oldest clerk your most valued clerk, Brother Grocer?

He Is.

Simply because customers have grown to trust him, rely upon him, through years of service.

The store that stocks new faces behind the counter cannot inspire this confidence in the buyer—the slow—ripening fruit of acquaintance extended over many moons.

And this is why YOU are a more valuable asset to your srore than your oldest clerk.

Why your oldest clerk is worth so much more than the raw recruit.

This, in short, is the only reason why he sells more—because his recommendation carries more weight, you see.

If you were to define "Goodwill," it would be an explanation of what we now say to you.

If this be true of your help, Brother Grocer, then it is likewise true of your goods.

And this fits FIVE ROSES like a glove.

Because it is established in the confidence of customers for almost a quarter century.

It has been a good worker for the wise dealers, Brother Grocer.

And every barrel sold has strengthened the satisfaction—impressed the brand and the name of the seller deeper and deeper in the affection of your custom.

FIVE ROSES has been the flour with which new bride-cooks have acquired their training—grown expert in domestic economy—it has been the partner of their most signal successes.

It is associated with success, don't you see.

It has been reliable, trustworthy, unfailing—FIVE ROSES has always been "there with the goods."

Therefore it has prevented "the lost sale"—making customers enthusiastic, making them self-sellers—it has made them LOYAL.

Which is everything in retailing, Brother Grocer.

If you sell FIVE ROSES, then you know this.

If you don't sell FIVE ROSES, don't delay another single day.

Review of Potato Market Conditions

Indications That Seem to Point to Higher Prices Before the Next Crop is Ready—Production is Less Than Last Year—In Most Countries Consumption Has Increased, Hence the Feeling of Strength—Apple Market Has Lost No Ground, and There is Nothing to Indicate That It Will — Oranges and Lemons Easier.

The potato situation is looming up more strongly every week. A big New York dealer is credited with saying, "If I had a million dollars lying around idle, I would put any part of it, or for that matter all of it, in potatoes at present prices, feeling assured that before the middle of February we shall have dollar potatoes."

This dealer supplies figures in connection with this year's crop. In United States, it is, he says, 48,000,000 bushels less than last year. Consumption is also much heavier than last year, and even now the effects of a short crop are beginning to be felt. The Canadian crop is under that of last year, to a considerable extent. The yield in France has been much below the average. Something like 210,000,000 bushels were gathered, as compared with the average of 423,000,000 bushels. The British markets have jumped a dollar a sack in the past two months. Germany is in the same boat with the rest of the short crop crew.

That is one view of the potato market in general. Prices have been advancing on Canadian markets, and are already in some places as high as 90 cents. The market is therefore quite interesting.

France is casting around for a source of supply, and American dealers are receiving enquiries from French houses, who, it is believed, will have to look outside of Europe this year for supplies.

Apples are firm, and if anything show slightly higher prices. The market at present shows nothing that would indicate lower prices.

Oranges are lower in price, and dealers are not wholly satisfied with the quality. A certain amount of fruit not sufficiently ripened has been put on the market, and consumers are not likely to develop a pronounced appetite for oranges if they get many of that kind.

Lemons are also easier in price. The demand is fair. Business on the whole is pretty good, and the weather man could help a whole lot by handing out a better brand of his staples.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—It is not expected that the fruit market, the tone of which is weak at present, will stir till the middle of December, when orders will be more frequent, owing to Xmas and New Year trade. The close of navigation generally marks a short period of inactivity in this market.

Vegetables—With the close of navigation at hand, the vegetable market has been slow. American beans still maintain the exorbitant price of last week. Local supplies of radishes are almost exhausted. Any there are on hand will fetch the price of the Boston grades which are now coming in.

Green Mountain potatoes are in strong demand, while supplies from local farmers fetch 90c a bag.

There is an unusual slackness in the demand for cranberries, and with apples so high, the price of cranberries should also be stiffer than at present.

TORONTO.

Green Fruits.—Oranges slumped during the past week, and are down to a rather low figure. Fruit men in general are not exactly tickled to death with the present state of affairs. It is given by some that a considerable quantity of oranges are not as ripe as they ought to be, and further state that this evil will spend its full force on the shippers themselves. The fruit has been of fairly good color, but the flavor showed a tartness that is not relished by the consumer who looks for ripe fruit. The present season should see a heavy consumption of oranges, but the trade will be soon killed if many consumers receive fruit that is not sufficiently ripened. Tangerine oranges are now bringing the top prices.

Apples are holding a firm position, prices showing an advance over the quotations of a week ago. First quality stocks are bringing top prices.

There is nothing at present to indicate easier prices in the apple situation.

On one day during the week there were 37 cars of oranges on the local tracks, and half of them are said to have been Mexicans.

Vegetables — The potato market is about the same as a week ago. General indications support the opinion that high prices are going to prevail by the time Spring breaks, if not before then. One conservative dealer said he did not know how things might go. "Wait nntil another month has gone," he said, "and I will be able to give you something like an accurate estimate." There have been reports of loss through rot, but whether it has been general or not will be known when the pits are being opened. There is a good demand for the smaller vegetables. While peas and beans are not being imported, they are bringing a big figure across the line.

Fish - Oysters

Advent Trade Brightens Fish Market

Frozen Fish Trade Now Commencing—Strong Demand for All Lines of Fish—Pickled Fish in Good Supply, But Green Cod Becoming Quite Scarce—Trade Activities in Maritime Markets —Bulk Oyster Trade is Decidedly Active.

Fish markets seem to possess a healthy tone. Advent has already shown an influence, and December demand should be heavy. From the Maritime provinces reports verify previous statements regarding a famine of fish among the fishermen of Gloucester, Mass. As a result, dealers from the United States are buying heavily from Canadian firms. The catch in some places has been quite heavy, but from other ports the nets showed rather disappointing returns.

QUEBEC.

Montreal, Nov. 30.—The trade is on the eve of a big turnover—the Advent. This season marks the starting of the frozen fish trade, and with a long spell of cold weather assured, customers are not afraid to buy. At this time of the year there is always much confidence in the trade. Stocks of halibut and lake fish, such as pike, dore, white, are large enough to satisfy the demand.

Ther is still a shortage of salmon, and prices are bound to increase as soon as the demand in earnest has set in.

In the pickled line herrings are in fair supply, while green cod is becoming quite a scarce commodity. After the Advent demand has been satisfied, there will be practically none on hand.

The bulk oyster trade is active. The methods of handling oysters have improved recently, and facilities of communication with the seaport towns have made this article more and more in demand as a foodstuff.

Oysters in the shell are still in good demand, but the rush is over now. Prices are still good, though on the decrease. All considered the season was a good one, prices were a little easier than last year, and demand was satisfactory all along.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax, Nov. 30.—Fish of all kinds are in good demand, and all the markets are firm. There is little improvement in the local situation. Representatives of U. S. firms are still in the Province, and are buying up whole cargoes.

John E. Kehl, the United States Consul at Sydney, N. S., reports that there is a fish famine in the United States, and that the dealers are prepared to handle every pound of fish that they can get hold of in Nova Scotia. Fewer fish are being shipped from the Eastern part of the Province to the United States than ever before. Most of the fish caught on the east coast are now sent direct to the Upper Canadian market. This trade has increased enormously during the past few years.

The total catch of the Lunenbury bank fleet this season is 209,205 quintals, the largest on record. There were 93 vessels engaged, and there average catch was 2,051 quintals.

All fish prices are firm. Halibut is selling at 17 cents per pound, retail.

ONTARIO.

Toronto, Nov. 30.—Demand for all lines of fish is good, and dealers are busy handling heavy stocks. The present month is expected to increase the general demand, as Advent is a special season, something similar to Lent. Retailers should take advantage of this fact and push fish lines among their customers, and especially among those who observe the season. Oysters are in good demand, and fish on the whole are moving satisfactorily.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

St. John's, Nov. 30.—Some private news intimates that cod oil in hardwood casks has been bought by one firm for $120. It has been going up rapidly, and some firms as well as individuals are doing a little speculating. They anticipate higher prices. Fish are also going up on account of news of smaller catches than expected on the Newfoundland shore. A few Boston firms have been buying up fresh fish at 3 cents per pound, and one has purchased already 3,000,000 pounds.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 30. — The supply of fish has not been good for a couple of weeks past, but at this time of year the demand is generally better than the supply. The halibut boats have come in, but only with an average of 75,000 pounds each, which is a low quantity. This, too, after trips of twenty days and over, when fourteen days is the usual time. There is no change in prices.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

St. John, Nov. 30.—Fish are not over plentiful here yet. There is still a big demand from the west, and that keeps the price up for the local market. Haddock and cod are coming fairly good, and a few smelts have been received from the north shore. A few chicken halibut are also being taken in the trawls. In frozen fish, mackerel and salmon are still on the market.

The sardine season closes December 1 and after that time the fishermen will not be allowed to catch the little fish, nor will the canners be allowed to operate. The lobster season opens in Nova Scotia December 15, and in New Brunswick January 6. The Nova Scotia fishermen are permitted to catch lobsters 9 inches or over, but in St. John and Charlotte counties, in New Brunswick, they are restricted to 10½ inches as a minimum.

The scarcity of sardines has resulted in inflating the price. A catch of fifteen hogsheads made at Letang last week netted the owner $32 per hogshead, or $480 from one turn of the tide. It is estimated that the codfish catch in Nova Scotia this year will be 260,000 qtls., against 170,000 last year.

MANITOBA.

Winnipeg, Nov. 30. — There are no fresh fish moving just now, and a good trade is going on in frozen and smoked. Frozen whitefish and smoked haddies are popular, and these with oysters, form the bulk of the trade at present.

Mailing List from Telephone Directory

Method Used by Firm Which Sends Out 500 Letters to Customers and Probables Every Week—In These Letters Names of Goods and Their Prices are Made Prominent—A Sample Circular.

Toronto, Nov. 30—F. Simpson & Sons, Yonge street, make use of a mailing list and circular letter as a medium of reaching customers and prospective customers and thereby of increasing their selling power.

Mr. Simpson the senior member of the firm stated that they had adopted this system about two years ago, or more. While, like many other advertising schemes it was difficult to tell just how successful it had been owing to the fact that results are often not as apparent as the advertiser would wish, still he was inclined to believe that it was one profitable method. Advertising may be carried on in many ways and this plan he considered as part of a campaign. If the proofs of the merit of the different forms of advertising are not as apparent as they might be, still personal experience assured the advertiser of the wishes of his campaign.

Simpson & Sons send out their letters weekly to about five hundred homes, including those of prospective customers as well as those who are actually dealing with them. Different lines of goods are referred to and the letters are aimed to be bright and newsy to the housewife. The ordinary letterhead paper of the firm is used and the letters are delivered through the mails.

The following gives an example of one of these weekly letters.

Dear Madam,—

GRAPE FRUIT.

The quality is improving and from now on will be much sweeter. This week we offer two very special lines of finest Florida fruit.

Medium Size.—80c per dozen.
Large Size.—$1.35 per dozen.

GREEN VEGETABLES.

With colder weather there will be an increased demand for these goods. We carry the largest and freshest stock in town.

French Artichokes, 25c each.
Brussel Sprouts, 15c measure.
Endive, 2 heads for 25c.
Hothouse Tomatoes, 30c lb.
Green Peppers, 25c per dozen.
Boston Head Lettuce, 10c head.
Cauliflowers, 10c and 15c.

BUTTER.

Although butter has increased in value we are still offering our five pound crocks of finest creamery butter for table use at 30c per pound.

GROCERY SPECIALS.

Canned Tomatoes. $1.40 per dozen.
French Peas, finest quality, reg. 25c, for $2.40 dozen.
Jelly Powders for 90c per dozen.
Belgium Peas, fine flavor, $1.45 per dozen.

FISH SPECIALS.

For Friday,—Haddock, 10c lb.
Salmon Trout, 13c lb. also
Niagara white fish, halibut, sea salmon, cod, soles, Finnan Haddie, oysters, scollops, shrimps.
Blue points, shell oysters on ice 30c dozen.

FLOWERS.

We have two good selling specials this week in our flower department. All fresh A1 flowers.

Mums, yellow, pink, red and white at $1.25 per dozen.
Carnations, finest, 50c per dozen.

F. SIMPSON & SONS.
Mailing List.

Of course, to send out circular letters a mailing list is required, including the names of customers and those who are only prospects. One of Simpson & Sons' means of securing the latter is by taking names from the telephone directory, changing them from time to time as thought necessary, or placing them as more or less regular customers as the case may be.

Of the manner of printing these circular letters, some have them printed in the regular way. A more common method is by a stenciling process that can be done by a stenographer or bookkeeper. It may be performed quite rapidly as is required when five hundred or more letters are to be sent out.

CALIFORNIA FRUIT SHIPMENTS.

The following table shows the extent of the shipments of California fruit in cars this year as compared with the figures for 1909:

	1909	1910
Cherries	253	250¾
Apricots	207¼	290½
Peaches	2,609¼	2,512¾
Plums	1,477¼	1,556½
Pears	2,607¼	2,361
Grapes	5,481	4,736
Apples	1,842¼	1,897½
Miscellaneous	17¾	16
Add. unsegreg'd	69
Cars	14,564	13,621

It is estimated that the next olive crop in France this year will be only about half a normal crop. Advices say that in some cases a two-third yield will be experienced. If these estimates are correct the coming crop is likely to be larger than that of 1909-10 but much smaller than the bumper crop of 1908-09. The quality promises to be good.

and for the following reasons

We have decided to sell our famous "BEACON BRAND HADDIE" at less than cost price:

We want to increase our haddie sales. We can do this, because we have the finest Finnan Haddie on the market, cured by our own Scotch experts, and this proposition is simply our offer to SHOW YOU that we can make our statement good.

IN NO OTHER WAY can we get so good advertising; and at the same time PUT MONEY INTO YOUR POCKET, than by selling for one week at less than cost and charge the immediate loss to advertising.

YOU ARE THE JUDGE. Each fish is guaranteed, and bears our stamp illustrated above. We want a trial order, to CONVINCE YOU AND YOUR CUSTOMERS.

You sell haddie now, but better haddie means more sales, and more sales bigger profits.

DON'T BE MERELY A FOLLOWER. We are making a very sincere advertising offer, which bids fair to be very profitable to BOTH OF US. Don't wait merely to see what others do. TRY THIS BRAND, We have every confidence, because since we first put this Haddie on the market our increase in sales has been wonderful.

REMEMBER—for one week only at the reduced price.

Nine Medals of this Design for Constructive Salesmanship

Three gold, three silver and three bronze medals will be given by The Canadian Grocer to retail dealers for the best examples of CONSTRUCTIVE SALESMANSHIP.

CONSTRUCTIVE SALESMANSHIP embraces everything legitimate which a merchant may use in introducing new goods, selling staples, raising the standard of these staples and holding and gaining trade. It may include personal conversation, advertising, window dressing, interior display, instruction of clerks, methods for introducing new goods, buying, selling, bookkeeping, store fixtures, store equipment and arrangement, delivery, telephone and other service, recommendation of goods, facilities for handling customers, knowledge of goods, etc.

On the assembling of these various selling forces, a number of them or others, depends the success of the dealer.

Let us have your methods. Any efforts on your part will make you a better merchant, because you will be brought face to face with your system of increasing your trade and your profits.

ACTION AGAINST SUGAR "TRUST"

The United States government has begun an action against the American Sugar Refining Co. and 29 other corporations which are alleged to be a trust contrary to the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. The petition filed charges that the sugar trust is an illegal combination in restraint of trade. The above company through its counsel has issued a statement denying that such is the case, stating that it has no monopoly on the sugar industry; that it produces no raw sugar; that it has no agreements with other companies and that it controls, including its beet sugar interests, only about 51 per cent. of the country's trade.

It is estimated that the suit will be of at least of two years' duration.

TRADE NOTES.

Joseph Boudreau has opened a grocery store on the site of the former stand, in Campbellton, N.B. Mr. Boudreau was burned out in the fire of July last, which swept the entire town. He started rebuilding immediately afterwards.

The police raided the retail store of Placide Richard, Moncton, N.B., recently and seized several bottles of brandy. As a consequence a complaint has been laid under the Canada Temperance Act.

A TROUBLESOME PROBLEM.

That the question of debt collecting is the source of great trouble everywhere is borne out by the resolution raised by the grocers of Portsmouth, Va. A news despatch says: "At the regular weekly meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association last night the secretary was instructed to proceed with the procuring of information in regard to establishing a credit bureau. The habit of some manufacturers in selling direct to the retail trade instead of through the jobbers was also discussed at some length and it was shown that the association could put a stop to the practice when thoroughly organized."

ST. CATHARINES, - ONTARIO

If you were a manufacturer of wooden shingles would you advertise in The Canadian Grocer?

The chances are you would not, and you'll be surprised to know that such a manufacturer did use space in this paper and got excellent results.

Because of this, we do not argue that ordinarily The Grocer would be a good advertising medium for this particular purpose, but the incident serves to emphasize an important point—the thoroughness of our circulation.

Only a very small number of general stores in all of Canada could possibly be interested in handling wooden shingles, yet The Grocer sought them out and established communication at once between buyer and seller.

The advertisement quoted specific price inducements, and that accounts for the direct results obtained.

The space used was only one-inch single column, on a page with eight other advertisements. And this emphasizes another important point—the thoroughness with which The Grocer is read.

In justice to ourselves, we wish to say that when the shingle advertisement came in we withheld it until assured by the manufacturer that he had good reasons for believing The Grocer a suitable medium.

The Best Proposition!

Looked at any way you please, no line of goods holds out the same inducements to the Grocer as

UPTON'S

Jams, Jellies and Marmalade

First they are made from the finest fruits in the world—Canadian Fruits—selected by experts and preserved and bottled in an up-to-date, sanitary factory, which is a model of cleanliness. Second, the "Upton" line never 'sticks,' because our extensive consumer advertising has created a demand for these goods; and third, selling "Upton's" specialties invariably leaves a satisfaction and profit-margin behind that makes trading a pleasure.

Are you featuring "Upton's"? If not, fall in line with the "wise" ones.

Purity Flour will win trade for you

In selling goods there are other things to consider than margin of profit. For instance, there is the satisfaction the customer will derive from the article you sell her.

Of all the lines you have in your store do you know of one that will give the housewife more satisfaction than PURITY Flour?

PURITY FLOUR

When you sell a woman PURITY flour you sell her flour of the highest quality—flour that is of uniform quality—that goes farther in the baking—that makes and delicious pies and cakes. There is nothing more certain than that the woman will be thoroughly satisfied with the PURITY flour you sell her. That she will come back for more is a foregone conclusion. Every barrel or sack of PURITY flour you sell to a woman increases your chances that much more of making her a permanent customer.

"More bread and better bread"

If you will do some serious thinking about PURITY flour you will find other reasons why it will pay you to push PURITY. There's a good margin of profit for you. PURITY flour is heavily advertised and is known by name throughout the Dominion. It is an easy line to push.

Send us an order for PURITY flour and keep a good stock on hand always. You can order it in 7, 14, 24, 49, and 98 pound sacks. Also in barrels and half-barrels.

"QUAKER" BAKED BEANS

Quaker Beans, in the new style of can—3's, family size, in Tomato Sauce or in Chili Sauce at the same price as plain—certainly is a winner. It's a combination of quality and quantity that appeals very strongly to the average housewife. More beans to the can than in 3's flat! In Quaker Brand we use nothing but selected, hand-picked beans, that have been grown right in the neighborhood of our factories.

Scientific processing methods, coupled with extreme care in the selection of all sauces and spices used, make this Quaker Brand unalterably delicious and appetizing.

FREE SOAP DEALS

THERE'S a lot of talk about Free Soap Deals, but we have a proposition that for real, genuine, profitable interest appeals to the grocer more than any.

We are trying to help him. We don't want to over-stock the retailer and then forget him.

Three Special incentives we put before all grocers selling "Canada's Best" Soap, and they are winners. They are:

REBATES—By which the grocer secures, without cost, only by selling our Soap, Cash, or useful articles, like harness, scales, etc.

PREMIUMS—We refer to our "C. B." Premium System, "C. B." Certificate System, and our "C. B." Card System. These are remarkably complete and attractive plans, and different from the usual idea.

PRICE—Our quotations on Soap will interest—surprise you. Just get them and see for yourself.

You don't have to buy to hear all about our unique proposition. Write in, do, and learn all about our plan. Then, let your own good judgment direct you.

When you write ask us for FREE 1911 Calendar. It's a beauty.

THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

have passed a law prohibiting the sale of Green tea that is artificially colored, unless the words "artificially colored" are printed or written plainly on the container, whether it is a paper bag, lead package, tin or other receptacle. All chests or half-chests coming into the country, if containing artificially colored green tea, must be branded plainly as containing such.

It is quite possible that the Dominion Government will enact a similar law.

All green or unfermented teas that are not brown in color are artificially colored.

Why sell artificially colored teas when you can get the finest Green tea in the world—pure and unadulterated—in "SALADA"—far superior to the best Japan teas. "SALADA" Greens are absolutely without coloring matter of any kind. We guarantee satisfaction or you can return your purchase at any time. Instead of buying in large quantities, you can buy a month's supply at a time and there is no loss in interest nor in weight.

An absolutely pure green tea. No coloring matter. No adulteration. Healthful, delicious and cleanly prepared. There will be NO change in the "SALADA" label—the tea NOW satisfies every government requirement.

Prices Should be Named in Every Ad.

So Says Merchant of Long Standing, Who Maintains That the Cry That Competitors Then Know What You Are Doing, Is All Folly—Quality and Information Talks With Regular Prices are the Things That Count—This is Why the Big Dealers Have Been Successful, He Maintains.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Just as you have been paying too much attention to the buying as opposed to the selling end of your business, so also have you overrated the influence of prices in reaching your customers. Yet prices should be fully and freely named in all your ads. when you talk of specific articles. I find that I omitted to name a price in my suggestion for the ad. on uncolored Ceylon tea last week. This was simply an oversight. Price should have been named, plainly though simply, as, say, "Sixty cents a pound." Again, just as you must buy right and yet without devoting all your thought to buying, so you must use the price argument in your ads.; but note that I say USE it—which is very different from abusing it.

Appeal to the Housewife.

"Mother," to whom our ads. may always be most successfully addressed, is always to be interested in any honest, sincere appeal for her attention; and the strongest arguments you can bring to bear on "Mother" are questions of merit, quality and value. When you get down to value you strike price, which is, of course, the measure of value; and "Mother" wants to know about price, every time. In the case of the cranberries I mentioned in one of my suggested ads., you will remember the price was simply mentioned at 16 cents a quart. Others might have cranberries at 12 cents, 10 cents, or any other price, but that would not matter. We had made an appeal, with such description of the goods as would get "Mother's" careful attention; and she is perfectly capable of judging whether your price is justified by the stock. Again if there is some doubt in her mind she is generally willing to give you the benefit of it, and will try the goods on your recommendation, especially if you have hitherto merited her confidence. Again, "Mother" is a very capable housekeeper, and generally has her plans for the day well in hand; yet there are times when she needs a helpful suggestion. Then, if your suggestion is made with due regard to the hints I have given you—and the price named to complete things—she is exceedingly likely to try some of your offerings. What I am trying to bring out is the need of plain price-naming every time you write any advertising suggestion.

An Old Excuse Exploded.

Right here I want to touch on the foolish attitude of some grocers towards this question of naming prices. They will print a good deal of stuff, often exaggerated and fulsome in terms, but carefully sidestep the price. If you ask such a man why he does not name prices, he will tell you that "he is not going to tell his competitors about his business!" Talk about the ostrich and his folly in hiding his head in the sand! No competitor is likely ever to take any interest in the alleged advertising of such a grocer, because the ads. will never attract any particular attention. But suppose the competitor did want to find out about the price on any article in your store, you know he would have no particular trouble about it.

Now then; since he can ascertain your figures any time he wants to, and since your advertising must be good before you get him at all interested, why not tell your 2,000 or 3,000 potential customers, of the "Mother" variety, all about your prices, and get the news to them at least as quickly as it can go to your competitors? Your neighbors—whom you call your competitors, (1) have their own business to attend to; (2) will only pay attention to you if you advertise effectively; and you can well afford to "forget them" if you do advertise effectively, since then their attention will not harm you in the least, but will actually do you good. In proportion as you mind your own business, and they fail to exclusively mind theirs, will your business thrive and prosper.

Devote all your energies to getting close to your customers, and posting them freely and fully, and prosperity will follow, provided only that your efforts are of the right quality. In other words: "Keep thy shop and thy shop will keep thee."

Advertising Different Grades.

Another fallacious notion that prevails in retail grocery advertising is the idea that regular prices will not prove attractive. Thus most grocers name only cut prices, or prices on cheap articles in their ads, when they name prices at all. The bargain stores do this kind of thing continually, as: "76 cents and up." Readers become educated to the true inwardness of this very shortly and comment: "Yes; mostly UP!"

The successful grocery advertiser goes the other way round. He describes a fine article, something he can recommend to his best trade, and then names THE LOWER GRADES. He describes his best and largest Christmas raisins; goes into careful detail about their packing, size, flavor, lusciousness, and the beauty of the clusters, at 45 cents. Then he adds: "And others at 38, 29, 24 and 19 cents a cluster. This stimulates interest in his best. It also indicates that he is up at the front in stock, ready for the best trade. Lastly, it indicates that he is just as fully prepared for the buyer of moderate means and simple requirements, and thus is freed from the possible imputation that he only carries high-priced goods.

Best to Name Regular Prices.

Special prices have their uses. I shall take up that phase of the question next week. But it may be said as a general rule for advertising guidance, that your best and strongest hold lies in simply naming your regular prices on every article you advertise. The best stores throughout the country, such as Barron, Toronto; Fraser, Viger & Co., Montreal; Peebles, Cincinnati; Jevne, Los Angeles and Chicago; Finley Acker, Philadelphia, almost uniformly and invariably talk quality and sell at their regular prices.

The theory is that the reader wants INFORMATION, the fullest information regarding your goods, which information includes the price she will have to pay for a given line of articles, and that such information is all that practically all of your desirable customers want. This plan tends to eliminate the price-question from the readers' consideration and leads them to prefer you to others on some other account. It raises the plane of your consideration from that of comparative prices to that of service, promptness, pleasing address, individual preference of your way of doing things over a less acceptable way your neighbor does them. This plan makes it a question of merchandising, instead of bargain giving; and you have but to look around you to note how successful the plan is. For you will see that the so-called "exclusive" stores, bidding for the best trade, prosper much more generally than the average who preach only price.

DIDN'T GET THE ORDER.

What grocerymen have sometimes to put up with in the smaller towns in the West was illustrated recently in an interior place. A woman went in to a clerk with quite a long list of articles, and asked the prices, which he obligingly marked opposite each, with the prospect of a good, big order. This not being forthcoming, he ventured to enquire if she intended making some purchases, and was staggered with the reply: "Oh, no, I just got a shipment from a mail order house, and I wanted to figure up how much I gained or lost by it."

W. G. McKinley, Sudbury, Ont., has purchased the grocery business of Geo. Elliott, town clerk.

Methods Employed in Stock-taking

How One Large Dealer Systematizes This Work and Completes a Large Stock in an Afternoon — Takes Stock Twice a Year and Is Always Familiar With His Business Standing—Another Grocer Who Hasn't Taken Stock in Years.

Stock-taking methods vary with different grocers. There is no set rule or rules to follow and in its general idea stock-taking does not appear to possess any intricacies that would puzzle the average grocer. He knows that he must take an inventory of all the goods in his possession valuing them, not at what they were worth when purchased, but what they are worth now.

It is not necessary to mention any reasons why stock-taking should be a regular duty. It really is a fact, however, that some grocers who imagine themselves too busy to attend to this duty have overlooked it for a year or more and one case is known of a large house where, owing to the careless methods of the proprietor, it is quite a long time since he has gone over his entire stock. He really has a store of some pretensions, but there are many others with larger stores who by systematic methods perform their stock-taking duties at least twice a year and in a remarkably short time when once they have undertaken the work. The particular grocer referred to looks over parts of the store with dread when the end of the year approaches and keeps putting off the first step until weeks have passed and likewise all thoughts of taking stock. The result is that he does not exactly know what amount of goods he has on hand. There are, of course some rapid sellers that he is in close touch with, but there are other goods long forgotten stored away here and there. Some of the shelves in the front of the store are presentable, but there are others more removed from the public's eye that are "a fright" to use a common expression. And the stock room is a jumble of goods. This grocer has a large business and seems to be doing well in spite of a half-hearted disposition that manifests itself from time to time.

Takes Stock Twice a Year.

A grocer of the opposite type is known by the writer and his methods must be admired. He goes over his entire stock twice a year, at the end of June and at the end of December. In addition he goes over his fruit, fish and provision stocks at the end of every month. The latter goods move quickly and it is not a difficult matter to take stock in these three departments as frequently as mentioned.

The chief value of this plan lies in the fact that the grocer has a monthly statement of his purchases and his sales, his losses and gains, and he knows exactly what business he has done during the month and can plan for the next month. This grocer considers it a sane method and he not only knows that he has sold his goods, but he knows what profit he has made. He knows what each department has done for him and he can compare it with the business done during that month in past years. His fish department is flourishing and as he does a large business in fruit and provisions, the three constitute a considerable portion of his total business. It is therefore desirable and satisfactory to have an intimate knowledge of exactly what he is doing in these lines.

Weight of Bins Marked.

His method of taking stock in the store proper is quite simple. The bins and drawers which contain goods are taken out and weighed separately. On the inside of each bin the tare is marked and it is but a simple question in subtraction to find the exact weight of the goods. Of course before this simplified method could be arranged each of the bins had to be weighed at one time and the one operation served for the future.

In regard to canned goods, bottled goods, etc., one clerk goes along the shelves, counters and show cases counting them. He calls them off to another clerk who enters them upon separate sheets. If the second clerk does not know the cost price, he writes down the brand, and from this the cost can be obtained afterwards from the invoice. In any event the brands are always required as the proprietor then knows exactly what lines he has on hand and the quantity of each.

Canned goods are put on one sheet, olives on another, jams on another and so on. The result is that when these are entered in the regular stock-book after the inventory is completed they are all together and in concrete form. The quantity of the goods is given, the present price and the total cost. An afternoon is chosen when business is expected to be at a minimum and a certain portion of the store is alloted to two clerks, another part to two others and although the store is spacious and a heavy stock is carried the entire work is completed in one afternoon. Between three and four hours are generally required.

The store room next requires attention and this is often more arduous than the store proper. However, the method is the same and when the inventory has been completed, there remains but the clerical work of entering the facts in the stock book.

Comparisons Easily Made.

This grocer states that going over his entire stock in this manner twice a year enables him to keep a fairly close tab on his business. From his invoices he knows the amount of goods bought and the amount paid for them. From his past stock-taking he finds out what he then had on hand. From the recent stock-taking he knows the extent of his present stock and can readily find out the amount of the goods he handled during the half year. This he can compare with similar seasons in the past.

If he wants to know exactly where he stands financially, stock-taking is a necessity. It enables him to find out the cost of doing business and is in fact an important link in the present-day business chain. His selling power is increased because he knows what he has on hand.

FILLING SPECIALTY ORDERS.

Free Discussion Between Manufacturer and Jobber.

Chicago, Dec. 8.—Some plain talk was handed out by both manufacturers and jobbers in a frank discussion on Specialty Orders at a meeting here recently. Andrew Ross was one of the speakers on behalf of the manufacturer and B. M'Gleason for the jobber.

Answering the question, why specialty orders should be filled by the jobber promptly, Mr. Ross said there were scores of reasons. "First of all," he said, "because they are profitable—or can be made so if a manufacturer has failed to provide profits. Because if the jobber wishes to act as the manufacturers' distributer he must give satisfaction or he'll lose his job. Because they are more salable, more readily disposed of, give better satisfaction, pay a larger return in a given period of time than the common commodity which is unidentified, unadvertised and slow selling. Because they promise a steady and repeated and ever profitable source of revenue; because the jobber gets not only the fruitage of his own salesmen's efforts, but the co-operation of highly trained—sometimes over-zealous, I admit—specialty salesmen, and above all—because they are what the public wants. If there are evils attendant on their sale, study the causes and in the great majority of cases they will be found not in the "specialty" but in the unfairness of one or the other of the trade factors handling it."

To Mr. M'Glasson was given the question, "Does it pay to handle specialty orders?" Mr. M'Glasson in his introduction took up the subject of some manufacturers selling parts of their goods direct to retailers, manufacturers subsidizing wholesaler's salesmen, free deals and a fair profit.

Mr. M'Glasson's opinion was that unless the manufacturer sold all of his goods through the wholesalers the latter will surely feel that it does not pay to handle the specialty orders of that manufacturer. He quoted resolutions of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association in support of all his statements.

"The solving of this problem," concluded Mr. M'Glasson, "is mostly in the hands of the manufacturer. If the wholesale grocers are given a reasonable profit commensurate with the capital invested, labor, credit risk and cost of filling and delivering the order, you would take away the necessity and kill the desire of the wholesale grocers to sell specialties under house brands."

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

Some Christmas Novelties—Selling Decorated Fancy Baskets Filled With Fruits as Holiday Gifts—A Rolled Oats Window—General Delivery Being Tried Out in Goderich—Quebec Grocer Cleans His Store up for the Coming Trade—Talk of Co-operative Store in St. Thomas.

Burning Candles in the Cake.

Winnipeg, Dec. 8.—That the public demands something new around Christmas time, is recognized by a local dealer who will offer this year an iced Christmas cake decorated with candles.

"A handsomely decorated cake with candles burning add to the attractiveness of the Christmas dinner," he says.

So he has arranged to have 12 candles in holders in some of the cakes he will sell, the candles representing the twelve months of the year. They may represent the number of members of the family, the absent ones, etc.

He will supply candles of a red, pink, white, green, or yellow color, according to order.

A Rolled Oats Window.

Havelock, Ont., Dec. 8.—A simply constructed rolled-oats window in the store of W. J. Bryans a few days ago not only attracted a good deal of attention, but created some favorable business.

On blue paper on the floor and to the front of the window the words ROLLED OATS were spelled out in rolled oats. Back of that on opposite sides of the window were two pyramids of rolled oats and between the two a pan of oats in the raw state; on either side of this pan was an attractive show card. To the rear of this again and in the centre was a pyramid pile of package rolled oats, flanked with a full sack of them. In front of the sacks was placed a recipe book on the various kinds of cakes made from this product.

The window was dressed by Wm. Bryans, son of W. J. Bryans, and he states that it brought in considerable new business. Results were quite direct.

Fruit Baskets as Gifts.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 8.—A local dealer finds that an attractive basket filled with choice fruit and bon-bons sells readily as a Christmas present. The basket must of course be above the ordinary market basket; it can be adorned with paper decorations and a piece of ribbon so that attention is sure to be directed to it.

Fruit such as oranges, apples, Malaga grapes, Malaga raisins, etc., with a bunch of holly displayed among them would be an acceptable gift for anyone. Baskets ranging in price from 50 cents to $5 are readily sold.

General Delivery in Goderich.

Goderich, Ont., Dec. 8.—Goderich merchants are giving at least a trial to a system of general delivery being promoted by R. W. Wallace, of Simcoe, who has similar systems working in that town and Ingersoll, Tillsonburg and Orillia. In St. Marys it is also working well. Nearly all the merchants here are expected to go into it sooner or later. Horses and rigs are used, not motor delivery wagons. The system went into operation here on Monday, Nov. 28, prior to which time customers were requested through the press and handbills to order goods in accordance with the plan of deliveries at 9 and 11 a.m., 3 and 5 p.m., and Saturday evenings at 9 o'clock.

Four rigs are in use although on Saturday some of the grocers used their own as well.

December House-cleaning.

Quebec, Dec. 8.—"At the beginning of each December we undertake a general house-cleaning campaign," says a local grocer. "All the goods are removed from the shelves, which are washed, the spice, tea and sugar receptacles are emptied and carefully dusted, and all goods replaced where they will be of easy access. All canned fish for instance are arranged on the same shelf, baking powder on another and so on. All goods of the same variety such as bottled goods are placed in one section. This prevents waste of time in serving customers and enhances the appearance of the shelves."

Not only are the shelves re-arranged, but the housecleaning in this store is carried into the windows and, in fact, into every corner of the store. Water, scrubbing brushes, soap and cleaning powder are freely used.

In the centre of the store is placed a silent salesman 6x2x2 feet in dimensions in which samples of olive oil, catsup, pickles, sardines, mustard, jams, and marmalade are displayed. Other salesmen at Christmas time display prominently confectionery, essences and peels, and cigars.

No Loss From Bacon Ends.

Toronto, Dec. 8.—Getting rid of the ends of bacon has for a long time been a "bogey-man" among grocers.

A Toronto dealer uses a method to obviate the loss and on no account will he depart from it. After disposing of a portion of the side of bacon, he refuses to slice any more of it but places the whole piece on sale at a slightly reduced price, making sure of course that he gets his profit.

The other day a customer wanted a pound of bacon off a piece that was laid aside for sale as it was, but the manager of the store refused to grant his request. The whole piece or none of it had to be bought so the customer left without any.

To Start Business on $1,000.

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 8.—There is considerable talk of forming a Co-operative Association here, but whether it will amount to anything or not is a question.

"Those behind the scheme," said a St. Thomas grocer, "say that all they need is $1,000 to start it going. They claim that they have secured legislation in their favor which will make the plan a success, while as a matter of fact this is a misrepresentation for no legislation has been passed to my knowledge that will benefit them in any way.

"Of what use anyway is $1,000 in starting a grocery business," he wanted to know. "Why when they purchase scales and fixtures, rent a place of business and lay in a stock, how much will they have left? They talk of getting an experienced man to manage the business until one of their own has been trained in. How much will such a manager teach an assistant when he knows that in a few months time he will get fired?

"It seems to me that if such a society is formed here those taking stock in it will regret it before a year has passed; it will only fail like the majority of the others have done and in the meantime we merchants who make the town have to suffer."

WINTER FREIGHT RATE CHANGES.

Charges Go Up When Navigation Closes In the Autumn.

Toronto, Dec. 8.—With the close of navigation, the Canadian railways have resumed their winter schedule of freight rates between lake and river points east of Toronto. During the navigation season the vessels of several fleets ply between Toronto and eastern ports, and their freight-carrying capacities force the railways touching these points to reduce their rates in competition.

For instance the rate on first-class freight between Toronto and Montreal is in summer 40 cents per 100 lbs. and in winter 44 cents per 100 lbs. The railway companies between these cities have an identical rate and the fact that they eschew "price-cutting" should be significant to grocers who indulge in this method.

The ordinary grocery freight is divided into four classes and the different rates vary by a few cents. Glassware and tea for instance are first-class goods; dried fruits are second, canned goods belong to the third and sugar is a fourth-class article. These are a few examples to illustrate the point. The summer rates between Toronto and Montreal are respectively 40, 35, 30 and 25 cents, and the winter rates are 44, 39, 33 and 28 cents.

It is hardly necessary to mention that the freight to a certain point depends upon the distance. Montreal is chosen in this case merely as an example. From Toronto to western points such as Orillia, Port Arthur, etc., there is no change in rates. The one rate is in force all the year around.

Previous to 1908 the rates from one city to another were in many cases different, going and coming. For instance from Guelph to Toronto was not the same as the rate from Toronto to Guelph. The railway commission in that year placed the rates on a flat basis.

SHORT TALKS TO CLERKS

By An Ex-Clerk

In this article I am talking to clerks. And most of you do need to be told a few plain truths—in a way that will get underneath your skin and make you sit up and take notice.

Somebody has very truly said that all men from the shoulders down are worth about $2 a day. As a mere automaton—a thing of muscle, but lacking brain—no man's earning capacity goes beyond that figure.

Did you ever stop to think that the difference between you with your few dollars a week and the salesman who makes $5,000 to $10,000 a year is the difference between his thinking apparatus and yours?

If you're an intelligent, ambitious clerk you are only in training. You don't expect to be a clerk all your life. You hope some day before long to be in business for yourself.

Are you going to be a fourth-rate grocer, struggling along on about the same or a little more than you could earn as a clerk? Or are you going to be a good, bright, sound business man, with a bright, well-equipped store, and the cash register's cheerful music as a continuous performance?

It's entirely up to you.

The Almighty gave you brains—as many as lots of fellows earning several times your salary—but you've got to help yourself to the extent of using and developing them.

Every day you put off starting to bring out all the powers that lie within yourself is an opportunity lost—a golden opportunity.

You've got brains, you've got self-respect, you've a desire for the good things of life, you want to be somebody in this old world.

Just how far you can climb depends entirely upon yourself—depends upon just how well you grasp the opportunities that lie all round you.

All men from the Shoulder Down are Worth About $2 a Day.

Do you realize that there is a scarcity of good men in every branch of business? Ask the head of any big concern and he'll probably tell you he has a dozen or two positions for which high-grade men are not available.

You have started in a splendid business, and one that will soon be immensely better—for the good man.

Stick to the grocery business—know all there is to know about it—try to be the best grocer in Canada.

Rich rewards await the clerks of to-day who prepare themselves intelligently to become the merchants of to-morrow, and who bring to bear on their work the best that is in them.

The most valuable training you could have is that which you will get through studying your employer's business. Analyze it, pick out its strong and its weak points.

If your employer is successful you can be sure that there are certain definite reasons for it. If he is only fairly successful there are also clearly-defined reasons why he has not climbed higher.

Find out what these reasons are and study them closely. If there are weak spots in the business try to remedy them. Be as careful about the store's welfare as you expect to be about that of your own store.

See that the windows are always well dressed, with goods that are seasonable and profitable. Start out with the idea of making the windows produce real business and lots of it.

And watch the results.

Encourage your fellow clerks to be more familiar with the goods in stock, to develop their ability to sell, to always be as neat as possible themselves and keep the store the same way.

And watch the results.

If your employer needs a cash register or other equipment, encourage him to get it. Modern appliances increase your efficiency, and they generally pay for themselves within a short time.

When these modern appliances are installed, see that they are used so as to bring the maximum benefit to the business.

And again I say, watch the results.

One of the greatest aids to success at the present time is the use of modern equipment and appliances—appliances that obviate worrisome detail, stop leaks, prevent mistakes, minimize the chance of dissatisfying customers and losing their business, enable you to more effectively display your goods, etc.

As a prospective merchant, you should study all the successful methods of buying and selling goods, apply the best of these methods, and——watch the results as you go along.

Tea Manipulation of the Year 1879

Recalled to Mind by Coffee Dealer, Who is Inclined to Believe That the Coffee Market Advances are not Altogether Natural—Tells the Story About How Everybody Loaded up on Tea as the Market was Advancing—There Were Many Failures the Following Year.

Toronto, Dec. 8.—At the present time there is much speculating as to the future of the coffee market.

The questions that arise are these:—Does the alleged crop shortage really exist? Are there coffee manipulators buying up coffee and storing it away for market advances? Are the advances in the coffee market according to supply and demand, or are they unnatural?

The majority of coffee men argue that there is an actual shortage in crops and that the top prices have not yet been reached, while a few are inclined to believe that it is another case of manipulation by rich holders, like the tea manipulators of 1879.

Among those who entertain the latter idea is J. F. Eby, Toronto, who, to a representative of The Grocer the other day, gave his reminiscences of that year when tea soared almost out of sight, following reports of crop failures in China, which then was the chief tea-producing country of the world.

Tumbled Over One Another.

"In 1879 reports were circulated," said Mr. Eby, "that tea was awfully scarce. Supplies kept easing off and easing off until the scarcity was quite noticeable. Everybody came to the conclusion at once that tea was good holding, and they began to tumble over one another to get it.

"Tea that was bought at 18c went all the way up through the twenties and before it reached the retail trade sold for 35c. I remember Young Hysons, which were at 38c when the scare commenced, went up to 65c and 70c.

"Why, I went down to New York several times to buy tea, and I was scarcely back here with the pound samples when I had it all sold at advances of four and five cents. I couldn't get enough; it was always bought up before it arrived in Toronto.

"Brokers, wholesalers, tea dealers and retailers all seemed to go crazy over tea. I know of a deal where one broker bought tea from another through a jobber, each making handsome profits. Prices went up easily a hundred per cent.

The Tune was Changed.

"But in the following spring the big crash came. It was found that the reports of shortages had been absolute misrepresentations. There was lots of tea in China, but how it escaped detection nobody knows. Tea men had been sent through the country to estimate the yield, but so mysteriously had the tea disappeared that the actual conditions were never discovered.

"Neither did anybody know who the real manipulators were. but it was supposed they were large Jewish houses in London and New York—anyway, whoever they were, they made a lot of money.

"As I said, tea began to go down in the spring of 1880, and I guess there were more failures in Canada that year than ever before or since. Almost every retailer in the country was loaded up; some had bought ten times as much tea as they needed, and as prices went down losses on tea began to pile up.

"I knew a tea dealer down in Bowmanville who had evolved from a provision dealer and who was at one time worth $150,000; he failed that year, as did scores of others."

Mr. Eby's recollection of how this dealer forsook the provision trade for tea is interesting.

"One time," he said, "this fellow happened to be driving from Bowmanville to Whitby with a Whitby tea man —a friend of his—and they got talking, of course, about business.

" 'Well, I made $5,000 out of my butter and egg business last year,' remarked the Bowmanville man, with a good deal of pride, 'and I think I have done pretty well.' And so he did, for he had at one time been an ordinary laborer and wasn't even able to write his own nome.

" 'That's nothing,' replied his Whitby friend, 'I made $10,000 out of tea last year, and you know I did all my work in my own little kitchen.'

"This was astonishing to the provision dealer, and set him thinking; eventually he started in the tea business and made a good success."

Is Coffee Being Manipulated?

Mr. Eby was inclined to believe that the present situation in coffee was not altogether unlike the tea market in 1879. He thinks it is not much trouble for some of the big coffee men with $5,000,000 or so lying idle to manipulate the market anyway they cared to.

"You never can tell," he added, "whether those in the deal are the very men who are advising you what to do next and advising you wrong."

Views of Experts on Pure Food Question

College Professor and Government Analyst Talk of Food Adulterations—Suggest Heavy Fines Against Offenders, as Well as Publicity Through the Press — Co-operation Among Analysts and Manufacturers Necessary for Best Results.

Montreal, Dec. 8.—Food Legislation and Food Standardization were the subjects of addresses presented last Friday night by Professor R. T. Mohan, of Queen's University, and A. McGill, chief analyst of the Inland Revenue Department, before the Society of Chemical Industry, Montreal.

The most interesting views given by Mr. Mohan may be briefly summed up thus:—

"Cases of adulteration should go before a judge and referee, and not be dealt with by a jury.

"Food standards should be settled by a commission of scientists. The securing of same is attended with difficulty, as scientists themselves cannot as yet agree as to what is injurious and what is not.

"To eliminate adulteration, co-operation between the government and manufacturer are necessary, as the former must be shown that it is to his own benefit that adulteration should cease.

"A heavy fine should be inflicted on all offenders as well as a public example made of them through the press. When a manufacturer was found guilty of adulteration his name should be published in every newspaper.

"The employment of chemists by manufacturers would certainly cause a reduction in the quantity of waste and spoiled goods. If canned goods spoiled it was due to improper sterilisation, or to the leakage of the can, and that therefore it was not necessary to place the date of canning on the label.

"The system of dating would be advantageous in the case of cold storage products.

"Canada has one of the best cold storage systems in the world.

The Chief Analyst's Views.

Mr. McGill agreed with Mr. Mohan about the giving of publicity to such offences, and recognized that the Government bulletin was not of such service as the big city newspapers, which gave the desired publicity; but the difficulty was to get the country newspapers to publish the details. He thought that steps ought to be taken to awaken them to a sense of their duty.

He remarked that a law against adulteration had been on the statute books for the past thirty years, but yet the practice still prevailed. The cause was not due to ignorance, but rather to lack of authoritative standardisation.

In order to prove that pure food standards could be secured, Mr. McGill spoke of the work done by parliamentary commissions in Britain and other parts of Europe as a treasury of information.

The consensus of opinion among representatives of different manufacturing concerns was that unless a commission including the analysts of the Inland Revenue, the Experimental Farm and Customs, be appointed, and co-operate with manufacturers themselves, no satisfactory standard can be set. By this means plans for discovering deleterious matters used as adulteratives can be arranged, and a satisfactory working system arrived at.

Have Different Ideas as to Their Selling Powers

"That was one time I said just what I wanted to, and I don't care if I never see that grocer again," said a traveler this week, and his opinion of the trade in general as the result of that encounter was none too complimentary. This traveler is a specialty salesman, and when introducing his article, which bears a recognized quality reputation, he visited a town one day in which two grocers had their stores on opposite corners. One of these had a bright-looking store, with every outward sign of prosperity. The interior was just as bright, and when told that he could make a profit of fifty per cent. on the article he was selling, the grocer replied that he would try a few of them. "If one can make that profit it is well worth a little extra work to sell the article," he said.

Across the way, the general appearance betokened a careless and not a business-like grocer. The store looked even worse by comparison with the other on the opposite corner. "No, I can't handle your goods," said grocer No. 2, "there is no demand for them around here, and I don't want them. Why, I don't believe my customers ever heard of that kind of stuff, and, anyway, I don't think they would take to it."

"Well," responded the traveler, "you don't stand to lose anything, and look at the profit you will make. There would be no better paying line in the store. I admit that it is a new idea, but it is a good one, and by a little endeavor on your part you can build up a trade."

The grocer pooh-hooed this idea, said he was too busy to waste time on the proposition, and indicated that he did not want to say anything more on the subject.

The traveler started to go but tried a parting shot.

"It may surprise you to know that Smith almost jumped at the offer to introduce these goods, and he will make them go, too. If you'd get rid of your old fogied ideas, your store might begin to look something like his and you might have as good a business. Good-day." The traveler departed then, and he now believes that it was well he did.

WHAT HAVE YOU DONE?

Have you spoken or written to your M.P. yet about that Co-operative Society question? Do you know that already no less than three co-operative bills have been introduced in the House of Commons? Do you recollect that during the past two years these bills have been defeated by the retail merchants? Have you paper, pen and ink handy? Can you get your M. P. by telephone? Do you think it is wise to wait?

MERCHANTS—BEWARE!

Keep an eye on those promoters who are now in Ontario selling merchants coupons for libraries under the guise of aiding charitable institutions.

This looks mighty like the old trading-stamp idea of by-gone days. Suppose you spend the $25 or $30 on booming your business through advertising, instead of handing it, or 80 per cent. of it, over to these promoters?

Study the scheme carefully when it is presented to you. It may be illegal. Drop us a line as soon as a promoter reaches your town or city, and tell us what you think of the proposition—and beware.

SPECIAL TALKS TO CLERKS.

With this issue is begun a series of articles bearing on the problems affecting the efficiency of the clerk. The writer of these articles has made a close study of this problem and his remarks will necessarily contain much food for thought in the minds of all ambitious salesmen.

Every clerk knows that personal appearance, service, punctuality, knowledge of goods, etc., have all a bearing on his power to sell, and therefore, on his efficiency to his employer; and the more efficient one becomes the more is he worth.

CRANBERRY MARKET UP.

A fruit that has been gradually asserting its importance on the tables of the consuming public of recent years is the cranberry. So much so has this been the case that prices have been on the increase, not on account of any great decrease in the average supply, but because of the heavy demand.

Last week on the Toronto wholesale market cranberries were selling at $8 per barrel; the same fruit this week is quoted at $11. In Montreal the wholesale prices are up to $11 and $12, and from all accounts they are likely to go higher.

This demand has been created largely by the retail trade, who have recognized the future of cranberries, and those who have been educating their customers to use them, are now reaping their just rewards.

A BUNCOED TOWN.

Lindsay, Ont., has recently had an experience which should put business men in all parts of Canada on their guard.

A short time ago a bright young fellow made his appearance in the town, announcing he was representing a Cleveland firm that proposed locating a branch factory in Lindsay, employing 300 hands.

He was a welcome guest and the city council and the Board of Trade naturally did all they could to assure the location of the proposed factory in Lindsay. A site was selected, and the representative of the alleged Cleveland firm was even able to draw a few hundred dollars from two of the local banks. But this was followed by the withdrawal of Mr. Promoter from Lindsay.

The business and financial men of Lindsay now realize that they have been buncoed and have called in the police.

Canada is just now a particularly good camping ground for the alleged industrial promoter. There is probably no country in the world more so. The ambition of her people to excel as manufacturers is commensurate with the rapidity of her general growth. It is characteristic of every village, town and city in the country. The crooked promoter, therefore, finds his ground already prepared for him when he appears. But the experience of Lindsay will be avoided if his bona fides are ascertained before the community takes him to its heart.

INJURING A MAN'S BUSINESS.

It seems strange that politicians will sometimes stoop to dishonorable methods to gain a little bit of temporary notoriety and power. How often do we hear of black-mailing stories on the eve of elections! Stories that have little or no foundation are put forward as actual facts; and those who use them to attain their end almost invariably take no trouble to investigate.

A case in point comes from the Old Country, the sequel to which has recently been published. Last January, when the British elections were in progress, a story was circulated against the qua'ity of the rations supplied by Maconochie Bros., of London. to the soldiers in the South African war, the reason being that a member of the firm was a candidate for the British House of Commons, and a political opponent of those in league against him. This story was circulated through the press for merely political purposes.

A libel suit was instituted and judgment given in favor of the plaintiffs. The papers which previously had given publicity to the false statements were compelled to retract as well as to pay plaintiff's costs.

CHRISTMAS OPENS THE WAY.

Since Christmas comes but once a year, every dealer should be moved to make the most of it. The public has been trained to expect something new at this season. Farmers and their wives come to town and look for novelties. The townspeople watch the daily papers for advertisements and the windows for things out of the ordinary; as a general rule they all unloose their purse-strings and buy the best of goods.

Aim to sell them something beyond the ordinary stereotyped sugar, dried fruits, nuts and candy. Introduce goods they never saw before, but that bear a recognized quality and incidentally which carry a fair profit. If you can do this, you will have laid the foundation for a demand for these extra goods during 1911—one which will gradually increase and which will in no way interfere with the ordinary, every-day purchases of your customers.

By developing your selling power in this manner, you increase your turnover during 1911, and make better profits. The Chrustmas festive season opens the way for the introduction of new, high-class goods and therefore every advantage ought to be taken of it.

Markets – Strength Well Maintained

Dried Fruits, Nuts, Spices, Coffee and General Market Show Strength—Sugar is a Weak and Uncertain Staple Just Now, But the Whole Situation Seems to be Satisfactory—Canned Goods Continue Firm and Evaporated Apples are up a Little—Rush for Christmas Goods is Subsiding in Wholesale District.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Some look for drop.
Evaporated Apples—Up ½ cent.
Spices—Very firm.

Toronto, Dec. 8th.—Coming events cast their shadows before them, and already Christmas is abroad among the wholesale grocers, the rush is practically over for them. There is still a fair demand, but the bulk of the orders for Christmas stocks have been received, filled and the retailer is considering the best methods of passing them on to the great body of consumers. The result is that an ebb flow is noticeable, a sort of reaction after the rush and jobbers show a little quietness this week. Dried fruits are still going out and so are nuts. There is also a good general demand but nothing outstandingly prominent.

Sugar, some believe, is billed for another decline. Those who anticipate it are not just sure when it will happen, and although the sugar market has been declining consistently of late still they believe it is due for another move in that direction.

Coffee and spices are strong. The general position shows no weakness. Evaporated apples are up a little.

Canned goods are moving along rather independent of conditions. The strong features that have been dwelt upon in the past still obtain.

It does not require a microscope to find among the trade a fairly strong feeling of satisfaction. It is apparently an evidence of a good year and of a garrison finish in the form of a brisk Christmas demand.

Sugar.—The market is steady and inclined to quietness. There is still an uncertainty as to future movements and it is generally held that the market is now mer ly marking time A change is likely to be announced at any time and it may not be for weeks. There is the possibility that the direction may be upward but the trade does not consider it probable. Last week's prices prevail.

Syrup.—Demand has continued heavy right up to the present and it is likely to hang on yet for a few weeks. There is some reason to believe that the demand for syrup should be more general than usual, as there is a demand to be met which in recent years was not so marked. The enquiry for prunes is improving. The price ruling is pretty high. Bosnian and Servian prunes have been quite largely purchased and enquiries for Santa Claras is now keener.

Coffee.—The same old story of "going up" and firmness is being told about coffee. Apparently there are no signs of weakening. The situation is if anything a little stronger. The former statements about a limited crop in Brazil are still supported and the figures mentioned are still given as the estimate. Coffee is having a great innings just now and it seems that it is going to remain in the game for some time.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL. — Peas are becoming somewhat scarce and a rise of 5 cents has taken place, while the shortage of tomatoes has also caused a rise of 10c in this line.

We may expect to see the imported peas on the market strongly soon, as there is no supply of Canadian to last if present demand keeps up.

All other prices are very firmly held.

TORONTO.—The situation is about the same as a week ago. Canned goods are being enquired for freely and a general shortage is noticeable. Tomatoes are by no means exhausted yet. Supplies are becoming short, but from one hand or another come receipts to meet the demand. Wholesalers are not wondering what they are going to do with stocks. That is not the situation. They are wondering where they are going to get them. There is at the same time a little undercurrent of feeling that the situation may not be as snug as it seems. Those jobbers who are steeped in canned goods history and facts, do not like the existence of high prices. They state emphatically that it is conducive to curtailing demand. The consumer apparently has a price limit, especially the working classes and beyond that quotation they often refuse to go. One jobber said the possibility of a surplus this year still remained. Of course it is not believed that demand is going to fall off or that it is going to suffer much, but the fact remains that some of the trade are inclined at times to stop and ponder upon the situation as it exists. If higher prices are really an obstacle to the retailer it is his duty to put more effort into his work, that is if he is handling the stocks affected and the great majority are. The demand for canned goods is strong and there is as yet nothing indicating a lack of interest on the part of the dear public.

Montreal, Dec. 8. — With Christmas less than three weeks off, grocers are getting in full supplies, and business is brisk and satisfactory. The scarcity of some lines and the strong demand have caused a rise in various articles.

The newest importation in foodstuffs in Montreal is that known as "gallon" eggs. China and Russia are the countries which are supplying this commodity. One of the well known Atlantic liners arrived here in the middle of November with the last consignment. Ten carloads entered this port, consequently Montreal is richer by three thousand tins of "gallon" eggs.

Sugar. — No important developments were noted in the market this week, and prices remain unchanged. It is not likely that there will be any further decline in the immediate future, but the general situation cannot be said to be at all strong.

Syrups and Molasses.—There is a good demand for syrups, but the movement in molasses is light. It is expected that the demand for all grades of molasses will brighten up soon.

Dried Fruits.—Quite a little interest is manifested in loose muscatel raisins, but the amount of business being accomplished is comparatively small. California seeded raisins are still irregular in price, while Valencia raisins are becoming scarce, and a rise is expected. Currants are in good demand, and the market is firmer, in sympathy with higher cables from Greece. Dates are cleaning up, and are firmly held. There is a lively demand for California prunes, but there is little stock of the sizes demanded.

Tea.—The China tea market is steady, and values are good. Japan teas are firm, with small stock all over the country of the good grades, which are bound to show an increase before spring.

Ceylon and Indian black and green have further advanced, and in green especially orders have to be placed two or three months in advance to secure delivery. Both Ceylon and India blacks are fully a cent higher than they were two months ago.

Coffee.—A still higher tendency is noticeable in the coffee market, the advance being now on all low grades, South American coffees, and mild, equal to fully four cents. Of course, the better grades are being influenced by this gradual rise. The question is will it hold? On account of crop reports, which are not unfavorable, most large buyers are following the policy of stocking only for immediate requirements.

Rice and Tapioca.—The tapioca market remains firm, and sellers are scarce. The shipment from the Straits Settlement for 1910 to the United States is over 1,000 tons less than last year, and 1,208 tons less than 1908; to Great Britain 950 tons less, and about the same deficit over 1908. To the continent 1,250 tons less, and 800 tons less than in 1908.

As stated in these columns recently, production has been curtailed, owing to the continued planting of rubber. There is no change in the rice markets.

Beans and Peas.—Beans show an increase this week, owing to scarcity in the market. The lack of snow and bad roads are the reasons given for the shortage of supplies.

Peas remain steady, but the quality of those shipped here is doubtful, some peas which do not boil being mixed with the boilers.

POINTERS.—

Dates—Reduced.
Filberts—Advanced.
Evaporated Apples.—Scarce.

Winnipeg, Dec. 8.—Local wholesalers expected to have a bigger rush just now then they are getting, but they expect that next week the repeat orders will be coming in to make up for the slight weakness in the demand now. The trade at present, however, is not light, and the ordering is quite good in a wide range of supplies. Dried fruits form a large bulk of the trade at the present time, and are pretty well sold out, and jobbers are waiting for new goods. The merchants are aware that the new goods are coming in, and are holding the orders until they can be filled promptly.

An indication that the trade has been quite satisfactory and is still in good condition, is that there are a large number of scarcities on the local market which cannot be filled until after the New Year. These lines are chiefly shelled walnuts, evaporated apples, coffee and California dried fruits. Some of these lines will be coming in every week, but there will be a large bulk needed during the remainder of the winter.

Sugar.—The output is heavy for icing and lump sugar, as may be expected, but merchants will soon be satisfactorily stocked in this line. There have been no price changes since last week's reduction.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—Raisins of all kinds are well distributed over the West, and the remaining stocks in Winnipeg are not heavy. The Valencia raisin market is not very strong, but no further reductions have been reported. Prunes are going out well, and a good demand continues. There has been an excellent output of dried pears, peaches, apricots and peel. This demand may be expected to weaken later in the winter. Dates have come on the market in enormous quantities, and although the quality is good, prices locally have been reduced. After the present shipments are moved off, it is probable that the prices will revert back to the former figures.

Syrup and Molasses.—The syrup market is quite unchanged, and as has been the case for some time, there is considerable weakness. At the time of writing, some exceptionally large orders have come in, and judging from the weak ordering in the past, it would seem that merchants are now beginning to stock in what has always been a favorable commodity. Several carloads of syrup are due to arrive this week, and in the face of this and other facts, there is no hope of advancement.

Nuts.—The nut market is unsettled, and shelled almonds are weakening slightly, which is due to local competition. The supply on hand is quite large, and the demand has been extraordinary. Filberts are advancing as the quantity is not large, and the ordering is quite good. Walnuts are firm, and although new stuff arrives early this week, all orders cannot be satisfactorily filled.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Dec. 8.—Nearly all classes of canned goods advanced last week 2½ to 5 cents per dozen. Roller and standard oatmeal have advanced 20 cents per barrel. Lard has taken a slight drop and is now quoted at 14½ to 14½ for pure and 12½ to 13 for compound. Salt pork is lower, the present prices being: American mess, $25.50 to $26.00; domestic mess, $24 to $25, and American clear, $25 to $27.50.

What a St. Catharines Grocer Said

When Red Rose Tea was new in Ontario—about ten years ago—a traveller called on a grocer in St. Catharines who was very pleasant and courteous, but when asked to buy replied: "No, I have thirteen different package teas on my shelves now, and you cannot conscientiously ask me to stock another one I never heard of."

What a change has come over the trade! There is to-day no other tea in Canada so much talked about as Red Rose Tea. There is no other tea which has so won the confidence and selling co-operation of its friends in the trade. The effective advertising, the pleasant, helpful relations we maintain with our customers, the ability and standing of our salesmen, all contribute to this result, but the remarkable success of Red Rose is based first and last upon the superior quality of the tea. Ladies everywhere are recommending it to their friends. It will add to your success to recommend a tea whose quality is guaranteed by its success.

Jobbers Inclined to Believe That Supply Will Fall a Little Short of Demand—Stocks Are Found Only in Some Districts —Another Week Should Clear The Situation—Hog Products Slump Again—Cheese Shows More Strength — Review of the Situation—Butter is Firmer—New Laid Eggs Scarce and Higher.

The production of cheese during the season now closed has been much heavier than was expected and in view of the heavy shipments of cream it reached a figure that should satisfy dairymen. It is now believed that there are about 300,000 boxes left in the country. The receipts for the season up to a short time ago were 1,963,064 boxes and the shipments to the same date were 1,892,395 boxes. The difference does not, however, represent the actual amount of present holdings. September and October cheese are in good demand and holders are looking for a higher price. Canadian chese in England has now to meet the New Zealand first arrivals. The quality of the Canadian stocks is good and the first New Zealand goods will give an idea of its quality. It is to be expected that this competition will have more or less effect on the demand from Old Country buyers.

Provisions are easier than last week and lard is again marked down. Prices at country points last week went down as low as $6.25, but packers are not inclined to pay much attention to this. They admit that it was about $6.50 but that the price ruling is around that prevailing a week ago. Conjectures as to where the movement is going to stop are practically useless. Opinion is pretty well divided, some looking for the turn of the tide at any time now, others believing that present conditions are likely to hold for some time. One large United States packer said recently that the consumer is now having his innings and is likely to enjoy it for some time.

The price of turkeys has advanced recently, and a good price is now being offered. Supplies are none too plentiful, according to some houses, who state that only in some districts can the birds be found. There is likely to be a good supply for Christmas, but some are of the opinion that the demand will not be quite met.

Geese and ducks are also a little higher. Another week should clear up the situation as most of the stocks will then have been bought.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—There was no important change in the condition of the market, prices being much the same as they were a week ago, but there is a feeling that the prices for live hogs will come down lower, as it is claimed that supplies in the country are large.

The demand for dressed hogs is quiet, and there is no improvement in the inquiries for hams and bacons.

Provisions.—The feeling in regard to hogs and pork products continues easy. Live hogs were quoted slightly lower this week, although some of the bigger packing houses claimed that the higher price of last week was still ruling. Lard took another drop this week, and dealers are trying to figure out when the bottom price will be reached. The decline is in both pure and compound lards. The price of mess pork in barrels is also at a reduction. Opinions are still divided upon the progress and trend of the market in pork products. Some believe that the consumer is going to benefit by the market condtions, others are not so bearish and believe that prices will reassert themselves. There seems to be large numbers of hogs in the country, and for the time being it would seem that the upward movement is not likely to be felt.

This is about the middle of the scarce season and stocks are certainly light. Storage goods are even bringing a good price but the real feature is being supplied by the new laids which are almost worth their weight in gold.

Poultry—This market is becoming interesting as the Christmas season draws near. The country is being gone over as with a fine tooth comb and if there are any turkeys left, especially after the buyers think they have carefully covered the ground, it will not be because an offer was not made for them. Possibly a few ancients will be left and the stocks necessary to provide for future years, but speaking generally the buyers seem to be able to smell the turkey districts. It is said that there are some localities where no stocks are held and supplies are generally obtained in certain districts. The price has been advanced recently and cheapness is not going to be a feature of the Christmas trade.

A Pretty Face
Does it sell goods?

"Chocolate Bordo"

You have probably read that article on "Shop Assistants who Travel on Looks."

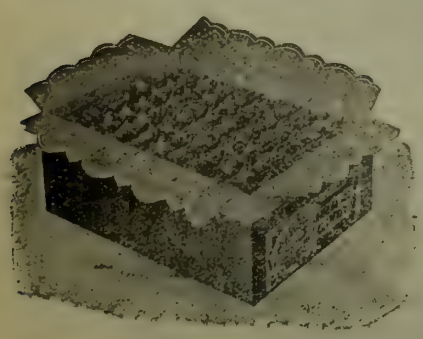
That is a very old fashioned notion isn't it—getting a pretty girl to stand behind your counter and believing she will sell goods because she is pretty. How is she to "pull" trade?

She can attract customers already in the shop, perhaps, but it is the getting in of the Customers that is the real problem. Once get a customer into your store, and the face behind your counter is not going to make a great deal of difference one way or another if you have the goods.

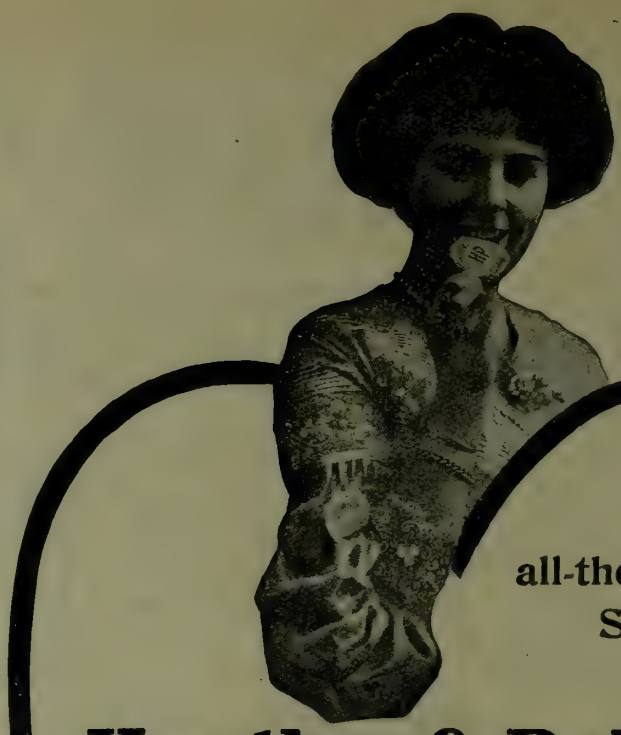
We can tell you how to get hold of a sure means of attracting Customers from the outside of your store to the inside.

Let it be known that you handle Our Chocolate "BORDO" which is becoming a greater attraction every day and which is drawing more people into stores to buy "BORDO" than any other Chocolate ever placed on the market. Then trade will come to you.

We want you to know more about this specialty too; if not already acquainted with it, it will be a good thing for both you and your Customers.



You will find it such a helpful line to have in your confectionery department.



It will pay you to investigate, and get "Bordo" into stock before your competitor gets hold of it.

Send us your enquiry for samples and particulars; it is a pleasure for us to furnish same.

Flour Markets Merely Marking Time

Prices are Unchanged, Trade is Fairly Active, and Demand Is Maintained—Activity in Cereals—Some of the Topics Millers are Talking About—Bakers' Contracts Practically All Signed Up—One of the Big Mills Gets an Order for 75,000 Bags of First Grade Flour.

Although there are some pessimistic opinions heard now and then in regard to the condition of the flour market, still on the whole it seems to be satisfactory. Bakers have nearly all signed up their contracts for supplies; small dealers are showing an activity, and even the smaller mills are reporting considerable business. There are some who claim that there is but little doing, that export trade is too light, and indeed, until after the British elections the demand for export is bound to be light. At the last election such an effect was noticed, and the present struggle is expected to have similar effects on the trade.

Of late there have been comments upon the erection of a big mill in Toronto. It has been said that already there are more than sufficient mills for the country's requirements, and one prominent flour man stated that there were mills enough to provide for a population of forty million people. This is considered much too strong a statement, but apart from the number of mills, one miller recently stated that it was strange some one did not erect a monster mill in Toronto even before this. The new structure will be large, and will have the double advantage of rail and water connection. This miller stated that while there were a good number of mills, still he thought there was room for another.

The bakers' contracts recall one that was made but a few days ago in which one of the big mills secured a contract from a large Toronto baker for 75,000 bags of first grade flour. The competition between the mills for this chunk of business was of the keenest, and some of the competing mills "would just love" to know what price was paid. While the ruling quotation is $5.40, not a few of the millers would be willing to bet a high hat that the deal was closed under that figure, and they are curious to know just how much it was below the market price, if any.

In passing it might be stated that a baker buys bran for two purposes. In the first place it serves as food for his horses, and in the second it is used in the manufacture of brown bread. This is quite common among bakers, as the bran is really the part of the wheat used in the old way for making brown bread.

The wheat market has been pretty steady of late. The visible supply was last week 10.219.000 bushels, as compared with 12.048,000 last week, and 10.394.000 bushels the corresponding week last year. In the United States last week the visible supply of wheat increased by eleven million bushels.

MONTREAL.

Flour. — The large decrease in the stock on spot caused some comment in the flour market this week. The supply is 28,005 barrels smaller than the previous week, and 27,398 than a year ago. Business was quiet and prices unchanged.

MACARONI MANUFACTURE.

The Method Employed—Is a Valuable Food.

A writer on Italian cookery recently remarked that the possibilities of macaroni were limited, which goes to prove that his study was at fault. An Italian of the south would dissent vigorously from such a proposition. In his bill of fare macaroni is an ever present substitute for meat foods, and dressed in an infinite variety of ways in combination with cheese, vegetables, fruit and fish, it replaces them very effectively. The Neapolitan who would welcome you to his home says "Come and eat mac-

Why Grocers should stock CHRISTIE'S Plum Pudding

THE day of the Home-made Xmas Plum Pudding is past. ¶ Few Housewives now attempt to make one, because they realize that the facilities of the Modern Bakery are far superior to that of the ordinary kitchen. ¶ More than that, the baking of the Home-made Pudding is generally deferred and the Festal Day finds it immature. ¶ The Christie Plum Pudding maintains the high reputation of the Big Canadian Bakers for purity and quality. ¶ Every ingredient entering this pudding is guaranteed to be of the highest quality. ¶ You'll oblige many of your customers by stocking this pudding and its rich, delicious flavor will certainly please them.

aroni with me," much as the Englishman of a past generation invited his friend to "cut mutton" with him.

Macaroni is a paste made from the granular meal known as semolina, made from hard varieties of wheat grown in the South of Europe, Algeria, Canada, United States, and other countries.

The semolina is made in to a stiff paste with boiling water, and in the hot condition it is placed in a metal cylinder, the end of which is closed by a disc which is pierced with openings which correspond with the diameter or section of the article to be made. Into this cylinder a plunger is introduced, and by powerful pressure it squeezes the stiff dough out through the openings in continuous sticks, threads or pipes, as the case may be; these are dried raipdly by being hung over wooden rods in heated chambers through which currents of air are driven. Only macaroni prepared from hard wheat, which is peculiarly rich in gluten, can be dried in this manner; spurious preparations made from soft wheat have not the requisite tenacity, and will not bear their own weight.

It is this wealth of gluten that constitutes the chief value of macaroni as a food; it is all nourishment, and is absorbed into the system almost in its entirety, and its defficieny in fat is easily made up by obvious additions.

The cooking of macaroni, or rather its preparation for table use, is too big a question to be considered here, but it is safe to say that if this favorite Italian food were better known there would be a vast increase in the demand for it.

First Make the Sale—Then Count Your Profit!

What you pay the maker brings no gain.

It's what your customer pays that keeps the kiddies warm.

You must get back your money—plus!

So, Brother Grocer, when you buy flour, for your pocketbook's sake buy in terms of selling.

Don't be deceived by the wily argument that because the invoice cost of "near-good" flour is less, your profit will be better.

Only the very inexperienced dealer will bite at that bait.

For, you see, your selling cost is much greater on cheap flour than on FIVE ROSES—each sale demands more time, more energy lost in selling talk.

It's hard to sell the first time—harder the second time.

You are forever changing brands—your customers forever changing grocer.

It cannot give the permanent, consistent, day-after-day satisfaction peculiar to FIVE ROSES sales.

Simply because it is made cheaper, must sell cheaper, seeking shelter under the retailer's reputation, and showing its gratitude by sowing a crop of disgusted users.

But FIVE ROSES sells quickly—easily—repeatedly.

Your profits come quicker—oftener—steadily increasing through increased sales.

And each pound sold to a new user brings back that customer for "more of the same"—new profits, these.

FIVE ROSES creates quality customers—the only kind that stay with you, impervious to a cutting competitor.

Sell FIVE ROSES now, Brother Grocer.

Get after your jobber—make him send you FIVE ROSES—that's what he's there for.

Or write us if he's obstinate.

Act.

Sharp Increase in Price of Cranberries

Stocks are Short in the Face of an Increasing Demand—Situation in Oranges Shows Some Improvement — Choice Lemons are Inclined to be Scarce, the Present Crop Showing Greater Quantity of Mediocre Fruit—Prospects for Christmas are Bright—Jobbers Import Celery and Cucumbers.

An advance in the price of cranberries is not unexpected but it was hardly thought to be as marked as that which was reported this week. The demand is already good and a heavy inroad is expected as the result of Christmas. The supplies from Cape Cod are light in comparison with the demand hence the high price that is now quoted.

Enquiry for oranges has been much better of late and a good business is expected for the holiday, and it would not surprise some to see oranges begin to demand higher prices as the holiday season approaches.

Jobbers are beginning to import celery and cucumbers which are simply the first of a general importation that will be made during the winter. It all depends upon the demand which the retailers by their own methods help to cultivate among the consuming public.

Apples and potatoes are firm and on the whole the market promises well for Christmas.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—As stated in our last issue the coming of more seasonable weather has given a stimulus to the wholesale fruit business, which is much brisker than recently and promises to be active till New Year's Day.

There is a growing demand for oranges, the latest arrivals of Valencias, proving of splendid quality.

Cranberries as predicted in recent issues, have gone up $2 per barrel. The seasonable weather and scarcity of supplies from Cape Cod best explain the rise. The demand, as is natural at this time of the year, is strong and a further increase of one dollar may take place around Xmas. There is a big decline in lemons.

Green Fruit.—Local fruit jobbers are displaying a quality of fruit that in appearance is most tempting. Navel oranges are arriving in good condition and it is said have seldom been better at this time of the year. The crop has been a heavy one and supplies should be ample. In regard to oranges it is generally noticed that during the Christmas season prices advance on account of the extra heavy demand. This may be expected within the next few weeks as everything is pointing to a heavy business this year, thanks to a feeling of prosperity that seems to be more or less general. On the whole there is an improved enquiry for oranges. Cranberries have taken a big jump due, the jobbers say, to an increased demand, actual and anticipated. While the crop was known not to be quite as heavy as usual the deficiency was not considered serious. Cranberries have shown a decided firmness from the Thanksgiving season when trade assumed quite a figure. The requirement for Christmas is bound to be large. Apples are continuing at a strong figure and prices if anything seem to be firmer. Lemons are arriving freely, but the quantity of select stock is comparatively small this year. The result is that it is not so easy to get the best stock.

Fish - Oysters

Higher Prices are Quoted for Fish

Big Demand From Upper Provinces and From United States Centres, Together With Stormy Weather Interfering With Fishing, Have Resulted in Strengthening Prices — Business is Generally Reported Good, and the Season is Expected to be A Fruitful One—Active Dealing in Oysters.

Strength is apparent in the various fish markets. One of the principal reasons is the demand that is always realized at this season. Activity seems to be general, and while prices are holding firmly in some places, the tendency is upward, some markets showing considerable movement in that respect. The weather has not been the best of late, and has hampered some of the fleets. Lobster fishing has already begun, earlier than usual, because of the poor results to the sardine fishers.

QUEBEC.

Montreal, Dec. 8.—The demand is good at present. The unsuitability of the weather and the scarcity at the moment of salt prepared fish are the chief causes for the boom in the frozen fish trade. The outlook is for a big trade all through the winter season . On account of stormy weather on the east coast this week, haddock is somewhat scarce, and shows a tendeney to rise. Contracts placed for delivery now cannot be fulfilled.

Luckily there is enough market cod, which is used as a substitute. The oyster trade is good, and a little better than this time last year. From now on till Christmas there will be a big demand both for bulk and shell. Stocks of the latter are showing weakness, and there is no doubt that after the New Year the supplies of first hands will be greatly reduced.

New smoked and salted herring show a increase, as do haddock and haddies, while a downward tendency is noticeable in the frozen pike and smelt market.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

St. John's, Dec. 8.—Fish has again advanced. Herring advanced 10c per bbl; although reported fairly plentiful here, it is scarce on the United States markets. Cod oil still remains at its present high price. Cod liver oil (refined cod oil) has advanced to 75c per gallon. The weather here for the last 2 months has been the worst for the last 20 years, it being a continuous fall of either rain or snow. This has hampered the fishery business very much, the vessels being unable to land their cargoes. Some merchants are paying a little above the ordinary prices in hopes of obtaining cargoes already sold in Europe.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax, Dec. 8.—There is a general scarcity of fish, and all the markets are firm. There is a good demand for both salt and fresh. On the local market there is little fresh fish offering, the receipts being far below the average. Of course, the stormy weather on the coast has hampered operations to a considerable extent, but the fishermen report that when they do reach the fishing grounds fish are found to be scarce. There is no fresh halibut offering on the local market, and there is only a limited supply of frozen stock.

With the arrival of large quantities of herring from Bay of Islands, N'fld., there is some improvement in the supply of kippered herring. The Nova Scotia dealers say that there is a good demand for finnan haddies, and that they can sell more than they can prepare. The orders for this class of fish come principally from Upper Canadian points.

Smelts are scarce this season, and the run of the fish that is being marketed is small. With the opening of the lobster season, the fishermen along the coast and the packers and dealers will be kept busy. The indications are that high prices will prevail.

Three cargoes of dry codfish arrived here last week, all having been purchased before the fish were taken out of the stores at Lunenburg.

At Gloucester this week the highest price since the civil war was paid for salt codfish.

ONTARIO.

Toronto, Dec. 8.—Demand for fish is steady and trade quite satisfactory. Local jobbers are reporting a fair business and look forward to a good season. Prices are holding firmly. The demand is pretty much unchanged, frozen fish and smoked and boneless being asked for most.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

St. John, Dec. 8.—Heavy gales, rain and sleet storms interfered with the fishing in this section last week and as a result the supply was short, much below the week previous. The smelt season opened December 1 and a number of shipments have been received here from the north shore. A few flounders have also been caught.

The government has allowed the lobster season to open on Dec. 1, three weeks earlier than last year. The principal reason for the change was that the fishermen at Grand Manan and along the coast have had a poor season with the sardine fishery.

According to the regulations the fishermen are not allowed to catch lobsters under 10½ inches in length. The lobster packers are up in arms against the new regulations and at a meeting held in Moncton last week they appointed a committee to wait on the government and ask that the new laws be not enforced for one year. A resolution to this effect was passed unanimously.

Association Favors Contract Selling Plan

Grocers' Section of R. M. A. Thinks That Soap and Charcoal Prices Ought to be Protected to Prevent Cutting—Resolution Against Proposal to Advance Telephone Rates — Cutting Prices on Sugar to Attract Trade, is Criticized — Talk on Salesmanship at Next Meeting.

Toronto, Dec. 8.—The Grocers' Section of the Toronto branch of the Retail Merchants' Association transacted considerable business at their last regular meeting last week, J. F. Holloway presiding.

The subject of the conditions of the soap trade in the city was discussed at length, and the consensus of opinion was that the price of five cents a cake should be the fixed minimum retail price, and that manufacturers should endeavor to protect the price at this figure. F. C. Higgins conveyed the information that the manufacturers were desirous that the price should be maintained at a figure assuring the retailer a profit of 90 cents a box, and also that it was the intention of the manufacturers to use every legitimate means at their command to protect the retail men at the price of five cents a cake.

In regard to the effect of the increase members cited numerous instances of soap price-cutting now prevailing throughout the city, and that frequently the cutting was due to the possession of stock purchased before the advance. It was anticipated that when this was exhausted the cutting would likely disappear. A conference with the manufacturers it was thought would be benefital to the trade in general. The retailers want to point out that they are in sympathy with the desirability of a restricted price contract for the sale of soap. In other words the association favors a Contract Selling Plan.

It was moved by Mr. Lyonell and A. B. Griffin that a committee be appointed to arrange a conference with the soap manufacturers. The personnel of the committee is D. W. Clark, A. B. Griffin, F. C. Higgins, J. F Holloway and P. Whitelock.

It was moved by Mr. Griffin and Mr. Spooner that the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association be invited to attend the meeting and to co-operate in the work.

The Charcoal Question.

J. F. Holloway then dealt with the charcoal situation. Some manufacturers, it was claimed, are engaged in a price-cutting campaign from which the grocers are receiving a temporary benefit. It was advanced that one firm was trying to put another out of business, and then to advance the price to $1 per dozen bags. The opinions expressed were that it was desirable to have the two firms in operation, that the wholesale price should be fixed at 90 cents a dozen, and the retail price be ten cents a bag; also that this price be protected by the manufacturers. This protection could be extended by the manufacturers refusing to supply goods to price cutters.

It was finally moved that a committee be appointed to endeavor to bring about a meeting with the charcoal men. The members of the committee are Messrs. J. S. Bond, Lyonell, Spooner, Hall, Matthews and Lowney.

Telephone Rates.

The section decided to protest against the contemplated advance in rates as announced by a telephone company. The following resolution was adopted, moved by A. B. Griffin and J. S. Bond, that "we, the members of this section, believe we are now paying an exorbitant price for our telephone service, and we hereby request our executive board to assist the city council and other bodies in opposing the proposed advance in rates."

Mr. Spooner urged the section to go on record as favoring government ownership of telephones, and instanced the satisfaction which exists in Manitoba and the territories west, where the telephone systems are owned and operated by the government. A motion to this effect applying to the Ontario phone systems was then adopted.

E. M. Trowern asked that the provincial committee be permitted to attend the conference being arranged with the soap manufacturers, and the matter was left with the committee in charge of the arrangements.

A. B. Griffin spoke on the cutting of the price of sugar, frequently heard of among the trade as a means of attracting business. He pointed out the foolishness of such action, and the demoralizing effect on business.

The next meeting will be held on Monday, Dec. 19th, at which it has been arranged to have W. J. Irwin give an address on "Salesmanship"—a subject of interest to the retail trade.

Breakfast Bacon and Lard Price Changes

Comparisons Between 1909 and 1910 Quotations Show Varying Markets—Pure Lard Prices at Their Height Last March When Price Was 17 Cents—A Gradual Decline Since—Bacon Highest Early in September.

In view of the present feeling in regard to prices of foodstuffs, a glance over the record of lard and bacon should be of interest. It will be remembered that early in the present year public interest was focussed upon what was universally called the "High Cost of Living." The prices given herewith are jobbers' quotations and it is noticeable at a glance that the difference between the prices two years ago and those ruling now, while showing an increase in each case is hardly more than might be expected when it is considered that values in general have gone up to an appreciable extent in that time and also when the circumstances affecting these markets are considered apart from the whole.

The hog market is not remarkable for its regularity, and during one year prices are subject to many ups and downs. Pork products as a rule depend to a large extent as far as prices go upon the supply of hogs. Demand also has an effect and several other influences are noticed from time to time.

Breakfast Bacon Prices.

In the following table the prices are in the first list for smoked breakfast bacon per pound in Toronto. It will be seen that the advance since Jan. 1st, 1909, has been gradual, but none the less sure. Breakfast bacon is generally in good demand at any time during the year, but it has its best seasons like practically all groceries.

Since then, however, the trend has been downward with the exception of a slight upward movement in October.

Compound Lard.

The last comparison is of compound lard prices. The advance over the first figure was certainly heavy almost reaching 100 p.c. at one time. The high price of cottonseed oil one of the ingredients of compound lard has been mostly responsible for the strength of this market.

THE SWEET POTATO.

As regards its general composition, the sweet potato differs from the ordinary white or Irish potato chiefly in possessing a little less water and protein and considerably more carbohydrates (starches and sugars). A more important difference is found in the nature of the carbohydrates, sweet potatoes containing considerable quantities of sugar as well as starch, while starch is the characteristic carbohydrate of white potatoes. The proportion of sugar varies with different varieties, the very sweet syrup yams being the more popular in certain regions of the South and the drier starchy potatoes in the northern markets.

When sweet potatoes are prepared for the table about 20 per cent. of the total weight is removed with the skins. Most cooks are agreed that the best results are obtained when they are cooked for a long time, the tubers thus prepared being sweeter and more palatable than those cooked for a short period. In experimental work which has been reported, on this subject uniform tubers of medium size were baked for 20, 40 and 60 minutes. Contrary to a common supposition that long baking makes sweet potatoes dry, it was found that those which were baked an hour were in appearance and to the taste moister than those which were baked only 20 minutes, notwithstanding a greater loss in weight in baking. Those which were baked a full hour in the oven were invariably more palatable than the others. In the first 20 minutes of the cooking period the potatoes lost 5.3 per cent. in weight, in the second 20 minutes 8.4 per cent., and in the third 20 minutes, 11.4 per cent.

Difference Between Tapioca and Sago

Reader Enquires as to Whether They are Manufactured From The Same Article or Not—Various Kinds of Each—Seed Tapioca Sold as White Sago, Which Actually Doesn't Exist—How Sago and Tapioca are Manufactured.

The Canadian Grocer.—Will you kindly answer through The Grocer whether Pearl Tapioca and Small Sago are manufactured from the same article; if Pearl Tapioca is the same article as is called Large Sago in England; and please describe what the Tapioca of the Old Country is like?

B. J. SHEPARD.

Dauphin, Man.

Editorial Note.—The Dauphin merchant has raised an exceedingly interesting question and one on which few have definite views. The Grocer interviewed several retail and wholesale grocers and brokers and found differences of opinion, but taking all our sources of information into consideration we come to the conclusion that Pearl Tapioca and Small Sago are not manufactured from the same article. One informant stated that both were made from the roots of a tree, tapioca from the interior and sago from the exterior of the root. Dictionaries and encyclopaedias, however, do not substantiate this opinion.

Webster's dictionary says that tapioca is the starchy substance secured from scraping and washing the roots of the Cassava plant, while sago is prepared from the mealy piths of the trunks of various kinds of palm trees, commonly known as sago-palms.

There is no White Sago.

There are four kinds of tapioca known to commerce. These are: Bullet, Pearl, Flake and Seed. The different kinds of sago in commerce are: Brown, Granulated, Pearl and White, although in reality there is no white sago.

Wholesalers frequently have orders for "White Sago," and these are all filled with "Seed Tapioca," which resembles very much "Medium Brown" sago in everthing but color. In fact one wholesaler said that when he gets an order for simply sago he fills it with seed tapioca. Brown sago is, of course, sometimes bleached to improve its appearance, but in reality it remains "brown sago."

The answer to question No. 2 is that in some parts of England, Pearl Tapioca is frequently termed Large Sago. This is the information given by an experienced Old Country grocer now in Canada. He also says that the tapioca of the Old Country is the same as the tapioca here only there is more flake used there.

Law's Grocer's Manual in summing up the differences says: "On the other hand many grocers have been fined for serving granulated or seed tapioca when small white sago has been asked for; it should be easy to remember that sago is always brown and that the small white seed-like pearls are really tapioca."

The Manufacture of Sago.

While on this subject it may be interesting to note some things about the manufacture of sago. As has been said, it is made from the soft inner portion of the trunks of the sago-palm. The trunks are cut into pieces about two feet long which are split into halves and the soft centre extracted and pounded in water till the starch separates. It is then washed and becomes soft meal. This is shaken in a bag till it becomes granulated, or pearled sago. Six or eight hundred pounds of sago are made from a single tree. All sago is made from the same thing, the different kinds as in the case of tapioca, being produced by a different manufacturing process. Sago is obtained chiefly in India, Ceylon, Borneo, Sumatra, Singapore, Philippine Islands, etc.

Cassava Juice Crystalized.

Tapioca is made from the knotty roots or tubers of two species of South American plants—the bitter and the sweet Cassava. The tubers resemble large parsnips. When washed, peeled of their dark rinds, they are grated into a pulp which is subjected to pressure in a screw-press under water and in a kind of bag made of rushes. The crude juice forced out contains a poisonous amount of prussic acid. This poison evaporates when exposed to heat or even to the open air for two days. When all the juice or starchy matter has settled to the bottom of the water it is removed and again washed and dried in the sun. It is then roasted and stirred well with an iron rod, and finally dried off on warm plates. The heat partly bursts the grains. When sifted the four grades or sizes above m to meet the reasons assigned by the Court of Appeals in declaring the law was unconstitutional, the Legislature enacted another law similar to the one which had been declared unconstitutional, but meeting the objections that had been pointed out by the Court of Appeals.

The decision in question, it is stated, seems to nullify the objects of this last act, giving the dishonest debtors an easy loophole. The court said in part: "That if the third retailer was required to go further and show compliance with the statutes in the transfer between the second and first retailer, no matter how many prior transferers there may have been, he would have been required to show the same as to each, and if the rule of evidence as to the presumption of fraud is to be so interpreted, it appears to us that the present statute would be as susceptible to the criticisms made by the Court of Appeals in Wright vs. Hart, 82 N. Y. 330, as the statute here under consideration. We do not think that the statute can be so construed."

It is admitted that the facts justified the court in holding that the transaction was an honest one so far as the third retailer was concerned, yet in view of the court's opinion in any case wherever a sale of this kind is made through an intermediary, and the intermediary has no creditors, the last purchaser is not compelled to give any notice to any creditors of the original seller.

The trial showed that the second re

If you were lucky enough to get Beacon Brand Haddie last week, we are satisfied it pleased you. We have had compliments by the hundreds and a great many customers have given us standing orders. We would like to say that Beacon Brand Haddie is not a cheap Haddie. Last week's special price was simply to introduce the line to new trade outside of Toronto and was sold at less than cost. Our price this week is 8c. per pound; considering quality, it is a cent better than any other Haddie.

Selling Power of Service Illustradted

How a Banker Tested a Merchant's Progressiveness—Development of Service Among Auto Makers—A Great Stimulant to Trade and Confidence—Needed in a Business as Well as Quality.

By F. E. Dayton.

Several years ago a very keen merchant started a gentlemen's furnishing goods store in a small town. Being without large funds and starting a business which required a considerable sum of money, he made application to a bank. The president of the bank took the question of the loan under advisement. Later he dropped into the store and bought a pair of gloves. Purposely and deliberately he cut them with a knife and went back to this store with an injured air.

He made known his complaint to the proprietor who mechanically reached for a second pair without a moment's hesitation.

"We always sell a piece of satisfaction with our goods and you just didn't get your satisfaction. Let's hope that it is in this pair, although gloves do not always run uniform, etc."

The incident was the beginning of what developed a very large banking business, for the bank president returned to his bank and reported the incident to the board of directors.

A Hat Incident.

This is a local application of the service question but it is even more important with national advertisers. A young man bought a Knox hat against his judgment that a derby hat could really be worth $5, the price of a Knox. He wore the hat for the regulation period of wear without incident. It may have been a longer or shorter length of wear than he got from $3.50 hats which he had been wearing. This is unimportant. Along in the spring he found himself in Rochester, N.Y., just two weeks before the straw hat season opened, though straw hats were being worn by advanced stylists in New York.

The restaurant where he lunched became crowded and a gentleman was seated with this young man and, because the young man was reading at the time, failed to notice the approach until the stranger had sat upon this Knox hat in the seat of the opposite chair. Here was a dilemma. To buy a straw hat and wear it would be to invite ridicule in so provincial a section. To buy another stiff hat was to have an investment in a hat which could not be worn through the summer and which would be out of date in the fall. So the young man decided to do the only other thing open—buy a soft or felt hat.

Now it happened that he dropped into a Knox hat store. The spring season is not a good season for a large supply of felt hats and there was nothing to suit the young man. The hat salesman was made acquainted with the situation just as it was outlined above. First, he loaned the visitor a new hat to wear during the afternoon and fixed up the old hat in the meantime so that it gave a fine service through a long life. He had to put a new sweat band in the hat loaned for it was a hot day and he charged 50 cents for repairing the damage.

"The incident taught me that it is economy to buy a Knox hat," says my friend. "They provide an added element of service to the intrinsic worth of the hat and they convinced me that I couldn't afford to wear anything else." Here is a concrete example of the value of service brought right home.

Useful in Any Business.

There is hardly a commodity that a service campaign cannot be added to. It can be made a virtue whereas if not so planned to be a real service it is merely fulfilling the obligations of sale. The motor car has borne this out exceedingly well. As soon as automobiles began to have a wide sale and were bought by persons who lived a long way from factories, troubles began to develop. The customer complained to the factory and the factory answered the complaint with a general letter. The letter generally stated that the makers would correct the damage if the owner would send the car to the factory, and pay freight on it two ways. This was, of course, unsatisfactory. It tied the owner up with the use of his car in which he had a considerable investment, and the owner either had the damage repaired at his own expense or he made so much noise that the factory sent a man to repair the damage, often at considerable distance, and at some expense.

After this system had disgusted early owners of cars there was a change. Service corps began to be organized. All the real good makers—the people who are in the business to stay and who will be doing business when the fly-by-night sketch teams are out of the running—looked the thing fairly in the face. No matter how much attention the local agent for the sale of the car gave, the factory gave better service. They sent a man who knew every detail of the car to call upon the owner once a month. It wasn't only the owner who was in trouble but the whole list of owners were seen once a month.

This service corps is a great institution in the motor car field. In the first place, the visit of the repair patrolmen are so frequent that a defect is caught before it communicates itself more seriously to other features. Then the owner has to sign a receipt covering the gratis work of the repairman or stating the owner's satisfaction. Twelve of these statements at the end of the year will tell any manufacturer whether or not he is entitled to ask for and get a renewal order from the same prospect. Twelve of these reports make the safety or the unsafety of the purchase of a second-hand motor car apparent. It is a maxim as old as automobiling to "never buy a second-hand car of which you do not know the history."

Appreciated Service.

Now this is a kind of service that is appreciated. The auxiliary force engaged in repair work gives powerful aid to the selling organization. Salesmen are recruited from this available material and fine salesmen, too. It is just as potent that this kind of inspection and repair service is applicable to the machine tool and printing machinery trades and others as it is valuable in a merchandising way in the motor car field. A record for service is quite as important as a record for merchandise quality.

A western brewer had worked up quite a business in a malt tonic, a regular make, bottle and sell proposition. For nine years a woman had bought one dozen bottles of this tonic and then one year the dealer sold a case of stuff that was too highly charged with gas and when the wires were removed the bottled contents geysered in fifty directions, and the contents of each bottle was lost. Now the woman wrote the makers who were on the other side of the continent and they wired their representative to call and make good. He found a claim for damage to a dress and the wall paper. He offered to settle. The woman was surprised. The season for the tonic was passing. Her kick was dissipating its energy and the stains were evaporating from the wall paper. Her dress, which had been spotted, was an old dress, anyway. She was so appreciative that she had no kick, especially when the brewer sent a case of perfect goods with his compliments. Now she is a booster for the tonic, has learned a lot of its good qualities from the service man who called, and instead of taking it only in the summer season, is now a year-round customer.

The manufacturer who hasn't learned that there is a subtle something which he should attach to his merchandise besides its good quality is losing one of the best merchandising opportunities. Of course, he will be gouged and imposed upon by an unreasonable, unheeding and unappreciative people, but for the most part he will be honestly met.

BROKE AFTER 50 YEARS.

English Grocer Explains His Insolvency In Court.

A grocer residing near Gloucester, Eng., stated recently in a bankruptcy court, that he is now 77 years of age and he has been in the grocery business ever since he was a boy. His father had conducted the store in the first place and on his retirement 50 years ago the son took over the business, book-debts and good-will and had carried it on ever since with the exception of three or four years ago, during which he had a nervous breakdown, his son then taking charge.

During the past seven years the business has been steadily declining due, largely, to increased opposition. In August last the business was sold to his wife, and he was now assisting her. "For over sixty years," said the debtor, "I have worked 12 hours and more a day." Now his assets are nil and his gross deficiency is about $1,500. Comment is unnecessary.

The Weyburn Grocery Company, Weyburn, Sask., have incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000. They are building a large wholesale warehouse.

ST. CATHARINES, - ONTARIO

The Canadian Grocer has for some time been making an average net monthly circulation gain of over 100. : : :

Do you realize what that means?

One hundred more good merchants reading this paper in December than in November; one hundred more readers in November than in October, and so on.

To be conservative in the extreme, let us estimate the average annual purchases of these merchants at $10,000.

In only an odd case would the figure be so low as that, and in many instances it would run as high as $25,000 to $30,000.

One hundred new readers buying annually $10,000 worth of goods means an increased annual buying power behind this paper of $1,000,000 every month.

And that is equivalent to $12,000,000 per year.

Increase, remember!

Now these merchants do not subscribe to The Grocer for any other reason than that it helps them in their business—helps them to make more money.

That insures for our advertisers a quality of interest they can secure in no other way.

Just think over the fact that an advertiser in this paper influences an annual buying power of fully $200,000,000, and that he can do it through a full-page space every week for about the same price paid an ordinary clerk in his office.

Contain More—Cost Less

IN these four words you have a very strong selling point for RED CROSS BAKED BEANS.

The tins contain more beans than the 3's flats, which are sold at a higher price.

There is a green sticker on the top of each can of RED CROSS BAKED BEANS that calls your customers' attention to this fact and tells them how to verify it.

RED CROSS BEANS are hand-picked, prepared by a special process and packed solid, either plain or with Chili Sauce.

All the spices and sauces used in processing RED CROSS BEANS are very carefully selected with an ideal of absolute purity in view.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kind of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent grocers, who are on the look out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

Is the "Library Voting Contest" a Fake?

Letter From Retail Merchant Who Places It Under Trading Stamp Act—How the Scheme Is Worked—Piano Contest Arranged to Counteract it in Uxbridge —The Value of These Contests to the Promoters.

Editor of the Canadian Grocer.—Allow me a small space in your journal to say a word about a scheme that is being exploited through Ontario at present, and which is without doubt a very profitable one to the promoters. It is called a "Library Voting Contest." An agent canvasses a town for 25 or 30 merchants to subscribe about thirty dollars each for which they are given small ballots that entitle the customers free of charge, to mark for any church, institution or hospital that they wish.

The promoters give two bookcases or one, according to the size of the town and the amount subscribed, comprised of three sections, and containing from 100 to 150 miscellaneous books. This bookcase and books are to go at a certain time to the winning institution with the highest number of ballots. The total cost of bookcases and books would be to the promoters from $75 to $100, leaving a net profit of say $500 on a week's work; and yet it is said there is no profit in the book business. Think of it: five hundred per cent., and yet in every town where it has been offered, so far as is known, the merchants have entered the scheme and put up their good money to establish what is nothing but a trading stamp business, a thing that they all complained of bitterly until the government had it stopped and made a criminal offence. I should say that this "Library Voting Contest" is an infraction of the law, and that those using it must lay themselves open to a charge and fine for doing it. If any of these merchants would buy thirty dollars' worth of books and give part to a church and part to a hospital I am certain they would derive more benefit and business than by this profitable scheme to the promoters.

This letter is written with the hope that merchants in Ontario will give it a cold shoulder, as it is without doubt a very profitable one to the men getting it up, and exactly the opposite to the merchants in it. Thirty dollars spent in good advertising would be far better and would keep away that old trading stamp iniquity that the business men suffered from for years.

RETAIL MERCHANT.

This letter should call a halt to those who have been contemplating entering this proposition. The promoters are gradually extending their operations over Ontario and reports have come in that already Ingersoll, Newmarket, Burlington, Oshawa, Uxbridge and North Bay have been canvassed.

It is a question whether this is a legal undertaking or not. Whether it is or isn't, merchants should proceed slowly or they will find themselves in a hole.

Opposition in Uxbridge.

A Grocer representative was in Uxbridge during the week where, as noted above, the Library Voting Contest is in progress. The promoters secured the co-operation of 9 merchants in their project, each of whom advanced about $25 in support of the library. That would amount to $225. Some of those who are not in the scheme say that the libary will be worth to the individual or institution getting it about $25 or $30. Apart from the cost of the library, ballots and probably a book case, who gets the balance? Does it remain in Uxbridge? Supposing the entire cost of the books and paraphernalia is $50, do the merchants get any benefit from the other $175? You say the nine may, but what about the town taken as a whole?

To counteract this scheme on the part of the nine in conjunction with the promoters, the other merchants claim to have hit upon something novel. They joined together and bought a piano for some $250—a piano made in Uxbridge. It didn't cost each as much as $25. There is a voting contest on this piano now going on, and since the recipient gets $250 value—almost 10 times the value of the library—everybody is much more interested in it than in the library. The piano is being shown in one of the windows. Since it is made at home, the money all remains at home—none of it goes to enrich any promoter from another country.

Trading Stamp Act.

The question is whether the scheme is illegal or not. It was stated some time ago in these columns that in the estimation of E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, and the city solicitor of Ingersoll, it came under the Trading Stamp Act passed by the Ontario government in 1901.

The Statutes of Ontario of that year refer to this Act as follows:

TRADING STAMPS, COUPONS, ETC.

41. For prohibiting the giving, selling, distributing or receiving of trading stamps, coupons, or other similar devices, and for prohibiting the giving, selling or dealing therewith by any person, firm, or corporation engaged in trade or business.

(a) No such by-law shall apply to any merchant or manufacturer who places in or upon packages of goods, or delivers to the purchasers of goods sold or manufactured by him, tickets or coupons to be redeemed by such merchant or manufacturer either in money or merchandise."

This law came into effect on January 1, 1902.

Test Case Necessary.

No person, of course, can say definitely that this Library Voting Contest is illegal until a test case has been made. The expression of an opinion is the limit, and until some person or municipality decides to test its legality, these promoters will have a free hand in their operations.

Apart from the legal point of view, is it good business? A merchant gives away $30 to aid in the purchase of a library, and to pay the promoters who have little or no interest in the well-being of the town. The merchant expects to get more business from the interest created in the coupons. Let us suppose he makes a net profit of 6 per cent. on his turnover; what value of goods must he sell in order to get back in profits his $30? This makes a simple question in mathematics—$6 is the profit on $100 sales; $1 is profit on $16 2-3 sales; therefore, $30 is the profit on $500 in sales. Remember that this $500 worth of goods must be sold to new customers—customers who are buying from the merchant in consideration of the fact that he is carrying library coupons.

Is it worth it? Supposing that the $30 had been spent in advertising, to create a good-will — a reputation—for the business; or that it had been used to purchase a better assortment of goods for the Christmas trade! Wouldn't it have done more good than giving these promoters say 80 per cent. or $24 of it?

If the merchants of a town or city desire to stamp out any such scheme as this, how are they to do it? The solution lies in a committee to deal with all advertising propositions which might be called a "Fake Advertising Committee." This is the method used in Winnipeg.

Let every merchant think over the matter.

CONTEST ON IN GUELPH.

Guelph, Ont., Dec. 15.—The library voting scheme has reached this city, and firms representing almost every line of business, including grocers and hardwaremen, dry goods and druggists, have taken up the scheme. The voting has been fairly heavy, but from an outsider's point of view, it does not seem very attractive, especially during the regular Christmas trade, when variety of offerings, with quality, seem to be better trade getters.

Christmas Window a Picture or Salesman

Reasons Why the Merchant Should Aim to Make the Window Talk for Him Rather Than Have It Simply Shout A "Merry Christmas"—In Order to Make It Pay for The Labor and Expense in Designing, It Ought to Get Business.

By Victor Lauriston.

Was that elaborate Christmas window worth the trouble?

That's the question you'll likely ask when the rush is all over, and from the doldrums of January you look back upon the time and labor—and money—you spent in designing that Christmas Eve display, putting it together, and making it the most gorgeously Christmassy thing of its kind in town.

And the answer to that question of yours will depend entirely upon what you got out of that window display; and that in turn will depend upon what you put into it.

Merchants have told me, time and again, that the beautiful, elaborate and generally admired Christmas displays have as a rule proven more trouble than they're worth. They have given hours to the task of devising window displays that were not merely window displays, but veritable panoramas of Christmas, with Santa Claus, the reindeer, the sleigh, the snow-flakes, the chimney, the holly, the evergreens, in fact, the whole tradition of Christmas depicted to an accompaniment of Christmas trees a Christmas bells—and at the end of all, they've asked: "Was it worth trouble?" and answered: "No." A there's a whole mountain range of tr in that.

Should be a Business-Getter.

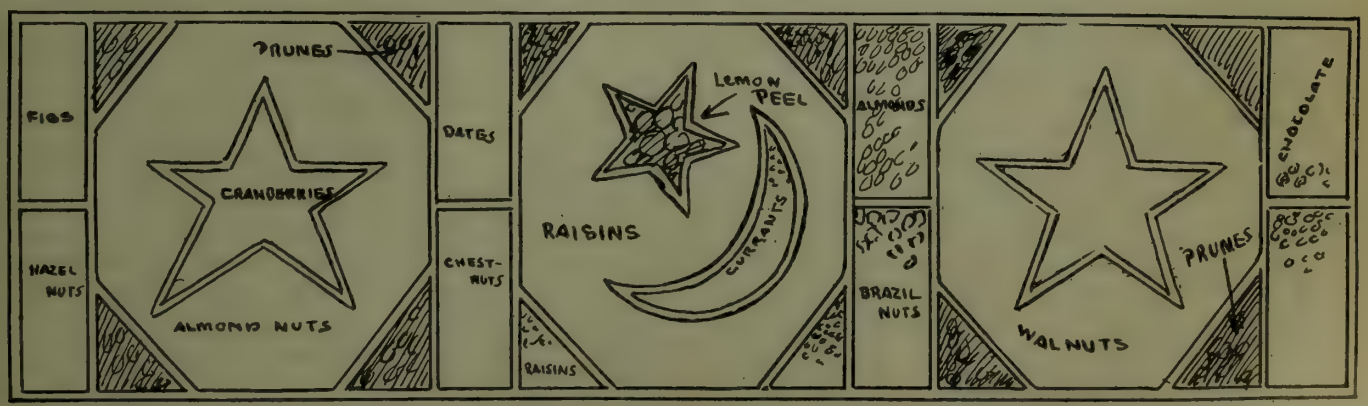
After all, what is a window-display—what is its basic purpose? You've long since flung away to the four winds of heaven that o'd idea that a show window was merely a place to store goods for which you couldn't find room upon the shelves. That window, you know, as every merchant nowadays knows, possesses big possibilities as a business-getter. But have you grasped the conception of your window display as an extra salesman for your business—a hustling clerk, standing always at the front of your store, telling passers-by what they ought to purchase, and what you have to sell—and convincing them that now is the time, and here is the place to buy?

Just here many Christmas windows fail; elaborate, beautiful windows, too. Your Santa Claus display tells the wayfarer that this is the Christmas season—but who in Canada doesn't know that mid-December is the Christmas season? What the display tells him is superfluous. And it goes no further than that. It does not tell him what he would like to know—what he should buy for Christmas, and what you offer to satisfy his needs.

Make Appeals Specific.

Just as in your newspaper advertising, your special Christmastide letters and printed booklets, so in your Christmas window display, you chat with the present and prospective customer. The more specific, definite and appealing your line of talk, the more effective its results. Don't be satisfied merely with talking Christmas. Talk Christmas goods as well. What is more, be specific. Talk your own Christmas goods. Make your window individual in its distinction from all other Christmas windows; and make it convincing. If you have a Christmas specialty that the other fellows aren't featuring, feature it yourself. If you've a new Christmas line of goods, push that line to the front.

Don't be content with a Christmas window display that just shouts "Merry Christmas!" to the passers-by. Put in something also which says: "Come in and see me."



That's the ideal of a Christmas window display, or of any other window display. Not just a picture; but a suggestive chat with the man in the street, and an irresistible invitation to him to come in and purchase. That's the ideal. It's for the window-designer to spell out his arguments in goods, show-cards and price tags, in such a plain, appealing and convincing way that all who run may read, and cannot help but halt and buy there.

Chas. Rishor, wholesale grocer, Peterboro', Ont., was in Toronto during the week.

A jury in a district court at Des Moines, U.S.A., recently returned a verdict favoring a woman creditor and gave her judgment of $142 against the Des Moines Retail Grocers' Association for the wrongful suing out of an attachment. The jury held that the action of the Grocers' Association was wrong and that she should be given damages for the value of the furniture which had been taken from her and sold.

A retail concern advertised that every twentieth sale would be given free to the lucky purchaser, regardless of the value of the purchase made. As a special feature of the sale a loud gong on top of the building was wrung whenever the twentieth sale was made. While some of the sales donated were large, the total increase in business was so great that it became a permanent feature of the firm's advertising policy.

DRIED FRUIT AND NUT WINDOW.

The above drawing illustrates an outline for the floor of a Christmas window. The partitions are made from slats measuring 1 x ¼ inches, and cut to suit the different lengths.

The centre star is filled with lemon, orange and citron peel, and the moon with currants, both being surrounded with a bed of raisins. The corners contain Sultana raisins. The outside stars contain cranberries, and are surrounded with almond nuts on one side and walnuts on the other, the corners being filled in with prunes. The long strips forming the partitions are filled with figs, dates, Brazil nuts, hazel nuts, shelled almonds, chocolates and chestnuts. The rear of the window may be arranged with oranges, grapefruit, etc., so as to make an attractive background. A few price tickets would also be acceptable. A window of this character was arranged for the Xmas season by J. W. Island, Toronto.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

Montreal Retail Grocery Firm Packs Cases of Christmas Goods Which are Purchased by the Wealthy and Given to Poor Friends — New Brunswick Dealers Advertise Goods to be Sold at 25 Cents — Ottawa Grocers Charge Frauds in Apple Packing—Merchants Fined Under New Food Standards—London Dealer Uses Blackboard in Front of His Store.

Pack Cases of Xmas Foods.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—Last year at the request of a number of the customers of Fraser, Viger & Co., that firm placed on the market special holiday cases of groceries and provisions to sell at certain prices. These were sold to those who had friends not in a position to spend a large sum in the Christmas goods that bring good cheer into the home.

The idea worked so well that Fraser, Viger & Co. are doing the same thing this year, and advertise the list of goods that go to make up the case. For instance, Case No. 4 at $5.50, contains a plum-pudding, tea, coffee, table raisins, mixed nuts, crackers, figs oranges, jam, extract of beef, basket of apples, salmon, cocoa, sugar and pickles, the quantity in each case being named.

Cases are also sold costing $10 and $15. These cases are delivered free by express to any point in Quebec, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces.

In their ad. they say: "There is many a poor family who would greatly appreciate getting one of these cases of groceries and provisions about Christmas time."

Advertise a 25 Cent List.

Moncton, N. B., Dec. 17. — In the course of a well-written ad. in a local paper, The Two Barkers, Ltd., retail dealers, give a lengthy list of articles which they offer for sale at 25 cents. In the list are the following: 3 cans fresh clams; 6 cans domestic sardines; 6 packages assorted jelly powder, etc. There were 28 articles in all mentioned, each for 25 cents.

In the section of the ad. referring to cigars, they say: "If you want a box of cigars for either yourself or your friends, see our line and get our prices. We can save you about one-half on cigars by the box." This was followed by the prices, making a good advertisement.

Criticism might be made of the manner in which the ad. was set; heavy, large black type used at the top, one side and bot- announcing an auction sale. Smaller type and straight rather than wiggly rules would tend to make the entire appearance more dignified.

Frauds in marking of Apples.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—At the last meeting of the local Retail Grocers' Association, members voiced complaints against the marking of apples, alleging dishonesty. A McNeill, head of the Fruit Division, Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa, was present, and listened to the statements made.

The law requires that all barrels of apples must be marked: Fancy; No. 1; No. 2; or No. 3, as the case may be.

F. W. Forde remarked that almost every day the grocers are buying apples marked No. 1, which when opened would not grade above No. 2.

The number or classes of the apple is supposed to be placed on the outside of the barrel by the packer. However, one grocer stated that he bought a barrel on the market marked No. 1. When it came to the store and he began to open it the paint with which the number was stamped rubbed off, showing that it had only been put on a few hours, certainly not when the apples were packed. Inside were small inferior apples, which would not pass as No. 2's.

Other grocers gave similar experiences of being the victims of dishonest marking, where apples marked No. 1 were sold to them at high prices this year and were not No. 1 by any means.

The high price of apples this year makes any fraud in marking an important feature, and the Grocers' Association will further discuss ways and means of protecting themselves and the public against it.

Report Good Results.

Owen Sound, Dec. 15.—While it may be rather late to refer to the question of exhibits of retail dealers at the fall fairs, yet the experience of Prentice & Sproule, of this town, will be interesting to those who have had such advertising under consideration and who have never tried it out.

"We have had good results from our exhibit," say Prentice & Sproule. "We might add that we have sold goods and had enquiries for others which we exhibited at the fair and which prior to that time had never been asked for.

"In fact some of our customers have told us that they had no idea we handled some lines we demonstrated."

Blackboard for Advertising.

London, Ont., Dec. 15.—Harry Ranahan, Richmond street, is one of the few if not the only grocer in London who uses a blackboard outside for advertising. It carries a large heading: "Quality Store," and being about four feet high has plenty of room for bulletins of special offerings or seasonable goods. In the absence of anything very special it announces: "Our prices are right;" "No trouble to show goods or quote prices," and other little statements of the kind.

French & Co., fruit and confectionery dealers on Dundas street, near Richmond, make a practice of cutting layer figs across the rows with a common knife, displaying sections about six inches long, one row wide, and as deep as the figs are packed in the box. These cross-sections make an inviting display of an aritcle which is not always of an attractive appearance, and it is always easy to find a section that will be of the size a customer wishes. The computing scale tells at a glance what the value is.

Food Standards Violated.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 15.—The retail stores of the city have taken on their Christmas garb and are very attractive. Many of the grocers are handling a larger line of fancy confectionery, Christmas crackers and cosaques, etc., than ever before and these vari-colored packages give the show windows and store interiors a bright appearance.

The first cases of violation of the new food standards for meats to come before the court in St. John were heard last week. As a result of information laid by Dr. Murray, inspector, of Ottawa, a meat and a grocery firm were fined $200 each. The offence in the first case was for exporting uninspected pork to the West Indies and for wrongfully using government labels on the shipment, and in the second case for attempting to ship uninspected pork and labelling it as fish.

Early Closing in Berlin.

Berlin, Ont., Dec. 15.—There was some real "early closing" in Berlin last Saturday. Almost every store closed at exactly 10 o'clock, and the remainder a few minutes later. Merchants on King street report that business was transacted considerably earlier, and that it might not be impossible to close at 9 o'clock. Chief of Police O'Neill announces that the early closing by-law will be enforced in future.

GODERICH GENERAL DELIVERY

In last week's issue there was an item regarding the establishment of a General Delivery in Goderich, Ont., in which it was stated that some of the grocers had to resort to their own deliveries on Saturday night on account of the rush. A reader in Goderich writes to say that there was a slight error in this. The facts are that those in charge of the General Delivery, wishing to use an extra horse, secured one from a merchant. The new system, he further states, is giving good satisfaction.

A. J. H. Phasey, grocer, Toronto, has assigned to J. P. Langley.

Geo. E. Bristol, Hamilton, Ont., with Mrs. Bristol, has gone on a two or three months' holiday trip to Florida and the West Indies.

SHORT TALKS TO CLERKS

By An Ex-Clerk

The personal appearance of the retail clerk is important enough to cover the space I am going to use in this Journal; in fact, important enough to cover many times the space.

Since I was a retail clerk and went into another line of commerce, I was compelled to take a schooling. At first I naturally thought I knew a good deal about taking care of myself and my appearance etc.; but by making comparisons with others, I concluded that I had simply been conceited—and I had this all knocked out of me.

Among the first instructions I received were:

A shave every morning.
A shine every morning.
Clean linen, cuffs and collar.

Many of you who read this little talk realize how important personal appearance is. I have gone into retail stores almost daily, and many a day I have seen clerks with a two days' growth on their face, soiled aprons, soiled collars, and an excuse for clean cuffs.

A Shave Every Morning, Among the First Instructions.

Do you ever stop to think what an impression this must make—what an advertisement it is for you? I mean a BAD advertisement. Well, I will tell you. You wait on probably one hundred people a day. You have just made one hundred bad impressions! Do you think that is a good thing? I don't.

Now, I know that I am talking to a body of men who have to work, and not to a bunch of Bank Presidents and other members of the high-hat-and-frock-coat brigade. However, that does not make the question of personal appearance any less important to you.

Now, on reading this, ask yourself the question, "How many of the boys in the store had a shine this morning? "How many are wearing linen that rightfully should be reposing in the laundry bag, instead of exhibiting itself behind a grocery counter where particular ladies are buying things to eat?"

How long since you had a hair-cut? Does your face show that it has recently had a nice, clean shave? Some of you say, "What has that to do with selling groceries?" Well, let me tell you it has a lot to do with it.

Mrs. Blank, who happens to be of a particular disposition, enters the store and wants half a pound of your best cheese. She probably stands and watches you cut it. Remember she has to eat this cheese—not you! And she cannot help noting your dirty apron, dirty linen, the two days' growth on your face, and whether your hands are clean or not, and whether your nails were ever clean.

Her sense of delicacy will prevent her from passing any comment. She will take the cheese, pay for it and walk out. It would be worth a good deal of money to your employer could he be a mind-reader and analyze that lady's thoughts.

People make a mental memo of bad impressions—a much stronger memo than they do of good ones. The motto is, avoid the bad ones!

Now, don't think that this applies only to the purchase of cheese. It might in your mind, but it won't in hers. She will think the whole store is run on the same plan. She will think your delivery boxes and baskets are dirty; she will think you are careless with your wrapping paper. She will think the shelves are covered with fly-specks. Well, she will just think so many things about it that probably she won't come back, and she may mention her experience about your store to her friends.

I have heard these comments myself. I have been fortunate enough to be able now to mingle with people of the class which I have described, such as the particular housewife. I have a wife of my own who is somewhat particular—in everything, possibly, but her choice of a husband. However, I have heard her many times comment on the unclean appearance of clerks in certain stores.

Now for a comparison. You go into a store where every clerk has the interests of the store at heart. You meet a clerk with a clean collar, a clean apron, clean face and hands, and tidy looking. That makes a good impression.

Remember, you never know who is looking at you; you never know who is watching you. There is one man watching you all the time, although a great many of you seem to think he does not. That is your employer. He sees everything.

A tidy appearance helps to hold trade, is pleasing to the eye,—so that personal appearance is a very important thing in the life of any retail clerk. You may argue that your employer would refuse to pay for the laundering of clean aprons, or a white linen coat if you happen to use one in the store—and it is a good thing to use. If he does, he is a shortsighted employer. He will spend in advertising hundreds of times the cost of laundry, and not get the same result.

Now, boys, you will have to agree with me that your personal appearance is a very important thing in the life of the retail clerk. And more than that, let me tell you that the greatest educator in the world to-day is HABIT. You create a habit, and it will follow you all your life.

And don't forget one thing: The first impression is often the lasting one. A new customer walks into the store. Probably she has just moved into the neighborhood. The first impression she gets is the one that will stay with her, and on that impression depends whether she will stay with the store or not.

The Particular Customer Will Scrutinize Your Personal Appearance.

Don't let it make any difference to you how the other clerks look—just you take care of yourself; and if the rest are negligent, you will stand out so prominently in comparison that not only will the others be ashamed of themselves, but your employer will take quick notice—and most likely some other employer as well. Good business men are always looking for ambitious employes.

Whom do you think would be picked out first for a better job than what you have?—the untidy clerk, as described, or the clean and tidy clerk as described?

If it pays any merchant in the world to advertise, it will pay YOU to advertise—and your best method is your appearance.

Differences in Special and Cut Prices

Story of a Price Cutting Incident Which Reflected on the Originator—Washing Powder Had Regular Price of 25 Cents—Cut to 22 and 20, and Eventually 18 Cents—Profit All Given Away—Ads. Suggested Illustrating Special Prices.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Special Prices.

Special prices and cut prices are two different things. Special prices are right, correct, legitimate; cut prices are demoralizing to merchant and customer alike. Let me illustrate.

When I went behind the counter in 1878 I think I remember a certain brand of washing powder as a staple, and I know that B——'s was there. These were in small packages, designed, I think, to sell at 10 cents each. But it is like yesterday that I recall the day in about 1883, when I saw G——t washing powder for the first time. Here was a package of "Washing Powder" of such generous size as to carry the impression that there was enough for a wash, and to scrub with, and to use for cleaning, without necessitating a continual running to the store for more. In other words, this was a package that seemed really worth while. And the selling price, as the salesman so well put it, was the popular figure of 25 cents —easy to learn, to remember, and to make change for. It seemed all right, and we stocked it and sold a lot of it. I should premise here, however, that, as I have said before in these columns, our business was of a staple character, far removed from fancy fruits, shelled nuts and olive oils; and the elder Johnson had some old-fashioned notions about selling at legitimate prices, irrespective of what might be called "regular" prices.

How the Prices Were Cut.

Hence it was not long before G——t was sold by us at 22 cents; in fact I think that was the price at which we started it. Well, the result was that almost immediately everybody was selling at 22 cents; then those who did not know, as the elder Johnson did know, just what was a legitimate, businesslike margin, cut the price to 20 cents, then 18 cents, and the profit was a minus quantity. That is price-cutting.

Use of Special Prices.

Now here is the difference. Special prices are legitimate, and a valuable feature for the advertiser, because the concession is made on goods and brands under his own individual control. When you advertise Smith's 30 cent coffee for a week at the special price of 28 cents, 5 pounds for $1.15, you are advertising Smith and only Smith. You are not demoralizing anybody's business. You are not working up any demand on which the other fellow can trade. You are not trading on anybody else's work or good will. Your neighbor cannot gain any advantage from what you do, for obviously he cannot sell Smith's goods, nor even say his goods are "the same as Smith's," because the densest competitor will see that thus he would only be playing your game for you. So the special price, named for a certain definite time, or on certain quantities, applies to your business only. The reduced or special price has its proper uses, and the live merchant will use it regularly in building his trade.

Suggestion for Coffee Ad.

I have told you that "Mother" knows values, and she certainly does. She may not, however, have tried your service in certain lines—probably coffee, as coffee is one of the things about which she is characteristically conservative. You may have got her to try your cranberries, and uncolored Ceylon tea, and various other things, by your snappy little ads.; but she still holds off on coffee, because coffee either makes or unmakes the breakfast, and "Father likes his coffee just so, or his day is spoiled, etc." As you progress in this work of planning out little catchy evening readings for the family, you will inevitably get around to your coffee department; you will kind of wake up to the fact that the coffee trade should be yours, and that you can get it if you go after it. Thus you will say:

> Smith's Bokava Coffee at 30 cents a pound is really out of the ordinary; rich, mild, full "bouquet," very flavory. This week, per pound, 28 cents. By all means try it.

And as "Mother" reads that over—and goes back over it a second time, as she has got used to looking for your talks by this time, she concludes to take the plunge, and next morning she does try it. It is up to you, then, as a good merchant, to see that the coffee is right; and, if you do, you will have added one good customer to your list.

Retain Purchaser's Confidence.

The right way to do this is to offer one coffee at a time, at a special price, for the period stated, and never be guilty of extending the time by a day, nor give anybody the special figure after the time has expired. This will gain you the confidence of your readers, who respect a man in just the proportion as he shows plainly that he means just what he says.

Say:

> Smith's pure Ceylon tea, regular 60 cents, special at 54 cents this week. You, who are familiar with Smith's teas know how cheering is the cup of pure Ceylon, when properly selected for flavor and body—not for looks. This is the kind you want. Order it this week.

All of which does not mean for a minute that you shall not quote a company's tea you are selling; no, not at all. But when you quote such a brand, name the price fixed on it by the company, and back up the work those people are doing to give you an assured, legitimate margin. When you name prices on such things you are indicating to all the "Mothers" in your town that "Smith has everything." And you are also taking proper advantage of the money the importer is spending to establish a demand of which you are entitled to reap your share of benefit. You can greatly increase your share by backing up the importer's general advertising by your own local advertising in this way.

In this way you build your business on legitimate demand, honestly cultivated. Your house is not founded on sand, but on the rock of solid facts. You are in a position to make good any time on your representations. And you are not harming a single legitimate business interest. This is a good deal to say, when you come to think of it. It contravenes a good deal of what we hear about it being impossible to get business unless you offer "inducements" — "inducements" in this case meaning cut prices. For really the man who depends on that kind of inducements to his trade is working on sorry lines. He will have no following but the chronic bargain hunter; and the bargain hunter never did any grocer any lasting good.

Enforcing of Fixed Prices.

It is a question both of law and of ethics, to what extent it is feasible, practicable and good public policy to enforce the maintenance of prices such as the manufacturer or producer names on his brands. I feel very strongly that the manufacturer should be backed up by every grocer. I am satisfied, too, that I can show that the owner of a trademark or trade-name, can protect his goods against the cutter.

But simply as a matter of farsighted business, the retailer will fare best who adopts the policy of upholding the established price on every article on which the maker is broad enough to fix a price. Think over the case of a certain company's brand of tea, as sketched above. Think of the careful planning and thought which has gone into the establishment of a demand based on quality at the prices named by the importer. Think of the skill behind the blends. Is not such a line entitled to your support; and will it not pay you to support it?

When a new catalog comes in, or a new number of a trade journal, have the head clerk go through it and mark the things he thinks ought to be considered by you. You will get a new point of view in that way.

Nothing in the way of selling helps is cheaper than price tags, and not one merchant in a thousand uses as many of them as he ought.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

THE TIME TO ACT.

This week a delegation of 500 western Canadian farmers call upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his Cabinet at Ottawa. Today, Friday, is the time appointed.

These farmers will make five requests. Among the number is: "The passing of a law to permit the formation of Co-operative Societies." They are out after the Retail Merchants' Association, says a despatch, which was the most active body in having the Co-operative Bill knocked in the head at the last session of Parliament.

This deputation represents 28,000 farmers in that powerful organization known as The Grain Grower's Association.

What will likely happen?

Can it be that the merchants of Canada have tarried too long a time on this Co-operative Bill question? Do these farmers realize the effect on the building up of western towns should a bill go through giving special privileges to promoters of co-operative societies? Would it not mean the depletion of towns, the removal of the backbone of commercial centres if these privileges were carried to the extreme?

How easy it is for some firebrand promoter to incite those unfamiliar with trade conditions to an antagonistic feeling against the merchants by preaching "robbery," "hold-ups," etc., on the part of the middleman!

When the fact is learned that the merchants of the country are just as important to the general welfare as the farmer; that the importance and value of a community is dependent upon its proximity to a thriving town or city and that the thrift of the town or city is dependent upon the merchants, then will there be a better understanding between the two.

Co-operative joint-stock companies not responsible to parliament tend to wildcat promotions where the promoter gets the fleece of the innocents.

The time to act is now. Personally interview or write your member in the Dominion House of Commons and ask him to reflect upon the future results of such a bill.

WATCH THE PARCEL POST.

The Parcel Post fever is again in the air. President Taft, of the United States has stated in his address to the people that the Government would urge a change in the law whereby parcels could be sent by post cheaper than is now the case. It would mean that a great deal of the express business would be eliminated or rather shifted over to the post office.

Looking on the surface of such a change, one is apt to conclude that it is a popular move since those ordering goods by mail would get them cheaper.

But the point is: Who is behind this? And the answer comes through the United States press which makes no bones about it—"The Mail-Order Houses." They are the institutions that will derive the great benefit and at, not only the expense of the retail merchant, but at the expense of the general welfare of the country.

For, looking broadly into the question of Parcel Post, one is bound to come to the conclusion that every extra dollar sent from a certain community to a mail-order house on account of this system, will only injure the community to that extent. That dollar spent at home tends to enrich and build up the community; when it goes to the mail-order house it enriches an institution which has no more respect for the community than the man in the moon and which would bleed it for every dollar there is in it if it had the opportunity.

This is the question our legislators must look squarely in the face if, when they are dead and gone, their names are to be placed on the statesman's roll of fame. "The greatest good for the greatest number" must be their banner and not, "How many votes will this get me if I support it?"

Parcel Post is talked about in Canada again. Mail-order houses want to be able to distribute goods cheaply by mail; they want to have the permission to send a parcel from Toronto to Halifax or Vancouver as cheaply as to Port Hope. They are seeking a national rate.

What are Canadian merchants going to do about it? Stand idle and let it come? No, this must not be. Let every association in Canada oppose it by resolution which will be sent to the proper authority; this resolution must not merely object, but it must state the reasons. Let the question be treated fairly and on a broad basis and those legislators who pride themselves as statesmen and not of the "party-heeler" stripe, will soon see the wisdom of the opposition.

The question will be in Canada for certain—get in your work ahead of it.

SUGAR TEMPORARILY FIRM.

With the visible supply of raw sugar in Europe and America amounting to almost 300,000 tons in excess of last year at this time, yet the refined market went up 20 to 30 cents in New York during the week.

The cause is a temporary scarcity in raws and relief may not come until the first week in January when new Cuba shipments will arrive. In the meantime U.S. jobbers are in a quandary. They have been caught with light stocks in the face of this big advance and do not know just when lower prices will be realized.

Hand to mouth buying is the order of the day and just at present it looks as if ruling prices will hold until the first or second week of the new year.

TO TAKE IN CIVIL SERVANTS.

It is difficult for anyone who thinks, to understand why it is that civil servants are exempt from the responsibility of paying their debts. The Canadian law of garnishment which permits a creditor collecting over $25 of a debtor's wages does not apply to them.

What good purpose does this serve? There is certainly none in sight. It is merely placing a premium on dishonesty on the part of government employes and is something that shouldn't be.

A bill has been introduced into the House of Commons by one of the Quebec members, aiming to place civil servants on the same plane as the remainder of mortals. Every merchant hopes to see it become law and particularly those in such places as Ottawa, Moncton, N.B., etc., who have to suffer the greatest. Ask your M.P. to lend his support.

If you sell plum-puddings of good quality run an ad. in your advertising space something like this:

"Yes, it's delicious—made from the choicest ingredients—couldn't be made finer—ideal Plum Pudding for Christmas. Finest flour, fruits and seasoning, and the utmost care given to every detail in making."

Be sure to quote retail prices.

Markets – Dried Fruits Much Firmer

All Down the List There is a Feeling of Strength in Primary Markets That May Extend to Retailers—Evaporated Apples are Steadily Becoming Dearer—Sugar Market Shows Temporary Strength—Coffee and Spices are Decidedly Firm and New Quotations May be Made in Some Lines Before Long.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

"Evap" Apples—Prices advanced.

Coffee.—Market firm.

Cloves and Ginger.—Very firm.

Toronto, Dec. 15.—The near approach of the holiday season and the first of the new year finds the wholesale trade beginning to prepare to wind up another twelve months' business and turn over to the unused page of a new year of fresh endeavors. There is still a fairly good amount of business passing, but it seems to be in odds and ends. The twelfth hour purchaser of a supply of nuts or fruit, and the unusual everyday demand for necessaries that must be carried no matter what season is passing.

Dried fruits are all particularly strong. Early in the season when news from the different vineyards and orchards of the world's crops were being received it was felt that the coming year would find prices ruling high. The opening lived up to expectations, but since then currants and raisins have been easier but have come back again with additional strength and are even stronger now than before their lapse.

In this respect evaporated apples are certainly strong and purchases now made at the factory at ten cents are considered good buying. It is not so long ago that these same evaps were quoted to the retailer at that price.

Sugar is temporarily firmer but with the new crop supplies exerting their influence it is expected that it will drop to the level generally felt under this influence.

Sugar.—The winding up of old crop stocks recently, sent prices up 20 to 30 cents in New York, but refined sugars were untouched here. The market is expected to remain about in its present condition until probably the middle of January when the new crop will begin to exert an influence and prices should begin to decline to the usual opening l vel. This is what usually happens, and what is expected this season following the usual course. The market here is steady with a normal activity. From hand to mouth is the character of the most of the business in sugar just now.

Dried Fruits.—The feeling in dried fruits seems to be one of general strength. Prunes are dearer and in regard to all California fruit, European buyers who have already taken half the crop are now coming back for more and are buying at a high price. Seeded raisins are quoted at an advance in the primary markets, but the wholesalers have not yet heard of it as far as they are directly concerned. Peaches are firm, apricots are nearly cleaned up and the whole situation is one of strength. Currants and raisins are both decidedly firm and the advance in primary quotations in each case is accompanied by an interesting bit of news. Not long ago Valencias were dragging along with enquiry dull and business almost at a standstill. Some buyer dropped his quotations a little, others followed and at the lower price buying brightened and there has been since a steady trade, with prices regaining their old position and they are now higher than before the decline. The situation has in fact greatly improved.

Currants are much stronger. The crop was considerably underestimated, consumption is greatly increased as the result of the short crop of other dried fruits, the retention of 35% of the crop under the new law was carried out and for ordinary use the amount of currants left is admittedly too small. The result is that the market is firm and the new law receives its first real test with results that must be gratifying to those who advocated it.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—"We are bound to see higher prices," said a dealer this week, when questioned about tomato prices. "There are none now in first hands, in fact nearly every line of canned goods is cleaned up."

Advices from the Pacific Coast report an alarming shortage in salmon, and only 50% of the orders taken will be filled.

Higher prices are looked for after the first of the year.

TORONTO.—Gallon apples are firm, owing to the scarcity of stocks. The condition of tomatoes, peas, etc., is about the same. Owing to the lightness of the supply on hand, holders are doing about what they like. A jobber said recently that he intended to go the rounds of the retailers and pick up a few of the bargain snaps that were being offered. By reselling them he knew he could make a profit. Peas going at ten cents and a few other lines almost as easy are particularly enticing to him. On the street it is said the demand continues appreciable and no one is heard speaking of disappointment.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Syrups and Molasses—Good demand.

Dried Fruits—Still firm.

Coffee—Weaker tone.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—In the past month or so there has been a material change in the tone of many grocery markets. One of the principal items displaying weakness was sugar. Among the items which continue high are dried fruits. Cream of tartar is another in which distinctly higher prices prevail.

Generally speaking, the grocery market requires watching and in many lines buyers should be careful.

Sugar.—There is no change in the sugar market and things are quiet. In view of the prospectively larger sugar crop during the present campaign, the buying of sugar in large consuming countries has been of a hand-to-mouth character and this fact coupled with the unsettled feeling in the U.S. and European markets has been responsible for the general easier feeling in raw sugar values. Temporarily sugar is firm on the N.Y. market.

Syrups and Molasses.—Some dealers are surprised at the fair demand for both syrups and molasses, as there are generally few inquiries for them at this time of the year. The outlook is now more encouraging than anticipated and there will probably be a fair demand for molasses until Xmas.

Dried Fruits.—There seems to be a great scarcity of prunes at the present time. Latest advices from California say that the prune crop is practically all cleared up. Prices are now higher than they have been for the past ten years.

Direct importations of Valencia raisins are being well cleaned up and stocks are not large. No change in prices, however, is expected as a new crop will be on hand about January.

Stocks of figs and dates are being reduced owing to heavy Xmas demand.

Coffee.—There was a poorer tone in the coffee market this week than it has known for some time. The feeling that there has been such a great advance that there should be a material reaction is gaining ground, and it is believed that there will be a drop soon.

The Brazilian supply of Brazilian coffee in and afloat to the United States is said to be 2,978,283 bags, against 4,530.358 last year, and 3,723,340 two years ago.

Winnipeg, Dec. 15.—During the last few days the climax has been reached in the ordering from every centre of the West. Although many orders were repeats, yet they were large, and for a wide range of stock. Fortunately local houses were prepared for the rush, and orders were filled satisfactorily. There was great demand for many lines not quoted below, such as jams, spices, and fancy biscuits.

It happens at the present time that the strenuous demand for the full list, and the limited quantity at the disposal of the distributors, worked together to strengthen the general market. Generally speaking, all grocery lines are advancing, and are firm, as will be brought out in the individual items below.

During the past month wholesalers have not been particularly fortunate in making collections, and they are expecting that after the big turnover in the month of December, that the merchants will be in a position to square accounts after the first of the year.

Sugar.—Jobbers have been well satisfied with the demand for all kinds of sugar, and the turnover from the standpoint of the retailer and wholesaler has been particularly gratifying this season.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—There has been a great demand for all lines of dried fruits during the past two weeks. Had it not been that prices were well advanced before the demand was stimulated, it is certain that advances would be made now. Some local wholesalers are dissatisfied with the present quotations of prunes, as they claim prices are too low. It is believed that these houses will see the way clear for advances. Currants, apricots and peel are firm, and are going out in large quantities.

Syrup and Molasses.—There is a better demand for syrup just now than has been experienced for several weeks. There is plenty of stock on hand, however, and there are no probable advances in the prices. The molasses market is good, and the ordering well up to the mark.

Nuts.—Shelled nuts have formed a very large part of the trade during the past few days. Recent shipments to the city have been distributed in large quantities over a wide area of the West. Walnuts arrived late, and the shipments had to be prompt for the holiday trade. The prices are held firm at the following quotations:

Filberts	0 13½

Evaporated Apples.—These goods continue to be scarce, and buyers are not meeting with very much success in trying to get stocks. The prices have gone up a little, and so long as the demand continues greater than the supply, further advances may be expected.

Beans.—There is not much demand for beans at the time of writing, although the recent orders have been satisfactory. Stocks are plentiful, and altogether the market is in rather a weak condition. There is an attempt to maintain the following prices, and there is little likelihood of an immediate reduction.

Coffee.—The coffee market is firm, but there is nothing to indicate advances on the following quotations. The production this year has not been very heavy, according to reports, and there seems to have been created a remarkable demand for coffee the world over, which has occasioned the stiffness which is now prevailing.

Tapioca and Sago.—These lines have been advancing for some time, and every quotation that local buyers receive is a few points higher. The prices have been advancing gradually for some months, and it is possible that higher prices will be quoted to the retailer as time goes on.

Vancouver, Dec. 15.—Reductions are at last noticeable in the price of hams and bacon. One brand is now quoted at 20 cents, and another at 18. In bacon the prices are 30 and 23 cents. It is probable that another reduction will be made. The supply is good.

Flour, too, is down another ten cents, standard brands being jobbed at $6.80. On the other hand, eggs are firm. Local eggs of the very best quality are 70 and 75 cents, and retail as high as 80 cents a dozen. Some New Zealand butter is on the market, having reached here by way of San Francisco. It is of good quality, but being put up for the Old

PUBLIC AUCTION OF FREEHOLD CITY PROPERTY

INCLUDING FACTORY, MACHINERY, ETC.

Under and by virtue of the powers contained in a certain mortgage, in which Malta Vita Pure Food Company is the mortgagor, and which mortgage will be produced at the time of sale, there will be offered for sale by public auction on Saturday, the 7th day of January, 1911, at the hour of 12 o'clock noon, at the auction rooms of C. J. Townsend & Co., 68 King Street East, in the City of Toronto, the property described in the said mortgage as follows:—

"All and singular the following described properties situate, lying and being in the City of Toronto, in the County of York, and Province of Ontario, Canada, to wit: That certain parcel or tract of land and premises situate, lying and being in the City of Toronto, in the County of York, and Province of Ontario, Canada, and being composed of Lots One and Two according to Plan "684," filed in the Registry Office for the Western Division of the City of Toronto, together with all factory buildings, shops, dwellings, and other structures thereon or hereafter to be placed thereon, also all railroad tracks to be constructed thereon, and all engines, boilers, belting, shafting, fixed and movable machinery and machines, with their separate parts and attachments, fans, blowers, awnings, steam, gas and water pipes, blast pipes, steam and heating apparatus, gas fixtures, ovens, furnaces, stacks, forges, fire extinguishers, hose and other fire apparatus, electric light, power, heating apparatus, operating machines, with their separate parts and attachments, gearing, dies, office and shop furniture and factory implements, tools of trade and tools used in repairing buildings or machinery, draught animals, harnesses, stable furniture, wagons, carts and trucks, kept for use, and all other fixtures, implements and apparatus, being and intending to include all of the chattels now situate upon said described parcel of real estate, which said parcel of real estate, together with said personal property constitute its factory and plant in the said City of Toronto, used in carrying on its business of manufacturing and dealing in cereal food; also all licenses or letters patent issued by the Dominion of Canada owned and used by said mortgagor in and about its said business or otherwise, and all interest, right or claim of said mortgagor in and to any other letters patent, or in and to any interest, right or claim in any application for letters patent, now or hereafter applied for by the said Company, also all trade-mark or trade-marks registered or otherwise, and all common law trade-name or trade-names used by the said mortgagor in and about its said manufacturing business, including any and everything commonly denominated "good-will," so far as the same relates to the Dominion of Canada; also all plates and designs for labels and cartons, also all the other real, personal and mixed property of which the mortgagor is seized or possessed in the Dominion of Canada. Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments, rights, franchises, powers, privileges, immunities and appurtenances to any of the said property belonging or in any wise appertaining, and all the rents, profits, and issues arising or to arise therefrom, and all additions to any of said property when and as the same may be in any manner hereafter acquired, whether the same be for replacing or renewing that now in use or otherwise."

The property is situated on the southeast corner of King Street West and Mowat Avenue, in the City of Toronto, and has a frontage on King Street of one hundred and eight feet four and one-third inches (108' 4 1-3") by a uniform depth of one hundred and twenty-five feet (125'), and there is erected thereon a large three-storey solid brick factory, with a one-storey boiler house in addition. The main building is one hundred feet (100') in length on King Street by forty-three feet (43') on the east side of Mowat Avenue, and the boiler house addition immediately joins the main building on the south and towards the east thereof. The building has a large freight elevator situated immediately to the south of and attached to the main building. On the property is a return tubular boiler, 54' 3" flues, full flush front, with brick setting, and all standard fittings, made by Buckeye Engine Co., Salem, Ohio, and there is also a single eccentric automatic piston valve engine, with 54"x18" belt wheel pulley, made by Taylor Manufacturing Co., Chambersburg, Pa., R. M. Beck's Patent. The factory also contains the necessary working plant for the manufacture of Malta Vita, the well-known cereal food. The factory and equipment are said to be in good condition, and the business is now being carried on and Malta Vita being made therein at the present time in the usual manner.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid.

Terms—10 per cent. of the purchase money to be paid down at the time of sale and the balance of the purchase money to be paid within two weeks from the date of sale, after which the purchaser shall be entitled to immediate possession.

Success Makes Imitators

Prominent Firms Copying Red Rose Tea Methods

The other day one of the great public service corporations in Toronto was advertising in big type,

"The____Co.'s service is good service."

A leading dairy is publishing the motto,

"The _____ Dairy's milk is good milk."

A long, narrow store hanger of unusual attractiveness and original shape was issued not long ago by Red Rose Tea, and the idea was promptly copied by a firm well known to the grocery trade.

The phrase "is good tea" appears on every package of Red Rose Tea, and has been for so many years so largely and continuously used in connection with the advertising of Red Rose that in the public mind it has become practically a part of the name. The great success of the use of this phrase has evidently induced another large tea firm to make prominent use of the word "good" in several of their recent advertisements.

It is very encouraging to see the success of our methods so openly acknowledged. It shows you that wide-spread attention is being attracted by the remarkable success of Red Rose Tea. This success has been won by tea of such superior quality it has made the advertising worth while.

Imitation is the sincerest flattery. These imitations of Red Rose methods proclaim to you the honest opinion of these firms that Red Rose Tea is a good leader. It will pay you to make Red Rose your leading package tea. Its high quality will help you increase your business.

Country market is slightly deficient in salt. It is finding good sale, however, If this butter could be brought direct from New Zealand it would be imported in large quantities. It cannot come by the regular boats from Australia, as there is no room, and the Australian government will not agree to a boat calling at a New Zealand port. The reason of this is obivous. With preferential trade relations between New Zealand and Canada, Australia would lose trade, particularly in butter and mutton. The Australian butter, which will commence to arrive soon, will, if it is like what it has been for a couple of years past, be of inferior quality to that of either New Zealand or Eastern Canadian.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Dec. 15.—There were few changes in the local markets last week. Lard is lower, pure lard in tubs being quoted now at 14½ cents, and compound at 12¼ cents. This is the lowest figure for some time. Domestic pork is also lower than for some time past, present quotations being $24 to $25. American clear is offered at $24 to $26.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Dec. 15.—The wholesale grocery jobbers say that business continues good, and the retailers report that the Christmas rush is starting in earlier this season than last.

Some of the Annapolis Valley fruit growers are now putting up apples in bushel boxes for the Christmas trade. The fruit is of good quality, but the supply is scarce, and the price high. Apples in barrels are now coming on the market, and the shipments to England are practically nil. All the dealers report a heavy demand for apples, but they say that this is usually the case when there is a scarcity of anything.

DECLINE OF EGG EXPORTS.

Not an egg has left Canada this year for foreign markets although eight years ago we exported twelve million dozen representing a value of $1,733,242. The gradual decline in export is shown by the following returns:

	Dozens	Value.
1902	11,635,108	$1,733,242
1903	7,404,100	1,436,130
1904	5,780,316	1,053,396
1905	2,601,427	712,886
1906	2,921,725	495,176
1907	2,591,205	556,557
1908	1,365,890	301,818
1909	552,850	124,315

The home demand has developed with great rapidity to the extent of the supply, and it looks as if the hen will have to do overtime to keep this demand satisfied.

A Review of the Poultry Situation

Jobbers Say Farmers Seem to Be Withohlding Supplies, and That There is Likely to be Sufficient Turkeys to Go Around —Price Estimated by Some to Rule Between 20 and 25 Cents to Retailers—Provision Market is Down Again With Lard Dropping ¾ Cent. a Pound During the Week—New Laid Eggs are Dearer.

Poultry has advanced to the centre of the market stage, and will hold the spot-light for the next two weeks. The question of supply at this season is always of concern to the jobbing and retail trade, especially the latter, upon whom customers are depending for their Christmas turkey or whatever the demand centres upon. It is now stated by jobbers who have carefully covered the country in search of the different fowl that in their opinion the farmers are holding back their supplies to unload at the last minute when they would expect prices to be high. Some of the large houses are bringing in their supplies early in order that their customers may get them early. They have no doubt that they will easily dispose of their stocks. Retailers will likely have to pay from 20 to 25 cents for their goods, although some may get them even lower than that.

Geese and chickens are fairly plentiful, and although prices are likely to be a little steep this year, owing to the general high prices ruling, still the supplies are believed to be fairly plentiful, and will be sufficient to meet the demand. The whole question is hard to judge accurately, but jobbers have carefully gone into the matter, and their opinions are worth something.

Provisions are down again this week. Farmers are receiving $6.50 for live porkers at country points. Lard is down another ¾c, and several lines of pork products are also cut again. The whole market is easier, and those in the trade are wondering when the boomerang action is going to begin. There have been no particular indications that would lead one to suspect a change in the immediate future.

Dairy butter is plentiful and easier in price. New laid eggs are scarcer, and they are dearer. Other markets are normal.

TORONTO.

Provisions.—The market is still on the down grade, and during the past week has been traveling at a fairly good clip. The extent of the decline in some pork products may be understood best by a glance at the price of cooked hams. It is now down to 22 cents, as compared with 28 and 29 cents not so many moons ago. Lard dropped ¾ cents during the past week, and live hogs at country points are down to $6.40. Just how long this movement is to continue is more than the ordinary person even guesses at. "Well, I don't think it will go much further," is a remark that has been made more than once, but prices continued sliding with the same measure of speed. It is beginning to look, however, as if the bottom is in sight.

Butter.—The quantity of dairy butter coming in has greatly increased of late, and as a result prices are down a little. The closing of the cheese factories has turned the milk supply into the butter channel, hence the increase in the output of this kind. Creamery prints are firmer. The demand is maintained at a healthy figure, but the stocks have been none too heavy. Creamery is therefore firm, in contrast with the situation in dairy butter.

Eggs.—New laid eggs are still extremely scarce, and holders can secure practically any sum for good stocks. Jobbers find it next to impossible to meet present demands. The past month has brought a greater call for eggs, but the supplies were found wanting. The general price for new laids is 50 cents, although some houses are paying as high as 55 cents.

Poultry.—From now until after the new year's first day the consumption of poultry will reach a great figure. Dealers have practically made all their purchases by this time, although the country has by no means been cleared of stock. After the holiday season, however, the farmers' yards will present a vacant appearance. It seems to be a general opinion among the jobbers that the country people are holding back their stocks, and that next week there should be a pretty fair supply. Jobbers are for the most part securing their supplies early, so that those who want them may get them early. Many large cotnracts have been filled, and it is generally believed that the supply for the holiday will be liberal. The price to the retailer is likely to be about 20 or 21 cents for ordinary stock, but for the choicer goods it will likely go beyond that.

Supplies of geese, which are in demand for New Years, are reported fairly plentiful, all of which is encouraging.

Eggs. — Guaranteed fresh eggs are selling at 35c a doz., and candled goods at 30c. There is a good demand for eggs, and next week considerably higher prices are sure to be quoted. Most of the stock comes from the South and the East, as the Manitoba production is light.

Butter.—All creamery butter is jobbing at 32c. This includes Eastern Townships and local stocks. Dairy butter is 27c per pound. The prices on creamery and dairy butter will be higher soon, and jobbers claim that the market is sure to go as high as that of last year, when creamery reached 38c.

Cheese.—The market on cheese is good, and prices are gradually getting firm, as the demand has been greatly stimulated within the past few weeks, and local factories have been unable to supply the demand for the Manitoba production. Ontario stocks are not being called for to the same extent as formerly. With price and quality considered, there is no discount on the Manitoba stock.

McLaurin & Dow, grocers, Fort William, Ont., are selling their business.

In order to impress its customers with the advantages of buying there, a large store has adopted a sales slip with a special column ruled in red and headed, "What you pay elsewhere." A paragraph at the bottom of the slip urges customers to fill in the usual price paid opposite the cash price on the sales slip and then add up and note in a specific way, what they have saved on the bill. Comparisons left good impressions.

Unless you so run your store that the public will have confidence in it, price reductions and special offers will have little effect upon the class of people whose trade you want.

A Pretty Face
Does it sell goods?

"Chocolate Bordo"

You have probably read that article on "Shop Assistants who Travel on Looks."

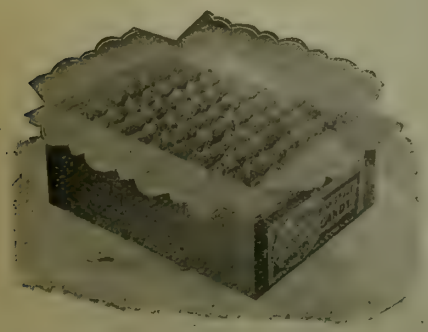
That is a very old fashioned notion isn't it—getting a pretty girl to stand behind your counter and believing she will sell goods because she is pretty. How is she to "pull" trade?

She can attract customers already in the shop, perhaps, but it is the getting in of the Customers that is the real problem. Once get a customer into your store, and the face behind your counter is not going to make a great deal of difference one way or another if you have the goods.

We can tell you how to get hold of a sure means of attracting Customers from the outside of your store to the inside.

Let it be known that you handle Our Chocolate "BORDO" which is becoming a greater attraction every day and which is drawing more people into stores to buy "BORDO" than any other Chocolate ever placed on the market. Then trade will come to you.

We want you to know more about this specialty too; if not already acquainted with it, it will be a good thing for both you and your Customers.



You will find it such a helpful line to have in your confectionery department.

It will pay you to investigate, and get "Bordo" into stock before your competitor gets hold of it.

Send us your enquiry for samples and particulars; it is a pleasure for us to furnish same.

Gallon Eggs in Bulk from China Brought to Canada

Montreal, Dec. 15.—One of the Atlantic liners arrived here recently with a large consignment of "gailon" eggs from Russia and China.

The majority of the eggs brought to the ports of China come from the up-country districts, and it is hardly likely that after the journey on the slow Russian railways the eggs are in the best possible condition. Consequently they are broken by the Chinese and sent here in bulk form. The mixed liquid is called the "gallon" egg and will no doubt be analyzed sooner or later by medical experts. Part of the ten thousand tins shipped has found a resting place in New York which is in the midst of a panic owing to investigations commenced by the Pure Food authorities into what the city's egg supply consists of.

There are about ten dozen eggs in a gallon of the product which sells at from a dollar to a dollar and quarter a tin of four quart measure.

New York, Toronto and other cities have received a supply, the remainder being kept in cold storage here by a Montreal firm.

Although the prices of eggs are high at present, there is no demand for the "gallon" egg as a food stuff, but it is not at all unlikely that bakers and confectioners will snap it up as they can thereby mix eggs with their flour at ten cents a dozen.

Should Russia and China find a steady demand for this mixture in Canadian and United States markets, the demand for eggs in shell will be curtailed while the purity of cakes and other baked wares in which these eggs are used may or may not be improved.

QUALITY CANUCK CEREALS

THE CHISHOLM MILLING COMPANY, LIMITED

TORONTO, ONTARIO

The Consumption of Cereals is Heavy

Manufacturers Report a Good Demand—Prices are Steady and Some Millers are Inclined to Look Forward to an Advance—But Indications to That End are not Very Apparent—Flour is Quiet and the Whole Market Does Not Show Much Briskness—Situation at Present not very Clear.

The flour and cereal markets continue rather uneventful. Dealers state that there has been no material change from a week ago and then it was stated that flour was simply marking time. It is not meant that flour is dull or that trading in cereals is quiet. The present season is not the best for trade in flour but at the same time there is a good demand. Mills are busy and flour seems to be pursuing an even tenor that keeps the trade guessing.

The wheat market has been wavering, up and down over a rather confined area, and beginning this week it showed some firmness as the result of rather unfavorable news from India, Argentina and other grain centres.

Whatever the tendency of the flour market actually is, dealers state that they are not looking forward to any reduction of prices just now. From the standpoint of the retailer there is nothing to indicate what way the market is likely to move. The close of navigation is considered an extra expense to the millers and according to them tends to strengthen present quotations.

Rolled oats are firm. Millers are busy meeting present orders and they say an advance in prices would not surprise them. In this connection it might be said that some such statements were made before and the reverse action was the result. This indicates the uncertainty of the market. Millers themselves admit at times their inability to forecast future movements and just at present it is difficult to say what the future will bring. Cereals are moving out well and there is a good general demand.

The surplus of Argentina wheat is estimated all the way from 112 million bushels down to 65 million. It was stated last week that a clique was at work to boost wheat prices but as yet the rise has not been significant.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—The flour market is without any new feature, prices being about steady with only a small volume of business passing, as the demand from local and outside buyers is principally for lots to fill actual requirements. The stock of flour in store on spot on Monday last showed an increase of 19,132 barrels compared with a week ago, and a decrease of 14,198 with a year ago.

Advertising in a Country Village

System Used by One Merchant Where There is no Local Paper But Where Three Outside Newspapers Have Equal Circulations—To Reach Every Prospective Customer He Would Have to Use All Three Mediums He Says—A Circular He Recently Sent out Which Brought Good Results—Some Criticisms.

By J. T. Emmerton.

Editor Canadian Grocer. — Having noticed your note in a recent issue soliciting ads from readers of your valuable journal, I take pleasure in submitting for criticism a plan I have considered wise to adopt, which ought to meet the demands of country stores similarly situated.

The plan so far as I am concerned is original and having done but very little advertising, I shall be pleased to learn as to whether or not my judgment is good or bad in this respect, as I feel ability in this department is a valuable asset. I am also pleased to have the opportunity of being able to obtain the opinions of others in this important part of our labors, for if poor, it is well to know it; likewise if good, encouragement will be the reward.

The Local Conditions.

I wish to mention local conditions necessary to contend with, which are no doubt somewhat similar in many country store localities, by way of the absence of a local paper.

In our village there are three local newspapers coming in from neighboring towns which have almost equal circulations. Therefore to secure anything like a complete canvass of prospective customers it would be necessary to advertise in all three papers. This would be very expensive. To overcome this expense and at the same time to reach directly every prospective customer of the village I purpose to appeal directly by letter, three or four times during the year. I herewith enclose a sample of my letter recently sent out, as well as a blotter, and small bill in an envelope. By this means I am able to directly reach every prospective customer of the village and surrounding country at a cost of less than two cents each.

I have also made use of the same printed blotter as an advertising medium by supplying all of the surrounding schools with all they need. They therefore go in and out of the homes performing a double duty by way of being useful to the scholars and at the same time keeping my ad before the parents and at a mere trifle of expense.

Secured Good Results.

I am very pleased to be able to say that I have already benefited very much from the enclosed sample recently sent out, and have noticed beyond any doubt, that this method of advertising has done good work for me. Having noticed the advertisement from Vancouver recently, suggested the idea of offering mine, which I hope is at least worthy of some notice, and if from a wise advertising method it is considered No Good, it might be the means of helping some other earnest toiler to avoid the rocks and help him as well as myself to reach a harbor of safety in the great ocean of successful advertising.

Editorial Note.—The best feature of this circular is the panel in the centre showing the cost of various articles and the amount saved the purchaser in buying at Emmerton's store. The fact that on a $5 purchase $1.37 can be saved would beyond any doubt bring direct business. In this respect the ad. was a splendid one and the writer struck the right key when he placed this information on his circular.

Criticisms, however, might be made of the ad. on the ground that there is too much in it and that the various statements are set up in a broken fashion. Beginning, for instance, with "You are busy, yet there are little things, etc." down to "Emmerton's Store" there are 6 different faces of type used. The copy might be termed jerky and in some cases readers would have difficulty in connecting it up properly.

The most scientific advertisers of the present day maintain that the simpler the copy the more will the ad. be read. Therefore, if it had begun somewhat after this fashion—"We want to show you how to save $1.37 on a $5 purchase etc."—the interest of every house-keeper would immediately be secured providing you point out to her how it can be done as in this case. If you can convince her you are sure to get results, that is, if your stock has a quality reputation and your store an inviting appearance.

Instead, therefore, of having the statements scattered about, the majority of advertisers would agree upon having them systematized so that each would appear separate and therefore would be more easily read.

For instance, when one looks at the accompanying ad. his attention is immediately directed to the panel in the centre. Yet to get the exact meaning of the figures in this panel he would have to begin at the first. His attention might then drift to the small panels containin the information about 'school supplies,' and 'fresh, clean groceries,' and the important feature forgotten. The talks about men's overcoats, ladies' and men's cravenette coats, and underwear at the bottom illustrate nicely what is generally conceded to be the proper method to pursue. There is no doubt that, if advertisements are well written and goods and prices are named that will appeal to the people of the community in which the advertising is done, the dealer will find his selling power greatly increased.

Conference on the Cutting of Soap Prices

Body of Retailers Ask That It Be Placed on the Contract Selling Plan Basis—Say That Some Will not Maintain Prices Otherwise—Trouble not so Acute in Brantford and Hamilton — View-Point of the Manufacturer.

Toronto, Dec. 15.—The conference to discuss the soap situation as arranged by the Toronto branch of the retail grocers' section of the R.M.A. was held in their rooms last week. As stated in last week's issue, this meeting had as its purpose the pointing out to soap manufacturers the desirability, so far as the Toronto grocers were concerned, of adopting some policy that would prevent the practice of some grocers here and there who persist in cutting the price of soap. The retailers suggested as a remedial measure the Contract Selling Plan and in making their representations they pointed out that they desired to have the handling of soap placed on a "sound basis."

The conference was attended by members of all three sections of the trade—retailer, wholesaler and manufacturer. Frankness and courtesy in speech was a feature of the discussion and as one prominent retailer stated after the meeting, if the question has done nothing more thus far than to create a better feeling in the trade, it has served a good purpose and he had strong hopes that it would lead to measures which would be entirely satisfactory to all concerned.

John F. Holloway, retail dealer, King St. West, was appointed chairman and briefly introduced the subject at issue by explaining the purposes of the meeting. A number of retailers spoke first, enumerating some of the difficulties that have arisen in selling soap. F. C. Higgins, D. W. Clark, T. Clarke, and D. McLean were among the Toronto grocers who spoke; J. W. Mellen represented the Brantford Grocers' Association; John O. Carpenter represented Hamilton; J. A. Beaudry, Montreal, and Barrie grocers lent their support to the petition by a telegram from S. G. Caldwell.

Organization in Brantford.

It was shown that price cutting in soap was more common in Toronto than in any of the other cities represented. In Hamilton and Brantford where organization is more perfect the price cutters are few, but still there are some. J. W. Mellen, Brantford, thought that grocers should pay more attention to organization than has been evident in the past. He mentioned an instance or two in which trade evils had been eradicated in Brantford simply through the strength of the association and a round of applause showed that the organization in the two western Ontario cities represented, was fully appreciated.

A representative of the wholesale trade supported the contentions of the retail trade that protection of prices by the manufacturer would solve the problem for the grocer who had no wish to cut prices. The manufacturer, he claimed, was in control of the situation and could demand the maintenance of certain prices by those who handled his goods. Price cutters created ill-will among ninety-five per cent. of the trade throughout the country. The manufacturer has the right, he said, to bring action against those retailers who thus injure his business. Some retailers receive soap at the same price as wholesalers. They are in a position to sell at a price which their less favored neighbor can not offer and make money. The manufacturer should make it a condition that these grocers should not sell soap at less than five cents a bar.

The Other Point of View.

In reply one manufacturer stated that his firm had the interests of the retailer at heart, but the latter must not think he alone had troubles. It must not be understood, he said, that no efforts had been made to stop price-cutting. Great efforts had been made but it seemed that there would always be some one ready to cut prices in spite of attempts at prevention. Continuing he said, "The soap business has advanced in recent years and is now on a much better basis. It is rather early to talk of cutting under the new prices; price cutting is really dying out. There are some grocers practicing a cheap philanthropy, giving away profits they might be putting in their own pockets but it is not likely that they will continue. It may last until the end of January, until the stocks now held are exhausted and they have to buy at the new prices; you have not given the new plan sufficient time to work out on its own basis."

At Jobbers' Discount.

D. W. Clark asked if the retailers on the jobbers' list were bound to sell at a fixed price. The manufacturer replied that they were under an agreement to sell at not less than the wholesale price, but at present a plan was being drawn up whereby they would be required to sell at five bars for 25 cents. This will likely be put in force when it is thought the old stocks of soap are disposed of.

Some one remarked that this in itself should settle the whole trouble.

Another manufacturer stated that his firm had instructed their travelers to put the problem to the grocers that they should sell soap at the new price. "One large department store said they would not do so if they had to pay $10 a box. After a kindly talk they promised to sell at not less than six for 27 cents and it was possible that they would sell at five cents straight. I have twelve jobbers in Toronto to look after and have tried since 1891 to stop them from cutting but failed. They have an agreement, but—(a jobber here interposed with; "It is the fault of the agreement; sue one of them and they will soon stop it.") I asked my travelers how the soap prices were operating and they told me 90% of the grocers were selling at five cents. Others who bought previous to the raise in price would, if they have not already done so, fall into line when their stocks declined. The manufacturers are trying to help. The retailers must get together and work for a better understanding. It can then be easily done but give us a little time. When the manufacturers figure their prices they do not intend that the retailer shall work for a pittance. A fair profit is allowed retailers as their agents but it is often the retailer himself who gives this away to his customers."

Seven for a Quarter.

One of the manufacturers told of a grocer who sent in a complaint that a competitor was selling at six bars for a quarter. Upon investigation it was found that the complainant was himself selling at seven bars for 25 cents. He also cited instances of difficulties such as retailers and wholesalers refusing to handle the soap after an advance has been made.

There was, of course, no final decision arrived at but the conference succeeded in bringing about a better understanding between retailer and manufacturer and the soap situation was made clearer to both.

How Long Did You Say That Flour Lasted?

You don't say—
Now there's Mrs. Brown—very good customer—big family.
Just left this minute, as you came in.
Maybe you know Mrs. Brown—No?
Well, she ordered some FIVE ROSES some time ago, and for the fun of the thing kept careful tab of all the loaves she made.
Such fine, big loaves, too, she said.
However, Mrs. B. came in to-day for more. I asked her what she thought of my FIVE ROSES.
Honest, Madam, you never saw such a pleased look. Said it saved her money, and bother. Lasted a full week longer.
Spite of the fact that her luck was so much better and her folks ate a whole lot more.
Maybe I wasn't delighted!
That's another customer who will always insist on FIVE ROSES.
Imagine one whole week's bread for almost nothing.
Talk of the baker's dozen—I call it solid economy.
FIVE ROSES lasts longer because it's so strong you use less.
You are better pleased with yourself and you save money.
Couldn't possibly take two barrels, Madam?
Roads are getting so bad, you know.

Holiday Trade is Promising Well

Wholesale Fruitmen are Well Supplied With Fancy Stocks, and Have Been Meeting a Good Demand Thus Far—Are Importing Fresh Vegetables From Louisiana—Oranges and Lemons a Little Easier—Cranberries Firm, as Are Potatoes Also—The Outlook.

Christmas is in the wholesale fruit districts, as is evidenced by the wreaths of holly in their open boxes, the heavy consignments of nuts, dates, figs, and seasonable fruits and vegetables. Truly, if the holiday does not find everybody well supplied with the good things which form such an important part of the festive season, the wholesale dealer cannot be blamed. He has shown considerable aggressiveness in collecting a tempting array of goods. Prices are for the most part liberal, and it is expected that stocks will be pretty well stripped by the Christmas demand.

Such is the roseate hue of the dreams the wholesalers have been having of late. There is a chance that they may come true, but the reckoning will not be made until after Jan. 1st. Prices have not changed much. Oranges seem to be a little easier, although recently from New York a report was received to the effect that there was new strength. The holiday demand is expected to boost prices, but as yet the tendency has not been very marked. Cranberries are firm. Pines are quoted at a strong figure. Oranges are in good condition, say the trade, and Santa Claus will find them of the best quality. Wholesalers are also well supplied with nuts, layer raisins, dates, figs, etc. Holly wreaths are offered at $1.25 a dozen. They are exceptionally god in color, and are plentifully supplied with berries.

Imported vegetables are now coming from Louisiana.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—Business in all lines is brisk, and supplies are large enough to meet holiday requirements. Early in the season a shortage of Fameuse apples was talked about. Recently a local dealer stated: "There is no shortage, but the demand is pretty slow. The price is too steep. There are large supplies held in storage."

Cranberries are well maintained at the advance, and there is some talk of a further rise.

Vegetables. — Although it was expected that there would be a move in the market this week, things remain dull, and dealers are not at all satisfied. A good supply of Bermuda parsley has arrived, and is in good condition. Tomatoes show an increase of 10c, while cucumbers and sweet potatoes also show an upward tendency.

TORONTO.

Green Fruits.—The market is running along steadily before a good trade. Everything points to a general demand of the usual holiday proportions, if not even better than in the past. Trade is confined to the seasonable lines that are now on hand, but altogether business is reported satisfactory. Lemons and oranges are about the same in price. Cranberries are decidedly firm, according to the dealers, and other lines are about normal.

Vegetables.—Naturally at this time of the year the demand for the different vegetables takes on a new life. Dealers are now importing carrots, tomatoes, beets, etc., and, as might be expected of these delicacies, they are not being given away. The price is at a delightful feeling, and those consumers who are fortunate in being able to buy them should find them doubly delicious. Potatoes are firm, and following the line mentioned some time ago. The general aspect of the trade is a holiday tinge, and will likely continue thus until after the old year has spent itself.

WINNIPEG.

Green Fruits.—This week there is not a large turnover in fresh fruit lines, but jobbers and retailers are well stocked with high class lines in anticipation of a good movement from now until after the holiday season. Apples, grapes, cocoanuts, and cranberries are the chief items on the market this week. The following prices show an advance on cranberries of $2, and a reduction on lemons of $1, and a reduction on pineapples of $1. Apples in barrels are going out well.

A NEW CLOCK CONTEST.

One merchant tried out a unique clock contest with good results. On Monday of each week for four and a half months a six day clock was wound up and placed in his window. After being in plain view for a short time, the face of the clock was covered and during the week with every 50 cent purchase each customer was given a small card bearing the picture of a clock dial, no two cards showing the same time. At three o'clock each Saturday the dealer removed the mask from the clock and as the spring had run down before that time, the hands pointed to a definite time. The person holding the card showing the time nearest to that at which the clock stopped was awarded the prize.

Fish - Oysters

Brisk Demand for all Kinds of Fish

Advent Stimulates the Fish Business — Haddock Becoming More Plentiful, but Halibut is Scarcer — Supply of Oysters Seems to be Decreasing—Better Weather Conditions on the Atlantic Coast—Home Demand so Heavy That Export Trade is Decreased.

Reports from coast points indicate much improved conditions as far as supplies are concerned. Demand is good from the interior, and also from the United States. The result is that export trade is not heavy, for the reason that home demand seems to leave no surplus. Weather conditions have improved somewhat, enabling the fishermen to get on the banks. Prices are firm in all markets.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax.—There is considerable improvement in the receipts of fish this week, mostly cod and haddock. Halibut is scarce, and no fresh stock is arriving. The weather conditions improved somewhat, and the fishermen have been able to get on the banks.

According to reports reaching here, herring have struck in abundantly on the west coast of Newfoundland. The waters are said to be teeming with the fish. The facilities for storing them are limited, and those that are not sold fresh to vessels are salted. The smelt season will open in Newfoundland next week, and it is expected that the season will be a good one.

Everything is now in readiness for the opening of the lobster season on the western coast of Nova Scotia on Thursday, December 15. The canning factories are preparing for a busy season. All prices of fish are firm, but there are no changes of special note since last report.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—Favorable weather and the Advent season have had quite a stimulating effect on the fish market lately. The demand is now abating, but there has been a rush up to now. Stocks have been much affected and decreased, and the outlook is for scarcity in some lines, and therefore higher prices.

Haddocks and haddies are coming a little more plentifully on account of better fishing on the coast.

There is a feeling that frozen salmon and frozen halibut are going to be a good stock, and higher prices are expected before long.

Stocks of pickled and salted fish are greatly reduced, but prices are just the same as last week, as every dealer has got his supplies for the next two months.

From now on frozen fish will be greatly in demand, but quiet trade is looked for.

Prepared boneless and smoked fish in general are in good demand. The crop of small herring which is used for smoking purposes has been but fair this year. Consequently, stocks are not procurable this year.

Oysters both shell and bulk are in good demand, but the supply is getting short.

Toronto.—There is every evidence of a good fish trade, but some of the dealers say Christmas will interfere to a certain extent. On the whole, however, the season has been favorable, and it is generally felt that the demand will be maintained. Trade is divided between numerous lines, all of which are doing well.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

St. John.—There has been a better variety of fish in the local market during the last week than for some time previous. On Friday of last week about 3½ tons of cod and haddock were landed by fishing schooners, as well as a quantity of halibut, both fresh and frozen. Other varieties offered are: smelts, flounders, frozen salmon and bass, whitefish and dore (from upper Canada), butterfish and bluefish (from the United States), and a few frozen herring and mackerel. The cold weather has altered the aspect of things on the Miramichi river. The fishermen are now engaged in setting their nets through the ice. Thus far their fishing has been disappointing. About 200 barrels of a mixed assortment of fish was the reward of last week's operations, and of these the proportion of smelts was small.

When you allow a customer to go away with goods thinking them better than they really are you give that customer a shove towards the other fellow's store.

If you allow yourself to shade prices for certain customers, you make those customers, and all the unfavored ones as well, distrust you.

Tea Coloring in the U.S. Pure Food Laws

After May 1, 1911, if Tea is Colored the Labels Must so Stipulate it—Canadian Importers Say Similar Conditions Exist Here Although Not to Same Extent—They Tell Why Color is Used on Tea—Appearance is Improved.

"We recommend that after May 1st, 1911, all tea imported into the United States, and shipped after that date, both in large and small packages, if artificially colored or faced, shall be labeled on each container 'artificially faced' or 'artificially colored.'"

The above is a portion of a resolution passed by the U. S. Board of Tea Exports, and which will soon be the latest addition to the United States Food and Drug Act, and is of interest to the Canadian trade from the fact that colored teas hold a position in our markets.

Canadian wholesale tea men and brokers assert that the coloring of tea artificially is done for the sole reason of giving it a better appearance, just as one tea is rolled tighter than another sample or tipped a little better. Although they are all the one tea still there is a difference in price because the more closely rolled and tipped looks better when presented to a customer. The loosely rolled sample is thick, unfolds easily and for liquoring purposes is claimed to be even superior to the tea which has received more attention in its appearance. The layman when he begins to understand the facts will likely consider the practice an absurd one. Tea is for drinking purposes and is not intended particularly to please the eye like a rose or lily. Yet it can be easily understood how the "dressed up" tea will enjoy a larger demand among those who are ignorant of the facts and this number practically includes 99 out of every 100 consumers.

Looks to Appearance.

When a woman buys green tea, the greener it looks the greater is her confidence in its quality. To the inexperienced this would seem to be the natural method of judging the tea. The buyer depends on appearance, not being acquainted with the many first facts regarding tea. In the United States it is said the coloring was so pronounced that the tea was almost blue. The Canadian color, say importers, is not so marked, it varying from a brownish green to an olive and silvery green. The coloring matter sometimes rises to the cup after the tea is brewed and a fine foreign dust is noticeable on the inside of containers.

The teas artificially colored are Japan, China, Ceylon and India greens. Of course, natural tea can be bought, but any that are colored artificially are those mentioned. The change of color is secured in the firing. The natural color is "sun-fired," the colored, "pan-fired" and a coloring material is added to enhance the effect.

Those acquainted with the essentials of the tea trade do not say that there is anything really injurious in this artificially colored tea. They do not offer an opinion one way or the other, but they do say that the colored varieties are artificial The natural tea is wholesome; nothing is gained particularly. state the brokers, by coloring except the enhancing of the appearance.

Tea Facings to be Watched.

The rest of the resolution is as follows:—

"And for the proper working of the law we recommend that consular invoices shall thereafter contain the statement that such goods contain artificial coloring matter, or facing. And the Agricultural Department shall in any case where there is reason to suspect that teas are not properly labeled make examination of the facing of such teas in warehouses and shall co-operate with the tea examiners to subject any tea under suspicion to chemical test, but shall not make independent examination or otherwise embarass the present operation of the tea law."

In reference to the above matter, A. McGill, Chief Analyst, Inland Revenue Department, informs The Canadian Grocer that the Adulteration Act under Section 3 (H) provides that the coloring of any food to conceal damage, or otherwise misrepresent the article, constitutes adulteration.

A Wholesaler's View of Getting a Square Profit

By J. M. Mortimer.

A wholesaler asked me the other day what action the retail trade were taking in regard to the new prices of soap. I told him that as far as I knew some were selling at five cents a bar, some were said to be holding to the old price and others were selling at six bars for 27 cents. I added that the tendency seemed to be to get five cents straight but many who wished to do so were held to old prices because some near competitor had not changed to the new prices.

"Well, I have always made it my aim," the wholesaler said, "to get a profit on everything I handled. In the beginning that appeared to me to be a sound business principle, and at any rate I have never regretted it. There is no good reason why a grocer should handle anything for nothing. There is his time and labor to consider, the money invested which should bring a profit, the percentage of the cost of doing business and lastly, the accommodation afforded the customer..

"Every grocer I ever knew went into the business to make money. It is not difficult to realize that cutting prices and doing work for nothing is not going to help in that direction. I have noticed that when a man cuts the price of one article he follows up with another. Once in the habit of that style of business it is not easy to get away from it. I am like that retailer I read about lately. He said he was not brought up in a price-cutting store and had not learned that idea. Neither have I and for the same reason. When an article does not pay a profit I fail to see why a grocer should be bothered with it unless but to accommodate other people who seldom, if ever, accommodate him. Let price-cutters cut. Many people shun low prices under the impression that the price is to cover a deficiency in quality."

The James Bros., of Brantford, Ont., have purchased and taken possession of the general grocery business formerly conducted by J. C. Struthers on Colborne St. B. James has been for some time in New York, while his brother Percy E. James was, till lately, in the employ of the Standard Bank in Toronto. They will carry besides groceries, fancy china, meats and fruits.

Robinson Bros. have purchased the grocery business of W. C. Edwards, 121 Charlotte St., Brantford, Ont. F. B. Robinson has been for some time in Buffalo while his brother, J. C., has been in Toronto.

Relation of Mace to the Nut

Saskatoon Inquiries Answered—Mace Obtained F Shell of the Nutmeg—Why Nutmeg Supplanted P Years Ago—Better Price Was Secured by the Gr Former—How to Tell When a Nutmeg is Good.

Editor Canadian Grocer — Can you tell me anything about the mace market? Is there any relation between mace and nutmeg? I am told they are produced from the same fruit. Where does mace come from? Any other information you can give me will be appreciated.

READER.

Saskatoon, Sask.

Editorial Note—Grocers are aware of a decided firmness now existing in the spice market, and standing out prominently among the different lines handled is mace. There never was an effect without a cause, the mathematical masters affirm, and the reasons for the present strength in the mace market constitute an interesting bit of spice history.

About thirty years ago, Canadian spice manufacturers had to pay from 50 to 60 cents a pound for nutmegs, which they can procure to-day for about 14 or 15 cents. It must be first understood that mace is the outside covering of the nutmeg. The commercial nutmeg, as the grocer knows it, is first enclosed in a shell much similar to the filbert, although not of the same shape, nor nearly as thick or hard to break. But the nutmeg is loosely contained in this shell as is the kernel of the filbert. Then outside the nutmeg's shell is a covering, an "arillus" as it is more properly termed, entirely enclosing it and fitting it tightly. In this respect it resembles the chestnut. As the fruit ripens, the arillus or outer covering withers, and releases the nutmeg in its harder shell. Mace is therefore intimately related to the nutmeg, and they are strikingly similar when experienced by the senses of taste and smell. The nutmeg is sold principally as it is when freed from the harder shell. Mace is ground. They are both much used as seasonings, and enjoy a regular and healthy demand.

Nutmeg Supplanted Pepper.

As previously stated, nutmegs sold at from 50 to 60 cents a pound only a few decades ago. Pepper was more plentiful at the time, and as a big price was being received for nutmegs, planters decided to root up the pepper shrubs and supplant them with the, at that time, more profitable nutmeg tree. It was about eight years before the real effects of this action began to make themselves felt, and as production of nutmegs increased, their market value fell off, declining gradually to the present figures. Stories are told of how the natives in their desire to maintain a good price burned large piles of nutmegs, but all restrictive methods were of no avail.

The present trend of plantation owners is to deplete the nutmeg groves, and from all accounts this action is being carried out. The demand is being stocks that have be However, mace is more scarce, as it same abundance, lows that if the p is curtailed, mace the same direction.

Such does the s to be, and grocers strength referred market closely.

Manufactu

The nutmeg fruit lowing parts: first or bur, which becon as the fruit reache the red, membrano as mace when grou connected to the har tioned. This second tection to the kernel found in every groc harvested about the nutmegs. It is pee shell over which it and is dried. Form was performed by t built after present day ideas is now used, and gives even better satisfaction than the old method. Mace in drying is first crimson, then blood red, and when completely dried it is a yellowish or golden brown.

The nutmeg is found principally in the Banda Island in the Straits Settlements, but is found generally in the East and West Indies. To tell whether the strength of a nutmeg has been impaired or not, stick it with a pin. If good oil or not, stick it with a pin. If good, oil does not appear, it is likely of a "punky" character, and lacks the full flavor and strength it ought to have.

The tree is much like the ordinary apple tree, and grows to various heights according to the country. The average is about from 20 to 30 feet high.

ORANGES REPLACING APPLES.

W. A. MacKinnon, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Birmingham, Eng., reports that the receipts of Canadian, Maine and Virginian apples continue rather heavy, being almost equal to the arrivals for the same period last year. The prices are high. Ribston Pippins are selling to the retail trade at about $4.86 and Albermarle Pippins at from $6.80 to $7.29 for good stock. These doing a little business, but it is nothing as compared with the activity that used to be apparent in that quarter. The business has depreciated from being one of the best in that town to what is called a "scrub store."

This fact would indicate that this so-called good-will is nothing more than the holder's personality, something that cannot be estimated in pounds and ounces or dollars and cents. If the purchaser can hold the trade of that store then the good-will is an asset he should pay for. But as pointed out the element of chance really enters into the question as far as the buyer is concerned, but the holder knows that the good-will he emphasizes is a reality. The question, therefore, is, can the purchaser make use of that good-will? Examples are not few which prove that many purchasers were not able to hold or extend the good-will they had bought. When one has taken over a new store, a good trade has already been built up for him. He had, therefore, paid for and received a tangible something as necessary if not more so than good equipment and fresh stock. The customers in fact were coming to the store; it remained only for the purchaser to win them over to himself. In fact half the struggle was over when he took possession. He himself had to do the other half.

The grocers who have bought businesses and enlarged them have made use of that asset of good-will. As this grocer previously referred to summed it up a purchaser should pay for a merchant's good-will, but it remains with himself to make his purchase a reality. As a last word it must be said that the element of chance is more or less prominent.

Montreal Grocers' Views on Store Moves

Consensus of Opinion is That Grocers Should Look for New Trade, and Not Depend on Old Customers Remotely Situated —The Latter Do Not Always Get the Best Service in Such Cases, and Gradually Drift Away—Some Actual Experiences Cited.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—Making plans for the new year some grocers will be considering the idea of moving.

Does it pay to move?

The answer to this question will be governed by circumstances surrounding individual cases.

The city or large town grocer and his country confrere are differently situated. When the former finds it necessary to secure premises in another locality, it is essential for him to build up a new trade. At least that is the consensus of opinion.

But the country grocer on moving does not get away from his former customers. He cannot—if he is to stay in the town.

Taking the case of the grocer in the large centre, as being one most affected by removal, it is interesting to learn of the experience of those who have moved from one section of a city to another.

One Profitable Move.

J. Currie, of Currie Bros., Montreal, states that his firm had for years done an excellent trade on what was St. Ann's market (now a strictly wholesale district); but circumstances compelled them to close up business there. Consumers drifted farther north in the city, and Currie Bros. were away from the retail centres.

They found that trade was decreasing, owing to the inconvenience caused customers who had to come to their store from a distance.

So they moved.

There were other grocers in the new section of the city, but they counted on securing some of their older customers and their share of transients and new accounts.

The moving was profitable in their case, they say, and their reason is that they made it so by increasing their selling power in various ways.

Since then they have moved two blocks up the street, but the distance was so short that it made no difference in their trade whatever.

T. J. Stevenson, of Kyle & Stevenson, the Annex grocers, recalled his efforts to retain his downtown connection when he and the late Mr. Kyle, his partner, started in business. Mr. Stevenson had moved up north. It was impossible he says, to retain even 30 per cent. of the old trade for any length of time, as they could not be given the same attention as those in the immediate neighborhood, to whom it was his object to lend all possible attention.

Question of Remote Deliveries.

W. H. Paul, son of Walter Paul, expressed the same views of the above. He believes that it does not pay the average grocer to make deliveries in sections remote from his new basis, and that the strictest attention should be paid to new accounts rather than to old ones, which he considers likely to disappear at any time.

S. J. Geddes, a West End grocer, is convinced that there is a possibility of holding some accounts for a time, but that in the long run the new grocer, if at all energetic, will secure practically the whole trade.

"The public are looking for convenience," remarked Murphy Bros., also carrying on business in the West End. They believe that intimate friends and a number of telephone customers will be inclined to follow their grocer when he moves, but that the inevitable delay in delivery at times will eventually cause them to give part, and finally their whole business to the grocer nearby.

A representative of W. T. Brown & Co., the West End "Imperial Warehouse," stated that he frequently called on customers at a considerable distance from the store only to find that his prospective orders had been telephoned while he was on his round. This waste of time and the necessity of deliveries outside regular hours were sufficient proof of the fact that it could not pay the average grocer, nor was it advisable for him to undertake to cater to people living at a considerable distance from him, unless he had an extra man and delivery wagon to perform this part of his business.

Other grocers interviewed were equally positive that unless a grocer takes up business in his new quarters determined to secure practically an entirely new trade, he will never prove successful. His relying for support from his old clientele will eventually prove disastrous, they maintain.

J. Perks, grocer, Parry Sound, Ont., has recently renovated his store interior. Among the additional fixtures is an oyster cabinet and an electric coffee grinder.

Chas. Hart, of Hart & Tuckwell, Montreal, has been elected a director of the Atlantic Fruit Co., succeeding W. H. Bennett.

A Fish Combine Heavily Fined in San Francisco

Charged with creating an illegal combination in restraint of trade, and with driving the plaintiff out of business, a number of large fish companies in San Francisco were fined $12,500 recently.

Nearly a year ago the newspapers of San Francisco revealed the workings of a so-called fish trust in that city, claiming that tons of fresh fish were being sent weekly to the fertilizer works connected with the Western Fish Co. Statements were made that the supply of fish was artificially controlled by limiting the amount put on the market, and reducing the rest to fertilizer in order to maintain the prices secretly agreed upon by the combine. It was also shown how the combine had secured control of a large part of the trade, and how by boycotting methods some independents were forced to quit.

TRADE NOTES.

C. W. Coulter & Co., general merchants, Burk's Falls, Ont., have assigned.

The Fink Mercantile Co., Cranbrook, B. C., are enlarging their grocery section.

Andrew Murdock has purchased the business of Templin & McDonald, Kincardine, Ont.

M. J. Fox and F. C. Nugent have purchased the grocery business of Thos. Brady, Lindsay, Ont.

Fire caused considerable damage to the general store of W. B. Morrison, Camrose, Alta. It started at the rear of a near-by drug store.

Burden & King, grocers, Woodstock, Ont., recently installed a display case for fancy biscuits, confectionery, etc.

A law will soon go into force in Massachusetts by which all collection agencies operating within the state are placed under State supervision, and makes them file a bond for $5,000 to do an honest business.

The wholesale produce commission men of Utah propose to limit credit to retail men to just one week. The State Retail Association vigorously oppose the plan, and ask for a 30-day credit instead. A week's credit does not seem long in the face of present extensions, but if a retailer had to pay his wholesaler weekly he would in all probability put similar pressure on his customers.

A GROCER'S CO-OPERATION

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes gives a lustre which far outlasts all others under the heat of the stove, and that is why it has so many friends that call for it over the grocery counters the world around. We believe that the real live grocer wants to push the goods that please his customers, and that is why we have the hearty co-operation of thousands upon thousands of grocers everywhere. It pays you to push it.

ST. CATHARINES, - ONTARIO

Manufacturers of Store Appliance traced $3,000 worth of business to one year's advertising in The Canadian Grocer

The concern in question were rather skeptical when first approached by our representative, and considerable time and several calls were required to persuade them to make a test of the paper.

Finally it was decided that a quarter page be used regularly, and considerable care was given to the preparation of copy, which was accompanied in every instance by a good illustration.

Only one or two inquiries for prices and other information had been received after the fourth insertion, and the advertisers told us they were very much disappointed.

Like many other concerns, they had a strong disinclination to spend money on anything so intangible as advertising, but, strange to say, when they did start, they expected it to perform feats of magic.

It seems that nearly every new advertiser has to pass through the stage, first of skepticism, then of extravagant expectation, followed by disappointment, before he settles down to regard advertising as a sane, sensible help to the sale of his goods, none the less effective because it seldom actually sells goods.

If advertising would do all that some new advertisers expect of it, The Canadian Grocer, instead of charging $4.32 per insertion of a quarter page, on yearly contract, would raise its rate to at least ten times that figure.

The firm referred to above went on advertising throughout the year. Inquiries received averaged less than two per insertion, but they were followed up carefully, and, besides this, every traveler was impressed with the fact that the advertising was steadily building up an interest throughout the trade that he should take full advantage of.

To make a long story short, about $3,000 worth of business was traced directly to the advertising in The Grocer. And this really represented a small part of the total benefit received.

The Trial Tells the Tale

Supposing we were to say that there are 75,000 Keith Systems in use; that probably would not be misstating the facts, but that would not convince you that you should have one.

Supposing we were to say the Keith System has been upon the market for the past 15 years, twice as long as any drop-leaf loose-slip system, and that it has been improved from time to time so as to meet every requirement of the retail merchant, we would be telling the truth, but that wouldn't be giving you any of the advantages of the system.

Cut of 100 Book Size, when not in use, showing hood locked to cabinet.

HERE ARE THE THINGS YOU WANT TO KNOW:

1. Is the Keith System Fire-proof? Yes.
2. Is their any danger of bringing forward a wrong past account or losing slips? No. The original slips remain permanently bound in the book, giving you a consecutively numbered record of the account, and only one account is before you at a time.
3. Can more than one clerk work over the register at the same time? Yes, any number, without the least confusion.
4. Will it place a check on forgotten charges? Yes, the best in the world.

DROMEDARY

GOLDEN DATES

"Dromedary" is the only brand of dates that means anything to consumers, because it's the only one that has been advertised into consumers' knowledge.

The largest and best magazines all carry our advertisement and everybody who has read it is a prospective customer.

Dromedary Dates are wrapped in oiled paper and packed in cartons. They are not the usual dates at all, but are selected, and absolutely clean. Moreover, they will keep moist indefinitely, which is of tremendous importance.

Many a woman doesn't buy dates because as usually sold they are a gummy, dirty and unsavory proposition. You can get this trade the minute you show a Dromedary carton.

All jobbers sell these.

We also pack Royal Excelsior and Anchor brand package dates.

This Photograph Was Taken in Eighteen Ninety-Three : : : : :

One of the first window displays ever made for "Salada" Tea.
Taken in 1893—over seventeen yearsago.

It recalls the old days—old methods—when time was spent weighing, sacking and tying up bulk goods. It recalls days of heavy stocks—slow turnovers—loss by overweight.

The package idea of merchandizing was then unknown.

Now—every advance is toward small stocks and quick turnovers of quality goods in packages—attractively displayed. In tea—"SALADA."

It gives more tea value to the consumer.

It gives more tea profit to the retailer.

It builds reputation. It gives satisfaction.

Sound Reasoning on Retail Advertising

Why the Advertiser Should Keep Everlastingly at It—Wrong Impression Often Taken From Ad-Solicitor's Counsel—Percentage of Turn-over That Ought to be Devoted to This Method of Increasing Business—It is Serious Work and Deserves the Closest Attention.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

The doctrine of "Keeping Everlastingly at It" holds in advertising; but its logic is sadly misunderstood and, consequently, misapplied.

Suppose an ad. solicitor from a local paper calls and gets you to insert some advertising and then says: "Now, Mr. Smith, if you are going to get full returns on this advertising and make it an investment instead of an expense, you must keep it going," what is your immediate impression? Why, you conclude at once that this fellow is trying to rope you in and get a steady, "easy" revenue from you. Grant that this is so; that, if advertisers did see the wisdom of keeping at it, the solicitor would have easy sledding; what, after all, has that fact to do with your decision? What do YOU want out of the deal? Do you want to get value received? All right, if you DO get value received, what do you care if the solicitor thereafter lives in pampered luxury? If the proposition is ALL profit to the newspaper and its employes, you lose nothing if your investment is a good one. And I want to get you thinking this way, because the other habit prevents you from doing any sort of justice to YOUR OWN SIDE of the case.

Some Pertinent Comparisons.

Let me try to illustrate. Suppose you opened your store on a Monday, ran it through the week and then closed it for a month. Would you expect to have much business waiting for your re-opening? The proposition sounds absurd, yet it is just what you commonly do with your advertising.

Your landlord wants you to rent by the year, yet you do not think he is unusually or morbidly self-seeking in insisting that you rent for a period of time. In fact, you have long ago realized that, for your own sake, you must have the store not only for a year, but for five, or ten, or twenty years. And why? Because you know that "it will not pay you to build up trade and recognition unless you are going to stay to take advantage of the work done. If your landlord should say to you: "Smith, I have that store over there on that good business corner which is vacant, but which I can rent this afternoon for a term of years. You have always been a good friend of mine and I should like to give you a lift; hence, I offer you that store indefinitely at the regular rental, but with the proviso that you can shut it up any time for varying periods of a week, a month, or six months, and go home or take a trip to Europe in the intervals, and pay me no rental during the closed periods." What would you do? I imagine that you would meet that with a counter proposition that the landlord give you a reduced rental as the favor he wants to do you, and then you would be only too glad to keep the store open.

Suppose you were to hire your clerks the way you hire your advertising, what would happen? A clerk would come in on Monday, work through the week, and be "let out" Saturday night. If he was treated exactly as advertising, he would work for another man the next week. He would go to a third the next week. He would get back to you, say, in four weeks. Half of his time would be taken up renewing acquainances, just as the ad space must do after each interruption in the service. Needless to say the clerk would "slow up" on efficiency by fully 50 p.c.

All these little things would "save expenses." You would have rent to pay only spasmodically; you would pay clerk hire for ten or twelve weeks instead of fifty in the year, You could hire horses and wagons for the few weeks of business so much less than you could own them. O, yes; there would be great advantages, surely! That is until you came to check up your trade.

Talking to the Ad. Solicitor.

Now listen: If the ad solicitor is dishonest and deceitful to you to a certain extent, you make him so. You insist on running an ad. once in a while which, if it does any good at all, does that by pure chance and good luck, and no amount of talk will make you see that you thus stand in your own light. You ask the solicitor if "the ad will pay" and he tells you, without much conviction or enthusiasm, that it will pay, and he tries to honestly believe that it will pay. But if you were not so blindly self-deceived that you could not listen to the truth, he would be able to tell you what he really thinks. And he really thinks, in fact, he knows, that you are not going to get results commensurate with any advertising expenditure unless you keep it up. The trouble is that the man must live and to live, YOU force him to dodge the facts.

Now, either take the prominent store, or stay where you are; either hire the good clerk and bend you thoughts on keeping him after you have him, or let him alone where he is; either plan all your business on permenent lines of definite policy, or stay out of business. It follows: Either make a practice of advertising, or stay out of the game.

Percentage of Cost.

Two per cent. to 2½ p.c. is about right for rent; 6 p.c. to 7 p.c. is correct for wages' expense; 1 p.c. to 2 p.c. is correct for advertising. If the remainder of your business be properly conducted, you can work these percentages so that you can be within safe limits and yet spend 1 p.c., 1½ p.c. or even 2 p.c. for advertising. On sales of $2,000 per month, 1 p.c. is $20; 2 p.c. is $40. Such set, fixed expenditure, carried as a stated sum ALWAYS, regarded as just as inevitable as rent, will build up your business for you, provided the advertising is used right and your business and organization is right.

But to be successful you must do two things: You must "Keep Everlastingly at IT," but even before you do that you must get after it RIGHT! This simply means that you must devote TIME, THOUGHT, PLANNING to your advertising. It would be folly simply to SPEND $20 to $40 per month, but it is wisdom to so handle that outlay that it becomes and remains an INVESTMENT.

Make it Serious Work.

But, again the word of caution: Advertising is SERIOUS WORK and must be handled with GREAT CARE and persevering industry, or your money will lead you where it has lead other careless advertisers—to the conclusion that "Advertising does not Pay!" Therefore, seek good counsel, talk with your editor and printer; let those people help you, as they will gladly do; and, lastly, make a definite, serious work of caring for your advertising.

SOAP AT 4 CENTS A BAR.

Grocer Selling at This Price Said to be Not Wise.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—At the regular meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association on Monday night, it was decided to hold an At Home this winter as last. The executive committee was given charge of the entire arrangements.

There was still another short discussion on the soap question, A. White bringing the matter to the attention of the meeting by asking what the present situation was. He was inclined to criticize the system whereby some retailers were given soap at the jobber's prices while others couldn't get them. The department stores were thus enabled to cut prices, he maintained. The manufacturers claimed that those who obtain the jobbers' prices get them now because they are able to purchase the quantity, and because they have been on the list for so long a time.

It was explained by W. C. Miller and Thos. Clarke that at the last soap conference it was suggested that 50 per cent. of the Canadian trade be secured to co-operate in placing soap on a strictly 5 cent basis; the securing of this percentage was now under way, and it was the general impression that eventually, when present stocks became depleted, the situation would right itself. Some one told of a small retail dealer selling soap at 4 cents a bar, and he was generally characterized as a fool.

Discussion on holding bi-monthly meetings was deferred until next meeting. Nomination of officers was held, W. C. Miller, vice-president, being the only one nominated for the presidency. There were several names advanced for the other offices and the election will take place next meeting night—the third Monday in January.

Study Variations in Insurance Policy

These are Not Authorized by the Government, and Are Always in Ink of Different Color From That in Which Rest of the Policy is Printed—They Ought to be Carefully Read—Insurance Man Advises Employmentt of Private Adjustor in Case of Fire.

A few weeks ago The Grocer printed some things in reference to fire insurance policies that should be given close attention. Fire is something that comes rarely, but usually unexpected, and bebefore it does come, the merchant should be in such a position that he will not be financially crippled.

Many merchants have thought themselves well protected, but after a fire they found their policies read in such a way that the companies insuring them declined to pay what they thought they were naturally entitled to, in consideration of the premiums.

Watch the Variations.

As was pointed out in the previous article, most fire insurance policies have among the conditions laid down by the government, many variations. These variations ought to be carefully watched; it is an easy matter to read them, since according to law, they have to be printed in an ink of a different color from that in which the other conditions are printed.

A representative of an insurance company well versed in every phase of insurance, told the writer that there were few companies which did not have any variations. Of those which have, some have more than others. In the case of one fire insurance policy he knew of, there were 23 conditions and 42 variations.

The Courts Decide.

If the ruling of the fire insurance adjuster is disputed by the one insured, and the case goes to law, the court decides whether the variations hold good or not. In the opinion of the writer's informant, not 75 per cent. of the variations would be upheld in the law courts. This is the protection the one insured has.

"But," he continued, "there are very few disputes which ever go to law. If the one insured is a wealthy firm or individual, and he takes exception to the adjuster's ruling, the company usually backs down, and does not press for the consideration of every variation; they know the court would not substantiate their claim.

"On the other hand, if the insured is a poor man, he usually accepts the company's adjustment, fearing that if the suit shou'd go against him he would be financially ruined. The companies which have the many variations know this, and they use their power to attain their own end."

That is one reason why retail merchants should read and study carefully their insurance policies. They should see that the variations, if there are any, are not going to injure them in case of fire.

"I would advise," remarked the insurance man, "that when fire does occur, the one insured should secure an adjuster—a man who has some experience in estimating fire losses—to look after his interests. He could then compare his work with that of the company's appraiser. Often he could make double the cost of employing the man, as everyone knows fire insurance adjust-

There is no reason why every dealer should not get the greatest possible benefit from interior arrangement. If attention is given to it and a study made of what others have done, dealers can greatly increase their selling power. Purchasers like to look upon clean, attractive, well arranged shelves. They give a dignity to the store which unconsciously impels people towards it; they impress them with the quality idea—something always to be desired.

J. B. Kemp, Pembroke, Ont., is proprietor of the store in which the above photograph was taken. The following letter from him is interesting:

"Editor Canadian Grocer,—I send you under separate cover a photo of part of one side of my store in which I have done business under my own name for a quarter of a century. My asset at the beginning was The Canadian Grocer which proved a good one.

"This photo does not quite do justice now as some changes have been made in the way of installing a coffee mill, silent salesmen, etc. I have always carried out the pure food idea and try to educate the people to use the best goods. Cleanliness is one of my mottos."

ers are no more liberal than is absolutely necessary."

Fixture Depreciation.

Another item that the merchant ought to closely follow in fire insurance is depreciation of fixtures. If the store fixtures are worth $2,000 to-day they will not be worth that much 4 years from now, and there is no use paying premiums forever on $2,000—providing, of course, no new fixtures are added, keeping the value to that amount—because no more than the actual cash value at the time of fire can be secured.

Cleanliness, Initiative and Salesmanship

These Were Among Topics Touched Upon by W. J. Irvine in Address to Retail Grocers—Dealers Who Do not Pay Attention to These and Other Requisites to Success Criticized — What Promptness Means in Delivery—Loyalty Among Employes.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—While the feature of the regular meeting of the Grocers' Section of the Toronto branch of the R.M.A. was an address by W. J. Irvine, the subsequent discussion upon points which he introduced in the course of his remarks was decidedly interesting from the fact that the members were enabled to express opinions, and ask for further information upon the topics that had been presented. J. F. Holloway occupied the chair and the preliminary business was made brief.

The Telephone as a Salesman.

F. C. Higgins reported on the recent soap conference: the chairman dealt with the charcoal question stating that a meeting with a manufacturer was being arranged. The telphone matter has been settled and the rate remains at $50. It was remarked that this was too high a price but Mr. Holloway believed that when properly used by a grocer it was a satisfactory salesman and gave a good return for the money expended.

Mr. Irvine brought out a number of good points in his address on system and methods in the retail store. He emphasized the value of cleanliness. The grocer knows that among his customers are many women who come from homes where cleanliness is a virtue. They are in many cases women of refinement. The grocer knows this and yet the great majority of the trade forget this fact in dealing with these customers.

The appearance of the man behind the counter should be wholesome and clean. The woman in his store should be impressed by the care with which the goods she buys are handled. The first impression should be good. The customer appreciates the goods more than ordinarily because she has a remembrance of clean hands, clean linen and a general air of tidiness about the grocer.

This was a form of advertisement and a good one. The clerks in the store would more readily take an interest in their personal appearance if the proprietor was himself the missionary.

Prefers Even Tenor of His Way

Lack of initiative was another failing that explained the slow progress of many grocers. There is the man who sees good methods employed here and there but when it is suggested that he imitate or adapt them as far as possible to his own business he holds up his hands and exclaims, "Oh! no that would never work here."

Mr. Irvine mentioned delivery of goods. The departmental stores, at least one of them in Toronto has a reputation for promptness. A woman making a purchase there, practically knows when she will receive it. Experience has proved it to her and now she knows. Many grocers by their particular methods were driving the people down town. The big store sends goods willingingly, and promptly. The small retailer in his service to his customers should endeavor to make these points his own. He strives for a reputation for honesty, quality, etc. He should also further strengthen his position by giving a good delivery service. Mr. Irvine's point was that the grocer should try to use some of the advanced methods that he notices in other stores and in other businesses.

What Salesmanship Is.

Mr. Irvine pointed out what courtesy can do for the grocer. His customers are his main source of revenue, therefore he and his staff should always try to please them and hold them as customers. The value of salesmanship was touched upon. The primary requirements for successful salesmanship are knowledge of the tastes of customers and knowledge of the goods being sold. Then when the tactful clerk suggests some article to a customer he does it in a pleasing way, and he knows the facts about that article. The customer may not buy just then, but she remembers what the clerk had told her about that article; and the actual purchase may come later although the real sale had had been accomplished when the goods had been "talked up" by the salesman.

Should be no Knocking.

Loyalty to the house was a great asset in a retail business. The grocer should endeavor to sow the seed among his clerks and they in turn should not stoop to "knocking" the proprietor or his business. Mr. Irvine touched upon other points and dwelt for a time on doing a cash business.

At the conclusion of his address he was given a hearty vote of thanks.

CALENDARS FOR 1911.

The Laing Packing & Provision Co., Montreal are sending out their attractive 1911 calendar. The entire calendar is a yard long by 15 inches in width.

A Shortage in the Tea Market Is Now Visible

Referring to the tea market a prominent London tea house writes as folows: "The position is somewhat grave, as the trade is face to face with an actual shortage, at any rate of common tea. The Indian crop available for the United Kingdom is estimated at 6,000,000 lbs. less than last year, while from Ceylon we have received 9,000,000 lbs. less.

"The surplus from last year's crops was not common tea and with better trade this year we shall receive less. The deduction to be made from this fact is that the rise is a genuine one. In a condition of affairs such as the present, it would be idle to attempt any forecast of prices in the near or more distant future, but it seems quite evident that no material relief can be expected before the middle of next year.

"Medium tea remains good value both in price and satisfaction from quality, etc."

This intelligence is from one of the largest exporters and importers in the world. Their advice in the past has never been bullish. In fact their tendencies have been bearish and their record shows that they have not tried to mislead their customers for their own temporary benefit.

Another report says: "The activity in the coffee market has had the effect of holding the tea market in check, and the attention given to holiday goods naturally detracts from the regular lines.

"The position of the market is very strong, and a material advance along the entire list is predicted as soon as orders are received in any volume.

"The Ceylon crop is reported about 7,000,000 pounds short of last year, the India crop about 12,000,000 short, while Japan shows a shortage of about 7,000,000 pounds."

Want the Early Closing By-law Off the Books

Belleville, Ont., Dec. 22.—At the city council meeting this week a petition was presented by grocers asking the council to rescind the by-law passed in May last which compelled grocers to close their places of business at 7.30 excepting Saturday evening and during Christmas week. Through their counsel the grocers contended the by-law was not a fair one and instanced a case where a grocer who had also a meat business, tested the by-law and won his case. Since then he has kept open to a later hour while exclusive grocers adjacent had to close.

After some discussion the petition was referred to next year's council.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

Another Firm Offering Hampers of Goods for Christmas Gifts—General Delivery in Seaforth Has Few Supporters—Selling Goods by Telephone—A Saving on Selling Table Raisins—Catering to Social Organizations — Cutting Broom Prices.

Hampers as Xmas Presents.

Calgary, Alta, Dec. 22.—In a recent issue of The Grocer there was an item on the Practical Methods page telling of a modern idea being utilized by Fraser, Viger & Co., Montreal, respecting the packing and offering for sale of cases of goods for Christmas presents. That idea is worked out by the Hudson Bay Company. They have run an advertisement in the local newspapers telling all about this feature under the heading of "The Best Gift to a Family—A Christmas Hamper." In a panel at one side of the ad. they say: "Order as early as you can—we ship to any address. Enclose sufficient money to prepay if hamper is intended as a present. Balance of money left after paying charges will be returned to you."

Hampers are offered at $4.90, $6.50, $7.50, $10.50 and $13.25. The $4.90 hampers consisted of the following articles.

General Delivery in Seaforth.

Seaforth, Ont., Dec. 22.—The merchants of Seaforth do not see eye to eye in the matter of the formation of a general delivery such as is being tried out in Goderich with good success. Up to the present only three grocers are using the system instituted by a man who has had experience in other places. These grocers are Chas. Andrews, A. G. Ault, and A. Crone. One of the other grocers does not think that the new system would benefit him. He has such a large trade, he says, that he couldn't give the service he now is able to render. Hardware merchants do not enter because they claim they could not get the general delivery to deliver goods out in the country and that therefore they would have to keep an outfit anyway.

A Telephone Talk.

Chatham, Ont. Dec. 22.—G. S. Bartlett of the King Edward Grocery is making a feature of telephone orders. The King Edward has from the outset, featured this line of business, the telephone number appearing in connection with all advertising readers.

Recently Mr. Bartlett had in the local press a suggestive telephone talk from which the following sentences are quoted:

"Dear Madam: We want you to remember that when you call us by telephone for goods you need in a hurry, you have the advantage of prompt delivery.

"Get the habit of phoning your wants to us at once, and avoid the danger of overlooking an important item, because we carry large assortments so as to be ready with the goods you want, and as you want them.

"We are always striving to anticipate your needs, and you will run no possible risk in ordering by phone. The satisfaction we get out of this business comes from the satisfaction you get out of it.

"We have two delivery wagons in connection with our business, and hope you will make use of them—and remember, we appreciate your orders.

"The King Edward Grocery, G. S. Bartlett, Phone 51."

ROBERT McCONNELL,
One of St. John's (N. B.) Oldest Grocers Who Has Recently Retired From Business. He is Succeeded by His Son Robert.

Good Method of Selling Table Raisins.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—J. Blood, Yonge street, has adopted a method of selling table raisins that effects a considerable saving. He keeps a sample box on the counter with a glass top fastened down tight so that customers can see the goods but cannot touch them. Half and full pound packages of the raisins are kept ready—in a tin box, to prevent deterioration. Formerly when these goods were exposed on the counter, people picked them over in such a way that others would insist upon having their purchases taken from the bottom of the box, or would be deterred from buying altogether. Then, again, being exposed to the air, a certain quantity of the raisins always dried out, and were unfit for sale. Mr. Blood figures that he lost on an average three to five pounds on every box containing twenty-two pounds, so that the saving he now makes is well worth while.

Caters to Social Organizations.

St. John, N. B., Dec. 22.—W. H. Dunham has moved his grocery, meat and fish business from 115 Main street to the building at the corner of Main and Albert streets. The new stand is fitted with some modern appliances. The grocery department occupies the larger portion of the new store, while a meat-cutting bench is located at one side near the entrance. The fish department is reached through a door from the main store, and also has a separate entrance from the street.

Computing scales and a cash register are a part of the equipment, and all perishable goods are kept under cover in glass showcases. A blackboard at the entrance to the grocery reminds the customer or the passerby that a supply of fish of various kinds may be obtained. A list of the varieties is set forth each day, and it has proved an effective sales agent.

A side line which Mr. Dunham has found profitable is in catering for social organizations or clubs. In this way he not only derives a profit from the goods he furnishes, but also gets in touch with a lot of individual buyers he might not otherwise meet. He is a member of a number of these organizations, including the salvage corps and fire police, a volunteer organization connected with the fire department, which goes in for many social functions.

Cut Prices on Brooms.

Goderich, Ont., Dec. 22.—Neil Cameron, a local merchant who advertises his place as a department store, started out the other morning to sell brooms by the cut-price method. His samples at the door had not long been ticketed up when Harry Long, the "Quality Store" grocer, corner of Hamilton street and The Square, followed suit, and soon McEwen Brothers, The Square and Morris & McClinton of the Maple Leaf grocery, had a good display of brooms in their windows marked down to 19 and 20 cents. The department store dropped the notion, and brooms in Goderich now sell for normal prices.

WHOLESALERS' DIRECTORY.

According to Orrin Thacker's Directory of Wholesale Grocers in Canada and the United States, there are 145 in the former, and 2,823 in the latter country. Considering the population of Canada at 7,000,000, there is one wholesale grocer to every 48,276 people; if the population of the U. S. is 90,000,000, there is one wholesaler to every 31,880 people. The name of each wholesaler is given, with his rating.

Merry Men About the Banquet Board

Members of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association Hold Annual Meeting and Banquet—J. Bevans Giles The New President — Politicians and a Railway Magnate Present—Sparklets Gathered Up From Around The Board.

Staff Correspondence.

Montreal, Dec. 22.—More than two hundred commercial "line" men attended the annual meeting of the D. C. T. A. at the Windsor Hotel on the 17th inst. The centre of interest no doubt lay in the declaration of the poll, but there was quite an amount of important business transacted.

The retiring president, S. J. Matthewson, occupied the chair, and was supported by J. Bevans Giles, vice president; W. J. Egan, past president; Max Murdoch, treasurer, and H. W. Wadsworth, secretary.

The annual report showed a net increase of 377 members during the year, making a total membership of 7,007.

A Retiring Speech.

Before retiring from office, the president, S. J. Matthewson, expressed thanks for the support given him, and pointed out how much responsibility rested upon the directors in regard to investment of funds. In this connection, he threw out the suggestion that the association should consider the advisability of appointing an architect or estate agent to value properties on which loans were made.

All other business being concluded, the audience were relieved to hear the retiring president with a nervous tremor of excitement exclaim: "Gentlemen, the psychological moment has now arrived." Amid cheers he declared J. Bevans Giles, traveler for Radnor Water, elected by a majority of 185 votes. No sooner had the excitement subdued, than Chas. Gurd, his opponent, rushed forward and clasping "Bev." by the hand, declared: "Gentlemen, there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip—I've slipped."

The audience was not slow to applaud this show of good feeling, and every one was pleased to see the two rivals stand hand in hand.

The Banquet.

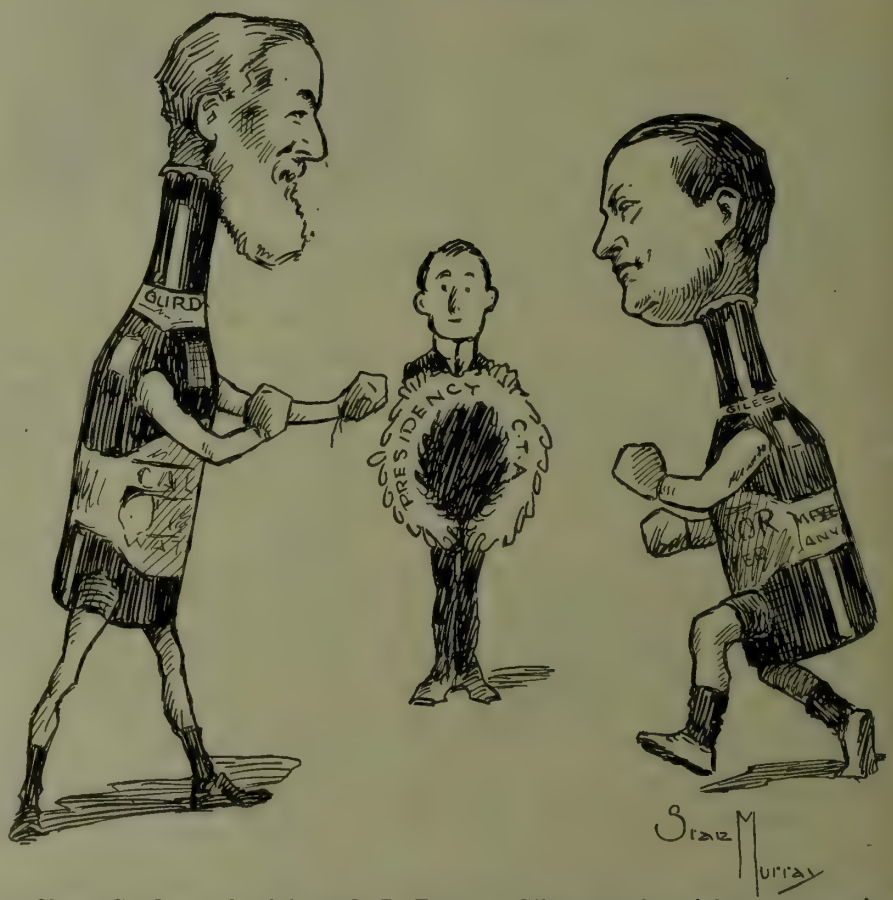
More than four hundred members sat down to the annual feast provided by the association at the Windsor Hotel on the 19th, and a right jolly crowd they were.

After drinking to the toast of "The King," word was passed round that the President was going to speak. Everyone tried to stretch his neck beyond the normal, but there was no necessity to risk such a strain, as the strong flow of language from "the jolly little fellow" soon gave everyone the cue as to where he was sitting.

He was quite considerate to be so brief as to allow the other orators who were so anxious to get talking to produce their notes and start off.

Labor King Talks.

The Hon. Mackenzie King was warmly received, and after stirring up a patriotic feeling, referred to the rapid development of Canada, and stated emphatically that what confederation meant in politics, transportation meant in trade, and that unless the country could be held together by transportation facilities, it could not be united as it ought. Consequently there ought to be no feeling against the expenditure of money toward the increasing of such facilities as the deepening of harbors and the furtherance of public works. It is all for the good of Canada. He further mentioned that he had traveled round the world, and knew how far Canada's trade extended. It was not confined to land, but was stretching across the oceans both east and west. This not only made it necessary for trade interests to consider the accommodation to carry this trade, but for the government to consider the necessary provisions for the protection of that trade.



Mr. King further appealed to the patriotic feeling of the audience by stating that wherever he went he could not lose sight of the British flag. A man could therefore leave Montreal and perform this long trip without leaving the powerful protection of the British emblem.

"That means that we Canadians can look forward to the day when our trade shall ply from end to end of the world, with the Union Jack as the emblem of our security. With what we have by Providence, what we have by inheritance and what we shall win in future, may we Canadians not look forward with pride to what the years shall bring forth, and to give to it the best we have in heart, brain and hand?"

A Plea for Unity.

C. J. Doherty stated that what Canada needed was not merely the means of transportation, but a close study of the conditions in all sections of the country; and these conditions were met by the commercial travelers whose business brought them in contact with people from one end of the country to the other. They could aid in creating a feeling of pure Canadian patriotism which recognized neither east nor west, without racial differences or clash of creed, in which all could unite in a common pride of Canadian citizenship.

Max Murdoch then proposed the toast of "Our Guests," to which Chas. M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk, responded.

Travelers' Superior Knowledge.

The latter indulged in an amount of pleasant badinage with the travelers regarding their much more intimate knowledge of train conditions. "You know better than I do what time No. 3 and No. 5 go out. You can tell me what conductor is on board. Moreover you know what stations these trains stop at —where they should stop. In fact, you can possibly give me very forcible arguments as to why the tariff on excess baggage should be reduced." He predicted that within three years the Grand Trunk Pacific would extend to the coast.

"With the growth of transportation interests the relations between the people and the transportation companies is bound to become a most important question, which may even take the place of the tariff as a public issue. It will be a question you will have with you all the time, and we may not always see things eye to eye, as to what rates and service shall be. But I am glad to meet you tonight, and if I can in future meet you in connection with these transportation interests, and give you the reasons for the faith we have, I have a strong belief that we shall not be far apart, and that we together shall proceed in doing, what we are both interested in doing—developing to the utmost extent the commercial interests and advantages of Canada."

Several other toasts were proposed and briefly responded to, and at the conclusion S. Wotherspoon proposed "The Press," to which a representative of the MacLean Publishing Co. replied.

The officers elected to fill the remaining positions were:

Ed. Duckett (A. McDougall Varnish Co.) Vice-Pres.; Max Murdoch, Treasurer. Directors: H. M. Levine (Montreal Shirt Co.); Eug. Poitevin (L. H. Hebert Co.); M. W. Hackett (Lymans Limited); W. C. Murray (E. W. Gillett Co., Limited); W. J Irving (Jas. Smart, Limited.)

"Chat Over the Table."

"I heard that a couple of telegrams were received at the Montreal office of the president's company, one prior to the declaration of the poll reading: "Waters troubled. Rise in the Springs." One later read: "Waters subsided. Now calm and settled."

"That's a fine show Poultry Johnny Gunn has on. He's going to make Guelph and Ottawa sit up."

"Say, Max Murdoch's a worker, O. K."

"Who said Bev. Giles had "Little Baptiste" under his arm?"

Banquetlets.

Complimentary packages of tobacco were again in evidence, and the contents much enjoyed, as well as boxes of cigars. Liberality was the order of the evening. The cigars all went off in smoke or in somebody's pockets.

A full table of Bluenoses was much in evidence towards the close of the evening, but otherwise behaved with extreme quietness.

An old familiar figure was welcomed back in the person of Barlow Cumberland, who was at the first birthday of the association. He was as bright and chirpy as of yore.

A Prize of $100 in gold is offered to farmers by John A. Gunn for the best poultry shipments.

Light a Craven cigarette and place it on a piece of lump sugar and watch the Salome dance that will result. This was a favorite pastime at the press table.

Hon. Mackenzie King's trip around the world was the quickest transportation furnished travelers in many a day. In fact, he went half way around again by way of good measure.

Ex-judge Doherty, while not so "geographically" exacting as his predecessor, was unique in his remarks, especially about that new Government idea.

A life's but a span;
Why then, let a traveler drink.

It is rumored that the rate on excess baggage was reduced on December 20th. Why?

Over 400 big men, and all obedient to little "Bevans." The banquet was the most successful ever held. Order was perfect, and this was due mainly to the wisdom of the president running one item of the programme on top of the next one, thus not giving an opportunity for talking which has in the past been a noticeable embarrassment.

Although the travelers' dinner is never taken seriously or what is spoken regarded in a grave manner, yet the remarks of C. C. Ballantyne could not fail to make the most uninterested listener sit up and take notice.

Juniors were in evidence more so than in past years. This is an encouraging sign.

Those were nice bluepoints, but they came from malpecque beds.

While a number of the speakers were in a reminiscent mood, it was regretted that Sir Thomas Shaughnessy was unable to attend, owing to illness, and did not tell the story of how he once gave ten dollars to a man to buy a ticket to Toronto. He could not give him a pass, and the party to show his gratitude, immediately went down the street and bought a ticket over the Grand Trunk railway with the money.

Mayor Nathan will probably learn with surprise how broad-minded Mayor Guerin has become, and this so suddenly.

That was a delicate compliment of "Bev." Giles in placing Mr. Gurd at the head table.

This year there was less "phiz" and more mineral than ever before. Notwithstanding the bad state of the sidewalks the roll call was perfect next morning.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Before another week has rolled around, Christmas will have come and gone. We will soon be on the verge of another year; those merry bells will presently ring out the old and ring in the new with all its possibilities and pleasures. We must make it better than the past.

The Canadian Grocer hopes that it will be better for everyone; it wishes all its readers a right Merry Christmas, and may each and everyone live to enjoy a greater measure of prosperity in the years to come.

A MERCHANTS' DEPUTATION.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada are arranging a monster deputation to go to Ottawa about the end of January 1911, to protest to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the government against the Co-operative Bills introduced by F. D. Monk and others.

Our readers are quite familiar with this question. What all should do now is to make up their minds to join this deputation and enter their protests by their presence Parliament meets about January 12 after the holidays. The deputation will be arranged for as soon after that as possible and during a time when business is slack.

Every section of every trade should object strenuously to such "class" legislation.

RESPECTING SALE OF POISONS.

There has been a bill introduced into the House of Commons by E. N. Lewis, West Huron, Ont., respecting the sale of poison which will affect merchants and particularly those in rural districts where drug stores have not located. The first clause of the bill reads as follows: Any person who by himself or his agent sells, offers for sale, attempts to sell, or gives away any poison without doing so under the authority of a medical certificate, or prescription, is guilty of a misdemeanor and is liable to a fine of not less than $100 or imprisonment for not more than six months in jail, or both.

According to medical men, Mr. Lewis states, there is a practice in vogue in many towns of using cocaine, it being sometimes more easily procured than spirits. This is his reason for the bill

It will not, however, interfere with the sale of Paris green to farmers but includes all other poisons such as cocaine, carbolic acid, opium, etc.

The bill has so far only passed the first reading and when it come up for final decision there will likely be opposition on the grounds that the matter belongs to the provincial parliament.

The object of the next clause is a worthy one. It aims to prevent accidents by mistake in poisons by restricting the container to a blue glass bottle, three cornered or square with rough or corrugated corners.

TRADE PAPERS WIN OUT.

Toronto assessed The MacLean Publishing Co. as a business concern at 60 per cent., claiming that the assessment act applied to daily newspapers only, and that trade papers were not newspapers because they did not give general news.

The MacLean Co. at once entered an appeal on the ground that trade papers were newspapers within the meaning of the Ontario Assessment Act; they were specialized newspapers; being in the same class as the country weeklies in furnishing exclusive news for their class of readers. It was shown that the best country weeklies devoted themselves entirely to their own field, that they gave no general news whatever, and The Freeholder, Cornwall, published by the first vice-president of the Canadian Press Association was produced as a type of the modern country paper.

The matter came before Judge Winchester, who very promptly decided, on looking over The MacLean Co.'s various publications, that they were clearly newspapers, in that they gave most important political, trade and general news of interest to a very important class in the country.

Questioned by the Judge, the official representing the city, admitted that society, religious and similar publications were newspapers, but argued if a publication gave news to business men it could not be a newspaper. The absurdity of the argument was so apparent that the Judge stopped him, telling him in effect that there was no use his going on; that news that interested merchants and manufacturers was news as much as any other class of news, and of a higher value.

This is apparently the climax of a fight against trade newspapers that has been going on for some years, openly instigated by certain big dailies, supported by leading mail-order houses. The latter argue that trade newspapers are demonstrating to merchants in other cities and towns that advertising in their own local dailies and weeklies and improvement in their business methods will bring them as much up-to-date as the big city stores. The people are being educated by the advertising in the smaller dailies and weeklies to buy at home and they do not respond to the advertising in the big dailies as they used to.

For years they tried to get the post office to impose a higher rate of postage and to harrass them in other ways; but Parliament is legislating for all Canada and not for Toronto and the secret influences at work in the department came to naught.

TO SAVE THE DAYLIGHT.

How would you like to get up an hour earlier in the morning and not know it? Of course you would open your store an hour earlier, have dinner sooner, close sooner, have an extra hour of daylight in the evening and go to bed an hour earlier.

This is the import of a bill that has been introduced into the house of Commons, called the Daylight Saving Bill. It proposes that on a Sunday morning in April of each year our time pieces be advanced from 2 to 3 o'clock and that they be allowed to run that way until November.

If this comes to pass we will all be up and astir 60 minutes before we are now. According to the clock when it has been reset there will, of course, be no difference. If we rise in the summer at 6 o'clock we will still get up at 6 by the clock but if we take into consideration Greenwich standard time, it will in reality be only 5 o'clock.

But this does not mean we will have to work an hour longer. If we now close our stores at 7 o'clock, we will do the same but in reality it will be but 6 o'clock. That means an extra hour before the evening twilight and also that we go to bed an hour sooner, thereby getting the same amount of sleep and gaining an hour's daylight.

This appears to be a pretty good thing for merchants who do not spend the entire daylight hours and part of the night in work. It is certainly a daylight saving method and if carried into effect at the proper time by the whole of Canada would cause no inconvenience and from our point of view would give a great deal of satisfaction.

What do others think of it? Drop us a line.

A WASTE OF MONEY.

A reader of The Grocer interested in retail newspaper advertising as a method for increasing his selling power, writes to point out the inconsistences in this respect of a general merchant in his town. This merchant advertised mitts and allowed the same copy to run all summer.

This is certainly an inconsistency. It is worse than that; it is bad business and shows up such a man as unprogressive, careless, wasteful, a "has-been" and all the other adjectives of the dictionary implying retrogression.

There are too many dealers in this class. It is frequently noticed that some advertise, for instance, Thanksgiving goods for weeks after that holiday season has passed, Christmas goods when Christmas is over, etc. While this is scarcely as bad as advertising mitts in summer, yet it denotes a merchant who is out-of-date and who might be better engaged at some business requiring less thought and initiative.

KEEPING THE STOCK FRESH.

In taking stock from the store room, care should be used to select the older stock. No good grocer will retain stock that is really old but as his stores become depleted he replenishes them.

In piling in the new goods they should be placed behind the old in order that the latter may go out first. In this way the dealer will always have a fresh stock on hand.

MICE AND MATCHES.

Again must the alarm be sounded, "Beware of Fire." The other morning just before day-break a fire started in the store of a Toronto grocer, causing in a few minutes about $25 damage to the building and $200 to the stock, besides the inconvenience the owner was put to just before the Christmas season.

It broke out in a refuse barrel beneath the counter and was thought to be due to mice and matches.

As pointed out only a few weeks ago in these columns, merchants cannot be too careful. Most grocers make a practice of going over the entire store just before closing time to see that everything is in proper order. When they do this, they feel better, sleep more securely, worry less, and reduce the chance of fire and loss to a minimum.

When the causes of fire have been removed, there is small prospect of a fire. Clean up the refuse, place the matches beyond reach of the mice, and, to make assurance doubly sure, destroy the mice.

Inferior Delivery Service Lost Custom

Story About a Dealer Who Would Only Deliver His Goods Every Other Day—Customers Gradually Drifted Away to Where They Could Get Adequate Service—A Merchant Who Makes it a Point to Attend to Personal Wants of His Patrons—Would Hammer the Nails Down in a Customer's Shoe.

That a dealer's selling power is either favorably or unfavorably influenced by the service he renders is unquestionable. A merchant may sell the best of goods, his prices may be quite reasonable, his buying system may be perfect and his bookkeeping faultless, yet if he does not study how to give his customers a service which is equal to or better than that of a competitor who sells equally good goods at equally moderate prices, he cannot hope to retain those customers or add many new ones.

Here is a case in point which recently came to the notice of the writer. In an Eastern Ontario town there is a retail grocery dealer who has been in business many years. He is now a pretty old man. Among his customers in this section of the town in which he is located have been several families who bought considerable quantities of groceries. In fact at one time he held the best class of trade in his district.

Deliveries Every Other Day.

Recently, however, his delivery service has not been at all adequate to suit these customers, one of whom put the matter thus: "The store is about 20 minutes' walk from our place and while we do not mind occasionally going over for groceries yet often none of us have the time.

"Just the other day my wife wanted something for supper and telephoned to the store for it. The answer was that it could not be delivered that day as the store was now only delivering certain days of the week. The best they could do was to bring it over in the morning. This of course, was of no use to her and she was compelled to ring up another grocer who was quite willing to make the delivery."

Loss of a Customer.

This case actually occurred. The ultimate result was that this family gradually drifted away from their grocer until now they purchase nothing at all from him. So far as the man was concerned they had always liked him; his goods were of a superior quality and his store was neat and clean. But simply because he did not give the proper service, he was rejected.

In modern business, service plays an important part. It is so easy to obtain that people will gradually drift to those merchants who give them the superior service, other things being equal. A woman may not look for, but nevertheless appreciates, some little personal attention now and again apart from her actual purchases, but she expects to be treated in a business-like manner in ordering and receiving goods. No one could be expected to deal with a grocer in a large centre who delivered only every other day when a dozen others would supply the same goods every day and be glad to do it.

The writer knows of a merchant in a village store who makes it a point to not only give the best possible service in making sales, but is glad of the opportunity of helping a customer otherwise, whenever she calls.

Merchant Turns Cobbler.

He has been known to hammer the nails down in the shoe of a woman customer who complained of them giving her trouble. He voluntarily asked her to sit down and take off the boot while he eliminated the nails. This man does so many such acts of kindness that he not only holds fast his customers, but he has them returning these kindnesses by bringing in occasionally a piece of fresh pork, a chicken, some apples, etc. He is always careful not to give anything away that he sells in the store or even to cut the price, but if something is wanted outside of the goods he carries he allows the customer to have it at cost.

Service a little better than customers can obtain from any of his competitors is what he aims at always.

GROCER LOSES LEGAL CASE.

A legal case of interest to merchants was decided in a Toronto law court last week. A retail grocer sued a woman for a grocery bill, the groceries having been purchased by her husband. As it happened in this case the wife was a property owner while the husband was not.

The presiding judge decided that unless there was a special contract, the wife could not be held responsible and judgment was given for defendant.

How difficult it is for the retail merchant to get his just dues!

Supplied to The Trade by Sellers.

Invalid Oxvil, the Perfect Fluid Beef, is now being sold on the Canadian market under the contract selling plan in order that price-cutting will be eliminated. This will make Oxvil a certain profit-getter since it will be sold at a uniform price and at a uniform profit. This should attract the attention of those grocers who are anxious to maintain prices and besides, every time you sell and recommend Oxvil you are giving your customer an absolutely pure fluid beef which is full of true beef nourishment. A discount of 10 p.c. on all orders of 2 dozen or over will be given. Show cards are included with orders. The Harry Horne Co., 309 King St., West, Toronto, are controlling agents for Canada.

The Markets —Strong Feeling in Tea

Reports From Primary Markets Show a Falling Off in Supplies and Jobbers Say The Tea is not Being Produced—The Strong Tendency they Believe is Genuine—General Trade Among Wholesalers is Quiet this Week While Retailer has his Innings—Prunes Very Firm.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—
Tea—Market very firm.
Cream of Tartar—Firmer.
Prunes—½ cent advance.

Toronto, Dec. 22—Now it is tea. With coffee marking time after an excited run up the price list and while the trade have been watching with interest for the next move, they have had their attention sharply drawn to the tea market. In several houses the first thing mentioned was the condition of this market, manifesting that the wholesale trade are impressed by conditions as they are reported.

Some in expressing an opinion state that they believe there is an actual scarcity just as announced. They point to the big increase in consumption and the uprooting of the plantations in order to plant rubber trees. These are mentioned as prima facie reasons why tea might be influenced. The strength of the market has been referred to before but it is just of late that the trade have been becoming loud voiced in their statements that "tea is firm and it looks as if it is going to be firmer."

According to the agreement governing the coffee syndicate, 600,000 bags of valorization coffee must be sold after January 1st. At the last sale this coffee brought 9½ cents. Since then prices have advanced fully four cents a pound. The 600,000 bags will mean about 78,000,000 pounds and at four cents advance will show a profit to those interested over the previous sale of something more than $3,000,000. Should the syndicate decide to sell double the quantity, as they are permitted under the agreement, the clean up will be over $6,000,000. Apparently there is a strong motive for poor crop reports and a bull campaign.

Sugar—The week has brought no changes in the sugar market. There is some local buying. It is considered fairly good for this time of the year. On the whole, however, trade is quiet. In the primary market the indications point to lower prices. Some say they will not be announced until after the New Year; others believe a change may come at any time. the excess of the new crop over the old is heavy and is accountable for the bullish market now reported.

Syrups and Molasses.—There is still a fair demand for syrups. In the primary molasses markets the sentiment is upwards. At the beginning of the present grinding season it was announced that the output would show a decrease of from 25 to 30%. It is now claimed that this was underestimated. From one source it is learned that the record for molasses from Sept. 1st up to date is 23,000 barrels behind the receipts for the same time last year. Hence!

Tea.—The general market is firm. Reports say that shipments from Northern India for the season up to a fortnight ago are nearly three million pounds less than for the corresponding period last year, while from the India Tea Association it is learned that the season is now practically closed in nearly all districts. In the rise in common teas, it is stated that the advance in this grade has not been at the expense of medium descriptions. The latter has participated to a considerable extent.

Spices—Cream of tartar is one of the strongest spices as far as market conditions are concerned. Latest reports indicate that this strength is to continue till far into the new year. Quotations now offered are for prompt reply and are made on other conditions that show that the position of holders is strong. White pepper is firm and ginger, mace and cloves are decidedly firm. The market has not lost any ground of late.

TORONTO.—Canned goods are firm but at present are inclined to be quiet in so far as demand is concerned. This is only a slight temporary lull, that will be followed by a return of trade after the new year gets under way. Jobbers state that the market has lost none of its strength. It is learned that some have not yet received their allotments of tomatoes, corn, etc. Canned salmon is also strong. A recent letter from an authority in Victoria says, "The demand for canned salmon is constantly increasing. The supply of fish is decreasing; consequently, at the present time anyway, it is not a question of demand but of supply. We believe it is only a question of a few years that the salmon pack on the coast will be considerably decreased in quantity and that the whole supply wil be marketed in the Dominion."

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Canned Beans—Increase 2½c.
Tarragona Almonds—Scarce.
Prunes—Scarce.

Montreal, Dec. 22.—With Xmas at hand grocers have been paying most attention to seasonable goods. This fact coupled with the high prices prevailing, has curtailed the demand in many lines.

Tarragona almonds and Valencia raisins are scarce, in fact the stocks of nuts are getting low.

Prunes are unusually scarce this year, and higher prices may be expected.

Sugar.—Things remain quiet in the sugar market, and no great change in feeling is likely to take place till January crop will arrive. The increased estimates for the European beet crop were not liked abroad apparently, since cables reported the London market as quiet with prices barely maintained.

Syrup and Molasses.—Neither of these commodities being seasonable, the demand cannot be expected to be very strong. Yet things are not too dull considering, and the outlook is for better business at the beginning of the year.

Dried Fruits.—All reports from the Coast dwell upon the unusual scarcity of prunes, especially in the more popular sizes. A number of packers have withdrawn offerings, either because they have nothing left to sell or are expecting to get much higher prices when the spring demand sets in. Peaches are attracting quite a little attention, owing to the high prices of evaporated apples.

Spices.—The spice market remains quiet but steady, there being no special feature. Business is confined to absolute requirements of the trade. Grinders are said to be showing little interest pending the turn of the year.

There are no changes in prices, although some say there are likely to be some at beginning of year.

Tea.—There is a little more interest shown in the tea trade locally, possibly on account of the quiet tone of the coffee market. However, the amount of interest is not great either in Japans, Chinas or Ceylons, as the whole quest of grocers is for holiday goods.

Coffee.—There was not much news in the coffee market this week, for although it remains firm things are comparatively quiet. In the New York market there was not much coffee present for sale, but Rios were firm and Santos steady.

The reports from Brazil say that there is little coffee back in the interior, and much bullish capital is being made out of this claim in the States.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS—

Prunes—Advanced.

Evaporated Apples—Out of stock.

Coffee—Very firm.

Currants—Up ½c.

Winnipeg, Dec. 22.—Local houses are taking a breathing spell after an exceptionally heavy season. Some of the jobbers are arranging to take stock, and many claim that on account of the low stock in almost every line that the task of stock taking will not be very arduous this year. Many repeat orders are coming in for standard lines, and the holiday ordering is practically over except from local stores.

The scarcity of stocks evidently all over the continent tended to make some notable advances, and strengthen the general grocery market. Local wholesalers expect that there will be a more free movement of goods from crop centres to Western Canada later in the year, as it is believed that stocks are being held in crop centres. At that rate there is little anticipation of higher prices and although the market is strong now, and advancing on many lines, yet it is believed that four months from now the quotations will not be much higher then they are at present.

Sugar.—At the time of writing the sugar market is quite unchanged, and no one knows when a change may occur. Fancy sugars have been in great demand during the past month and stocks are low in the city.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—The prune market which has been going up by degrees for some time has advanced ½c this week. Prunes are reported scarce and although it is difficult to know just what the quantity is in crop centres, at any rate in Canada it is not large. Currants are also advanced ½c. Western wholesalers are of the opinion that some lines that are reported scarce and high at present time will come into the country more freely in a few weeks, as it is believed that stocks were held until after the holiday rush.

Red Rose Greetings

Canada rounds out another year of vigorous nation building with happy and prosperous auspices for continued growth. To every Canadian this joyous season with its bright outlook is ample inspiration to keener effort and larger hopes.

For 1911 I wish every merchant a large share in the expanding prosperity of the Dominion, and to every customer I would say that more than ever I appreciate the co-operation, good will, and personal friendliness that has helped to make 1910 by far the largest year of the Red Rose Tea business. To all I wish a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

PUBLIC AUCTION OF FREEHOLD CITY PROPERTY

INCLUDING FACTORY, MACHINERY, ETC.

Under and by virtue of the powers contained in a certain mortgage, in which Malta Vita Pure Food Company is the mortgagor, and which mortgage will be produced at the time of sale, there will be offered for sale by public auction on Saturday, the 7th day of January, 1911, at the hour of 12 o'clock noon, at the auction rooms of C. J. Townsend & Co., 68 King Street East, in the City of Toronto, the property described in the said mortgage as follows:—

"All and singular the following described properties situate, lying and being in the City of Toronto, in the County of York, and Province of Ontario, Canada, to wit: That certain parcel or tract of land and premises situate, lying and being in the City of Toronto, in the County of York, and Province of Ontario, Canada, and being composed of Lots One and Two according to Plan "684," filed in the Registry Office for the Western Division of the City of Toronto, together with all factory buildings, shops, dwellings, and other structures thereon or hereafter to be placed thereon, also all railroad tracks to be constructed thereon, and all engines, boilers, belting, shafting, fixed and movable machinery and machines, with their separate parts and attachments, fans, blowers, awnings, steam, gas and water pipes, blast pipes, steam and heating apparatus, gas fixtures, ovens, furnaces, stacks, forges, fire extinguishers, hose and other fire apparatus, electric light, power, heating apparatus, operating machines, with their separate parts and attachments, gearing, dies, office and shop furniture and factory implements, tools of trade and tools used in repairing buildings or machinery, draught animals, harnesses, stable furniture, wagons, carts and trucks, kept for use, and all other fixtures, implements and apparatus, being and intending to include all of the chattels now situate upon said described parcel of real estate, which said parcel of real estate, together with said personal property constitute its factory and plant in the said City of Toronto, used in carrying on its business of manufacturing and dealing in cereal food; also all licenses or letters patent issued by the Dominion of Canada owned and used by said mortgagor in and about its said business or otherwise, and all interest, right or claim of said mortgagor in and to any other letters patent, or in and to any interest, right or claim in any application for letters patent, now or hereafter applied for by the said Company, also all trade-mark or trade-marks registered or otherwise, and all common law trade-name or trade-names used by the said mortgagor in and about its said manufacturing business, including any and everything commonly denominated "good-will," so far as the same relates to the Dominion of Canada; also all plates and designs for labels and cartons, also all the other real, personal and mixed property of which the mortgagor is seized or possessed in the Dominion of Canada. Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments, rights, franchises, powers, privileges, immunities and appurtenances to any of the said property belonging or in any wise appertaining, and all the rents, profits, and issues arising or to arise therefrom, and all additions to any of said property when and as the same may be in any manner hereafter acquired, whether the same be for replacing or renewing that now in use or otherwise."

The property is situated on the southeast corner of King Street West and Mowat Avenue, in the City of Toronto, and has a frontage on King Street of one hundred and eight feet four and one-third inches (108' 4 1-3") by a uniform depth of one hundred and twenty-five feet (125'), and there is erected thereon a large three-storey solid brick factory, with a one-storey boiler house in addition. The main building is one hundred feet (100') in length on King Street by forty-three feet (43') on the east side of Mowat Avenue, and the boiler house addition immediately joins the main building on the south and towards the east thereof. The building has a large freight elevator situated immediately to the south of and attached to the main building. On the property is a return tubular boiler, 54' 3" flues, full flush front, with brick setting, and all standard fittings, made by Buckeye Engine Co., Salem, Ohio, and there is also a single eccentric automatic piston valve engine, with 54"x18" belt wheel pulley, made by Taylor Manufacturing Co., Chambersburg, Pa., R. M. Beck's Patent. The factory also contains the necessary working plant for the manufacture of Malta Vita, the well-known cereal food. The factory and equipment are said to be in good condition, and the business is now being carried on and Malta Vita being made therein at the present time in the usual manner.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid.

Terms—10 per cent. of the purchase money to be paid down at the time of sale and the balance of the purchase money to be paid within two weeks from the date of sale, after which the purchaser shall be entitled to immediate possession.

For further particulars and conditions of sale apply to the Solicitors of the Mortgagee,

A New Town Every Week!

The fact that almost every week witnesses the birth of a new town in Western Canada will give you some idea of the enormous commercial possibilities of this Western Canada market. The main wholesale distributing centres in this rapidly growing territory are Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton, Regina and Saskatoon.

In each of these cities we maintain large track warehouses. We have a strongly established connection with practically the entire Western wholesale trade and other unrivalled facilities for pushing the sale of all grocery lines.

We solicit enquiries from manufacturers and shippers of such lines in United States, Europe and Eastern Canada with a view to aggressive business. If you are interested, write us to-day for complete particulars.

Poultry Prices are Expected to Hold

A Feeling of Uncertainty in Regard to Supply Prevails, but Up to the Present Nothing Material Has Been Advanced to Show That Markets Will Weaken Under the Brunt of the Trade—Butter, Eggs and Cheese a Little Firmer—Provision Market Does Not Show Much Change.

Excepting a few slight changes the provision market is in about the same position as a week ago. In one market lard recovered slightly owing to an increased demand and temporary shortage of supplies. The market seems to be a little firmer, although in Montreal it is stated that lower prices are expected. However, there is nothing prominent to indicate which way the next movement will go. Untill after the New Year demand is likely to be diverted a little. Lard is, however, in good demand. In the United States market the supply of pork is much in advance of the supply at this time last year. The general feeling seems to be slightly stronger.

Butter shows a little firmness and in some quarters it is believed that higher prices will be quoted before long. The reason given is that the storage stocks are getting lower than expected.

Eggs are causing trouble to the consumer and the sections of the trade. The search for new laids is close, but it is not accompanied by great results. Select storage eggs are up a little and buyers are desirous of some guarantee of wholesomeness.

The honey market is unchanged, cheese is a little stronger and poultry while in good demand is rather uncertain as to price. The trade are wondering just what price will prevail when the great bulk of the Christmas buying is done. Of course prices will be held if possible, but it all depends upon the supplies. If they are scarcer than was expected they will likely go up and vice versa if the supply is plentiful. Jobbers are wondering. The only intelligence to be gathered is a half-hearted hint that the supply is likely to be heavier than has been expected. However, the trade are standing pat.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—A feature of this department is the weaker feeling in the market for live hogs and prices are expected to decline. The reason for this is the accumulation of the stock on spot and the somewhat limited demand, but now that the cold weather has set in consumption will increase and a more active trade is anticipated.

Butter.—The market is firm and supplies are just fair. Srocks are said to be down to a point that will not be much more than sufficient to supply local requirements during the coming winter and early spring. This naturally leads one to expect firm future prices. A small amount of separator butter is coming in and proving of a good quality.

Poultry.—Poultry supplies are none too satisfactory. Turkeys seem to be quite scarce, and have scored a further advance. No increase in the supply of turkeys is expected and higher prices are looked for.

Provisions.—A slightly stronger feeling is apparent this week. Pure lard is up one-half cent and live hogs are a little firmer. The changes are slight. Annual Staff Gatherings

The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd., Toronto, held their second annual dinner to the managers and travelers, at the Prince George Hotel, Toronto, on Friday evening last. It was in every way a great success, being attended by the managers and representatives from New York, Boston, Detroit and Philadelphia, along with the Toronto staff and Mr. Johnston of their Woodstock factory. Henry Wright, president of the company, occupied the chair and a splendid menu was amusingly arranged and sumptuously filled with the best of good things. As soon as the dinner was over the happy gathering (as well as the piper who played Scottish airs during the evening) were photographed, to remind everybody present what they had promised.

The president proposed the health of the King, and Harry Bender, manager, New York, proposed the health of the President, to which he fittingly replied, pointing out what good had been derived from the information gained from last year's dinner. The "Traveling Staff" proposed by S. McCoy, Buffalo, was responded to by H. Finlay, manager, Detroit, both speaking of the bright prospects in the States for the coming year. "Our Departments" was proposed by Andrew Wright, manager of the Factory, Toronto, and suitably responded to by R. Cromarty. The "Firm's Future Prosperity" was proposed by R. Johnston, and replied to by W. H. Wilson, the Canadian manager. It was proposed and unanimously carried that Detroit should be responsible for the dinner next year, and a most enjoyable and successful evening was brought to a close in the early hours of the morning.

Some of the principals of The Canadian Shredded Wheat Co. together with representatives from different parts of Canada met in Toronto on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week for their annual conference and banquet. On Tuesday morning Jno. Hewitt, sales manager for Ontario and Quebec, was presented with a handsome Morris chair, leather covered, as a mark of esteem for his generalship during the past year. Those in attendance were Fred Mason, general manager; T. A. Weese, director of publicity, and Jas. Traverse, traffic and sales manager, all of Niagara Falls; Jno. Hewitt, Toronto; J. H. Duke, Manitoba and Saskatchewan representative; H. Y. Bishop, Maritime Province representative; Philip Carriere, Quebec representative; C. H. Jones, Western Ontario representative; W. C. Jones, Toronto representative; W. C. Hewitt, northern and eastern Ontario representative, and A. Gates of the office staff. The banquet was held on Tuesday afternoon in one of the Robt. Simpson Co.'s private banquet rooms. The tables were appropriately and artistically decorated, among the decorations being sheaves of wheat. Each one present received as a souvenir a gold, sheaf-of-wheat-shaped stick pin. In addition to the Shredded Wheat men mentioned above, C. Norris and F. A. Rowlatt, of Woods-Norris, Toronto, were present at the banquet. On Wednesday morning the conference was continued, and in the afternoon all were entertained at a theatre party.

Jno. Hewitt's territory as sales manager in Canada was increased by the addition of the Maritime Provinces and Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Flour Market is Temporarily Quiet

Holiday Season is Not Conducive to "Shop Early" Methods in One of the Great Staples—Wide Margin Between Canadian Quotations and the Figure at Which an Export Demand Might be Encouraged—Cereal Market is Firm, and Demand Continues Strong.

The flour market is inclined to be quiet at this season. While it is to a large extent the basis of every meal, and is just as necessary on one day as on any other, still it is overlooked in the accelerated business methods of the festive season. Those in the trade are not looking forward to much improvement for some weeks. There is, of course, the ordinary trade passing, but nothing to stir the millers and their representatives into anything approaching excitement.

A recent despatch from the Old Country states that if the price here is lowered 1s, 3d, there may be a possibility of business, which margin is considerable, and is admitted to actually exist. A drop of 9d or 10d in home flour quotations might prove a stimulant to the demand for export flour.

Some of those in the trade are looking forward to a removal of what they call an evil of two or more years' standing. When a contract for flour is entered into, it is, according to one authority, a custom to fix the price. That is the purchaser demands that the flour be sent to him just as he needs it. a car now and then, or whatever may be necessary. First patents are now selling at $5.40. Suppose it is agreed that all the flour shall be delivered to him at that price. In the meantime flour goes up, but the miller has to stand by his bargain. After a time flour may drop below the contract price and the purchaser demands that the flour he needs then be quoted at the reduction. This is mentioned as a rumor that is heard here and there, but whether it will ever develop beyond that stage remains to be seen.

The opinion in regard to prices seems to be that the present quotations are likely to hold for a while. The tendency is now mentioned as downward, although no particular weakness is noticeable.

Rolled oats are apparently pretty firm. Te demand is good, prices seem to be steady, the season is favorable, and trade is satisfactory. Lower prices are not likely, and if there is any tendency at present, it seems to be upward.

There is a proprietor of a certain store, a man of most excitable temperament, who is forever scolding his clerks for their indifference in the matter of possible sales.

One day, hearing a clerk say to a customer: "No, we have not had any for a long time," the proprietor, unable to countenance such an admission, began to work himself into the usual rage. Fixing a glassy eye on his clerk, he said to the customer:

"We have plenty in reserve, ma'am; plenty downstairs."

Whereupon the customer looked dazed; and then, to the amazement of the proprietor, burst into hysterical laughter and quit the shop.

"What did she say to you?" demanded the proprietor of the clerk.

"We haven't had any rain lately."

Never discard a business suggestion unconsidered because of its source. Consider it on its merits and without bias.

People who know something about it, say that more failures are caused by over-buying than by any other one thing.

Personal work with customers will do more to tie them fast to your store than any form of printed advertising, but don't limit yourself by going no farther than you can go by personal work.

Flour and Cereal Markets Higher in 1909

Resume of Past Two Years Show That Flour, Rolled Oats and Rolled Wheat Have Not Been So High in 1910 Than During the Previous Year—Influence of Crop Reports in June and July Plainly Visible in Changes.

In reviewing the flour market from the standpoint of price variation during the past two years a certain similarity is noticeable. In each year the price of the first patents started up the scale, reached a certain height and then began their return movement, varying but slightly. In this comparison first patent flour on a Toronto basis is considered.

Reference in detail is scarcely necessary. The reader can easily follow the movement. The influence of the crop reports during June and July of the present year is plainly apparent. The price of flour went from $5.30 to $6.20 before a retrograde movement was felt. While flour is a little higher in price than at this time twelve months ago, it is much lower than at the opening of 1909. The price movement will be followed with interest during the coming year. Grocers should preserve this list as they have been taken from the files of the last two years and represent the prices they have to pay. It will then be an easy matter to make comparisons and possibly to form an opinion upon the situations in the future market.

Fluctuations in Rolled Oats.

Rolled oats are quoted lower than at the opening of the present year and the price at the opening of 1909 was higher still than the present quotation. The range of the changes during the past two years has not been very wide. At the same time the past is admitted a good year in rolled oats. The following comparisons are Toronto prices in 90 lb. sacks.

Changes In Rolled Wheat.

As will be seen in the following list the price of rolled wheat is exactly where it was two years ago. The price has soared almost a dollar above that price but the average has not been high. On the whole the cost of living that receives so much attention these days can hardly be attributed to flour or either of the cereals referred to. Manufacturers have from time to time spoken favorably of the market and it is understood that the past year has been favorable from a financial standpoint. These prices are for 100 lb. bags:

1910.	1909.
Jan. 7.... 3.05-3.15	Jan. 1.... 2.85
Jan. 28.... 3.10	Mar. 26.... 2.80

	Oct. 1.... 3.00-3.25
	Oct. 15.... 3.00
	Nov. 19.... 3.05-3.15

A recapitulation of the three markets demonstrates that the highest price of flour in 1909 was $6.40 in June, while the highest figure in 1910 was $6.20 in July. The lowest in 1909 was $5.20 and in 1910 the same.

In 1909 the highest quotation in rolled oats was $2.90 in May and in 1910, $2.45 in August; the lowest in 1909 was $2.20 and in 1910, $1.90.

Rolled wheat reached $3.75, its highest figure in 1909 in June and August; in 1910 the highest price was $3.15 in January. The lowest during the former year was $2.80 and in 1910 so far $2.85.

Successful Men as Leaders

By W. C. Freeman.

Every man who goes into business of any kind goes into it to make money. Some men succeed; others fail, while others plod along in a mediocre way, making a living only, but they always try to follow their more fortunate competitors.

This law of average applies in all lines and the same reason governs all cases.

Analyze the great successes in various lines in this country to-day and you will find that back of each success are earnest, capable business men and steady advertisers. Their business grows every year. They make every effort to go forward. They are never satisfied.

In every community there are one or two merchants that set the pace—they are usually the inspiration for the whole community. Other merchants say—"If So-an-so has succeeded, why should not I?"

A man who is struggling toward success with the right ideas is never envious of the man higher up. On the contrary, he will study the things that have made the man higher up successful, and will try to improve on some of the things he has done to attain success.

A gentleman who went into the retail business some months ago sat around a luncheon table with other business men, and they asked him how he liked the retail end of the business.

He replied that he liked it very much and thought there was a great future ahead of him if he followed the example of the successful merchants in his city.

They asked him the names of men whom he regarded as being successful merchants and he told them, but he did not mention any of the men who sat around the table, although they are in a measure successful.

One of the merchants this young man had in mind is over seventy years of age, but he is still on the job every day, is constantly trying to improve every department in his big shop — never content — always reaching higher up, and I might add always advertising. There is never any let-up in that.

It will pay every merchant in every community to follow the lead of the successful men. The greatest help, however, in climbing the hill of success is that help which is given by clean, reliable advertising.

N. S. GUILD DISBANDS.

Trouble Due to One Member Who is Claimed to be a Retailer.

Halifax, Dec. 22.—The Nova Scotia branch of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild have disbanded. The cause for this action is due to the fact that the members did not think one of their number was living up to his obligations. It is stated that he was interested in a retail business as well as wholesale and for that reason, they claim, was instrumental in causing dissatisfaction.

The Guild held a meeting recently and decided to disband for the present, the same taking effect on Dec. 15. A reorganization is possible.

Calgary, Alta., is priding itself, and justifiably too, on the number of wholesale houses in different lines of business that are locating and seeking location there. Letters are received every week by the board of trade from houses seeking information.

W. A. Knight has purchased the grocery business of Geo. Foster, 814 Bloor St. West, Toronto.

All the business that will come to you, if you simply sit down and wait for it, will never keep you out of the poorhouse.

THE BANK OF MONTREAL

Proceedings of the 93rd Annual Meeting of Shareholders.

The 93rd annual general meeting of the Shareholders of the Bank of Montreal was held yesterday at noon at the Board Room, at the bank's headquarters.

There were present: Messrs. D. Morrice, H. V. Meredith, C. R. Hosmer, James Ross, Sir William Macdonald, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Sir Edward Clouston, R. B. Angus, E. B. Greenshields, Hon. Robert Mackay, A. Baumgarten, E. Rawlings, C. J. Fleet, K.C., R. S. David, A. Piddington, John Patterson, W. A. Murray, H. Joseph, J. T. Ross, James Alexander, W. B. Blackader, William Stanway, William H. Evans, William Agnew, John Taylor, W. R. Miller, C. Meredith, C. Simpson Garland, G. F. C. Smith, C. J. Doherty, M.P., James Kirby, K.C., James Skeoch, Henry Dobell, M. S. Foley, C. H. Cahan, K.C., P. R. Gault, P. F. McCaffrey, Dr. Gardner, John P. Knight.

On motion of Mr. D. Morrice, the President, Mr. R. B. Angus, was requested to take the chair.

It was then moved by Mr. C. J. Fleet, K.C., seconded by Mr. A. Piddington, that Messrs. G. F. C. Smith and William Stanway be appointed to act as Scrutineers, and that Mr. James Aird be Secretary of the meeting. This was carried unanimously.

THE ANNUAL REPORT

Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., the General Manager of the Bank, was then called upon to read the annual report of the Directors to the Shareholders at their 93rd Annual General Meeting, held 5th December, 1910:

The Directors have pleasure in presenting the Report showing the result of the Bank's business for the year ended 31st October, 1910.

Since the last Annual Meeting Branches have been opened at Barton-Victoria Street (Hamilton), Penticton, B.C., High River, Alta., Perth, N.B., and Prince Rupert, B.C.

The Branches at Andover, N.B., and Warsaw, Ont., have been closed.

With deep regret the Directors have to record the death of their esteemed President, the Hon. Sir George A. Drummond, K.C.M.G., C.V.O., who had been a member of the Board for upwards of twenty-eight years. During that period he served as Vice-President for nineteen years and President for five years.

Mr. R. B. Angus was elected to succeed him as President, and the vacancy on the Board has been filled by the election of Mr. H. V. Meredith.

All the Offices of the Bank, including the Head Office, have been inspected during the year.

Bank of Montreal,
5th December, 1910.

R. B. ANGUS, President.

E. S. CLOUSTON, General Manager.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The President, Mr. R. B. Angus, then moved the adoption of the report, seconded by the vice-president, Sir Edward Clouston.

In moving the adoption of the report the president said :—

"With your permission, gentlemen, I move the adoption of the report just read.

"On this occasion we recall the fact that at last annual meeting of the shareholders the president was unable to attend, because of illness, which, unfortunately, and to the great regret of his colleagues, resulted in his demise on the 2nd of February last. Sir George Drummond occupied a most distinguished position in the business community ; and the shareholders of this bank may well entertain a grateful appreciation of his services as president and of his work in the Senate, where his intelligent and patriotic efforts were largely devoted to the protection and development of the banking interests of the Dominion.

"To fill the vacancy created by the death of Sir George it was deemed advisable that I should, for a time, occupy the chair ; and consequently I was elected to the presidency on the 22nd of July—while the directorate was at the same time strengthened by calling the Assistant General Manager, Mr. H. V. Meredith, to a seat at the Board. The expansion of business in recent years vindicates the expediency of this latter arrangement.

"The period under review has been marked by almost unbroken prosperity. The bounteous crops harvested during preceding years had raised the expectations of our farmers and excited the attention of intending immigrants, and although the bright prospects of the present season were somewhat dimmed by the excessive drought of June and July, causing partial failure of the wheat crop in some districts of the West, the actual result has proved more favorable than was then anticipated. The latest estimate of the harvest from the Western grain fields, by parties well qualified to judge, gives a yield of which under the conditions existing may be regarded as fairly satisfactory.

95 million bushels of wheat
128 million bushels of oats
25 million bushels of barley and flax

"We are naturally most interested in the outcome of the young and rapidly-growing country, for to it belongs the future. Still it may be long before it overtakes the productiveness and wealth of the older provinces, which in their undeveloped resources, timber, minerals and arable lands, afford abundant opportunities for expansion and settlement.

"On the first intimation of injury to the growing crops in the West the confidence of the eastern merchants and manufacturers was somewhat shaken, but the curtailment of business activity which followed was only temporary in its character and soon gave way before more hopeful indications. Business quickly revived and has continued good throughout the year.

"One notable feature may be remarked, that the Western people, farmers and settlers and tradesmen, shewed little sign of depression under the circumstances. The unusually dry season might serve as a warning to more careful tillage of the soil, but could not disturb the prevailing hopefulness and contentment. The agricultural results in the eastern provinces of the Dominion were upon the whole quite gratifying.

"Immigration from Europe and the United States of America was on an extensive scale, no less than 300,000 to 350,000 being the estimated number of arrivals during the season, enriching the country by valuable contributions in property and money and still more by additions to the agricultural population. Such an unprecedented influx of new settlers to a comparatively small community, many of them experienced farmers, could not fail to have a stimulating effect upon all the commercial interests of the country. The extraordinary expenditures on railway construction and other public works also largely contributed to this result. The rapid growth of all industrial enterprises no less than the great and profitable expansion of agricultural operations, together with the opportunity of acquiring unoccupied land, render Canada a popular field for the employment of European capital. Important transfers of money to this country are of daily occurrence and especially from England, where political and financial unrest has induced many people to seek new avenues for investment.

"Contributions through the Stock Exchanges and money markets of Europe to the financial enterprises of Canada have been extremely generous of late and it is eminently desirable that the confidence thus displayed should not be abused. Some offerings have been made, it is feared by over sanguine promoters whose statements it would be hard to justify, and in relation to schemes where the advantages to buyers are not quite apparent. It might be well to consider that, while money seeking investment is much more abundant in some countries than it is with us, there is seldom much lack of capital here for participation in enterprises that are unquestionably sound. Our friends abroad might reflect that a home market, especially in the case of industrial securities, will generally furnish some indication of values.

"In the earnings of the railways, the output of factories and the large volume of commercial transactions there is evidence on every hand of widespread and almost universal prosperity throughout the land. The statement of the Bank's affairs now submitted shows that this institution has participated to a considerable extent in these advantages: the net profits have been fair, about the same as last year, and would have been more ample had not the Bank met an unfortunate complication through the error of an agent and the failure of a foreign bank. The earlier rumors concerning this matter were much exaggerated and to the best of our knowledge the ultimate loss has been fully provided for.

"I leave the General Manager to comment upon the annual exhibit and the more technical aspects of the situation but may here state that the accounts, cash and securities of the bank nave been examined and verified by the inspecting officers and by committees of the Board. The organization of the bank is believed to be in excellent condition, and, as is customary in this institution, the reserves have been maintained at a very high standard of safety.

"In reference to a question that has exercised the minds of some of our friends, who marvel that the bank premises account remains at the comparatively modest figure of $600,000 while the known expenditures under that head have of late years been unusually large; the fact is, as stated, the explanation being that the directors have been indisposed to burden their assets with any large item that could not be promptly converted into cash; and they have consequently charged directly against revenue the entire expenditure connected with the building, extension and maintenance of the bank's premises; these amounts have been considerable, owing to the necessity of opening branch offices in new settlements and enlarging facilities at important centres where business has outgrown the existing accommodation.

"The directors are, however, of opinion that the call for extraordinary outlays of this nature has almost passed and that such charges will hereafter cease or greatly diminish.

"It is unnecessary that I should attempt to give a specific account of the various industries of the country, but in reference to the more important natural products it may be noted that the lumber business has been fairly good in the east, and unusually active on the Pacific Coast. Exports to the United Kingdom have not been as large as in former years, but have been offset by the greater home demand.

"The wood pulp mills have found a good market for their product, notwithstanding adverse duties in the United States.

"There has been a wholesale falling off in the exports of produce from this port during the past season of navigation, owing partly to decreased production, and also largely to increased home consumption.

"A marked decline in the exports of live stock, which was observable during the last few years, and was probably to be accounted for by the requirements of new and expanding settlements and the home consumption of a growing population, seems now to be checked. It was natural to suppose that in view of our unequalled facilities for cattle raising the condition would only be temporary, and it is gratifying to find a change for the better has set in—the shipments, especially from the West, having largely increased.

"A true index to the rapidly increasing trade of the country may be found in the combined imports and exports of the past fiscal year, which amounted to the big total of $693,211,221, as compared with $571,268,767, showing an increase of $121,945,454 over the previous year.

It is to be noted, however, that the excess of imports over exports is increasing; the government revenues are buoyant, but Canada's borrowings from Europe are very large, and will doubtless continue so, while expenditures for railway building, the improvement of navigation and for the legitimate needs of growing municipalities are maintained on the present extensive scale.

With regard to trade, the wholesale dry goods houses report that business during the past year has been exceedingly good, and payments have shown a fair average, while failures have been rare. The same remark applies to groceries, iron and hardware trade, leather, boots and shoes, and other branches.

"I am aware these are but running comments, and to give any adequate description of the season's results would call for a review from the Atlantic to the Pacific. With our partial shortage of crop in the Western Provinces, we have one reassuring view exemplified this season, namely, that with the newly developed territories, the field is now so extensive that what affects one part of the country adversely or otherwise, is unlikely to induce similar conditions elsewhere. Even the visitation of the drought was by no means uniform. The weather was so capricious that the injury from that source occurred in widely separated spots, and the result of the harvest, although less than anticipated, was yet immense, considering the small population which has to share its benefits.

"We are, therefore, safe in saying that the country as a whole has undoubtedly experienced a fair degree of prosperity throughout the year, and no doubt need be entertained as to its continued and rapid growth in wealth and population; if, however, we are to realize our best expectations, we must carefully avoid undue inflation. In some districts there has been excessive speculation in town and village properties, but the movement already shows signs of languishing, while farm and fruit lands maintain their value or steadily appreciate.

"Money has been very abundant throughout the year, and from a lender's point of view the rates of interest, except for a brief period, have been abnormally low, thus rendering it difficult to employ our surplus funds to advantage in London or New York, where short or call loans are readily available. But this department of the subject will be left to the General Manager, Sir Edward Clouston, who seconds the adoption of the report."

The conclusion of the President's address was greeted with applause by the meeting.

SIR EDWARD CLOUSTON.

In seconding the adoption of the report, Sir Edward Clouston said:—

"In my address last year I made the remark that I should be very much disappointed if we did not make a better showing of profits during the year we have just passed through, and, though I did not say it, I had in my mind that I might be able to suggest to the directors that it was time to do something for our shareholders in the way of a bonus. Unfortunately my anticipations were not realized. Our profits show $28,000.00 less than last year.

"The general statement, as you see by the copies you hold in your hands, is a strong one, and exhibits the steady progress the Bank is maving. For the first time in our history our circulation exceeds our capital, and we were obliged to make use of the emergency circulation authorized by the Government.

"Our deposits have increased $18,000,000, but this does not fairly show the actual increase in our regular deposits, as last year we had some large special deposits which were withdrawn during the year. Our readily realizable assets, that is our reserves, are about the same, though they show a slight decrease in percentage to our liabilities. The amount of money employed outside of Canada has been reduced $14,000,000. Fault has been found with us by critics who have not given sufficient consideration to the subject for keeping such large balances in other countries, but experience has taught us that it is not only safer for the Bank but for Canada, that we should hold large reserves which we can draw on in case of necessity without disturbing financial conditions in our own country. The important position of the Bank of Montreal in the financial fabric involves the keeping of a large portion of our assets in a form immediately available for conversion into cash. Our responsibilities in this respect force us to be content with a very low return on the money we lend on call in London and New York, a return, which for long periods during the past year was little better than 2 per cent. at either centre, and taxes to come out hf that. It is not to be supposed that we would ignore the superior advantages of a 5 per cent. call rate in Canada, could we employ $10,000,000 or $20,000,000 here, with the certainty that we could get it back on three hours' notice any day we wanted it.

Of the increase in our investments, $5,000,000 is accounted for by the purchase of a municipal issue which has been largely disposed of since the close of the statement.

"Our loans and advances have increased $21,000,000, and call for no special comment, except that they evidence that we are doing our share in assisting the development of our rapidly growing country.

"The present session of parliament will see introduced legislation of importance to bankers, as our charters come up for the usual decennial renewal. Though the Bankers' Association has not been taken into the confidence of the government about any proposed alterations or amendments, I think it hardly likely that there will be any great change. The Act is a very good one as it stands, is thought well of by financial authorities in other countries, and answers admirably the requirements of our own. When trouble arises it is apt to be condemned by unthinking critics, but it is not the fault of the Act but of those who work under it, and no amount of legislation will guard against the fallibility of the personal factor and keep men from being fools or knaves.

"The President has spoken on the general trade of the country, which may be characterized as satisfactory, with a promising outlook. There is possibly too much real estate speculation in some sections of the country, and municipalities are borrowing rather heavily; the greater part of it, however, is quite legitimate, arising from the rapid growth of the newer cities and towns throughout the west.

To them flows the ever increasing tide of our immigration, which, from the best figures at present available, will this year number over 300,000 souls. The quality of this immigration is admittedly high, and when one considers that it represents in a single year about 1-20 of the country's population, it is well that it is so. To this influx of population, as well as to the greatly increased prosperity of the people, is probably due the fact that while our production of such food-stuffs as butter, eggs, cheese, etc., has increased during the present twelve-month, the exports of these products have declined, indicating a large home consumption.

"As regards the general prospect, in the older countries there seem to be at least enough pessimists to counterbalance the optimists. In Canada we have many of the latter, and few of the former—too few, perhaps, at times, to sufficiently regulate our youthful exuberance. It might be well to remember that the prosperity we have enjoyed may be largely due to a continuity of policy and a disposition to employ experience rather than theory as the basis for the conduct of our affairs. Such principles have made us self-reliant, and seem best calculated to ensure our future progress and permanent stability." (Applause.)

After the usual resolutions of thanks were passed, the retiring Board of Directors were re-elected as follows:

Messrs:—R. B. Angus, A. Baumgarten, Sir Edward Clouston, Bart, E. B. Greenshields, C. R. Hosmer, Sir William C. Macdonald, Hon. Robert Mackay, H. V. Meredith, D. Morrice, James Ross, Sir Thos. Shaughnessy, K.C.V.O., Rt. Hon. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

At a meeting of the Directors held later the Right Honorable Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G. C. M. G., G.C.V.O., was elected Honorary President of the Bank, Mr. R. B. Angus President, and Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., Vice-President.

You Don't Want a Flour That's Dead White

Why not?

You see, Mrs. Buyer, the right colour for strong flour is an even creaminess.

Not dark, nor yellow, nor even white.

But just the healthy, delicate creamy complexion you always find in, say, FIVE ROSES.

It's "bleached" flour that's dead white, unnatural white.

Hardly the kind YOU want!

Now FIVE ROSES is not bleached, Madam.

This I guarantee most absolutely.

What's more, this is the only big-mill flour I know of which it can be truly said it was never bleached.

Bread with that glow of health, rich in nutriment, easy digested.

Pastry that melts, satisfies, leaving no regrets.

Yours in every pound of FIVE ROSES.

You say you will take a whole barrel?

Well, it's a mighty good beginning.

Christmas Fruit Trade at its Height

Heavy Demand for Oranges, Cranberries and Specialties for the Season—The Ordinary Trade Has Been Good—Potatoes are Firm—Demand for Malaga Grapes Has Sent up the Price—Volume of Trade this Year Is Expected to be Well up to Average.

It is not expected that the present Christmas season will show any decrease in comparison with other years. The total amount of trade should reach a big figure. There is a feeling of prosperity abroad, expressing itself in many ways and as far as can be learned the fruit dealers have been experiencing it to their satisfaction. The present trade runs into a special groove, the demand being for particular goods such as oranges, apples, nuts, grapes, etc. On the whole of course the general demand is good, but on some lines there is a big increase in sales. Business in special imported small vegetables is good for this time of the year, they being of course limited.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—There is a brisk trade passing in all lines of green fruits and though the high prices prevailing curtail the demand to a certain extent, dealers are satisfied. There is a slight drop in Florida pineapples, while the supply of plums is short.

TORONTO.

Green Fruit.—Dealers have been pretty busy this week with the demands for Christmas trade. They have been showing a fine general stock of fruit and as before stated, if the people do not receive the quantity they were looking for, it is not the fault of the jobbers. A big run on oranges is expected and already a great quantity has been passed out to the retail trade.

The latter has confined business to a large extent to the special goods which owe their increased demand to the holiday and festive season. Potatoes are firm and are holding their strong position.

ACT TO SAVE THE DAYLIGHT.

A bill has been introduced into the House of Commons, Ottawa, called The Daylight Saving Act aimed to promote a more extended use of daylight during the summer months. It is proposed that from and after 2 o'clock in the morning of the first Sunday in April each year until 2 o'clock a.m., of the first Sunday in November, the standard time be one hour in advance of the standard time now in use. That means when 2 o'clock comes on the first Sunday in April, we call it 3 o'clock, get up an hour earlier, and go to bed an hour earlier until November. This act if it becomes law as proposed on Jan. 1, 1912, will not apply to the Yukon territory.

TRADE NOTES.

Few things are as expensive as those we try to get for nothing.

A bag of Brazil coffee costs about six or seven dollars more than it did a year ago.

Under the new pure food and drug act in the United States 990 cases were reported during the past year, 776 for criminal action and 224 for seizure proceedings. The total of the fines collected under the act during the year was $11,049.31.

The annual convention of Holbrooks, Ltd., will be held in Toronto on December 28, 29 and 30. All the salesmen will be in from all parts of Canada and the United States. On the evening of the 29th the staff will be guests at a banquet tendered by the management.

The Untrained Clerk Brought Loss of a Sale

By J. C. Mundle.

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on the fact that in order to secure the very best results from your employes, whether they be salesmen, clerks, travelers or heads of departments, they should undergo a proper and systematic course of training in their respective duties before they are permitted to deal directly with the public and would-be purchasers. Not only should they be properly coached but they should be shown by one who thoroughly understands his work—theory is good but practice is better.

Adverse criticism of a house where clerks are incompetent is the invariable result of lack of training, and in the majority of cases this leads to a loss of business from an immediate sale and may even produce a boyoctt. There should be a strict rule that, if asked a question about anything they are not familiar with, clerks should never venture at "faking" or what is worse, admitting that they do not know. In such a contingency the proper mode would be to ask the customer politely to wait a moment until Mr. So-and-So comes (and at the same time send for him) who knows everything there is about the article in question.

The personal experience of the writer calling in at one of the largest retail fur houses in Montreal and asking if a mink muff was dyed received the answer from the clerk serving him, "I don't know." Further questioning elicited the information that the clerk was until recently employed in a grocery store, had been engaged by the fur house and, with only the information of the private price marks, had been put in charge of a fur section. This seemed hardly possible but an investigation of the story confirmed the facts. It is needless to say no purchase was made at that store.

We wish our many Friends

White Fish and Halibut Still Scarce

Strong Demand for all Lines of Fish is now Being Felt—Conclusion of the Advent Season Will Likely Cause a Slight Falling Off—Higher Prices for Halibut and Salmon Not Altogether Unlikely—The Present Situation of the Market.

With the season of Advent passing there is likely to be a little easier feeling for a time after the first of the new year. Markets are fairly active, prices are holding well and the trade in general is at present on a satisfactory basis. The lobster season has opened on the Atlantic coast but thus far has not been much of a success.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—The market is keeping active and prices rule fairly high. This is the last week of the Advent season and a busy time is expected in the different fish lines, and with Xmas at hand oysters, both in shell and bulk, will be in great demand. After the holiday season a period of dullness is expected, particularly in preserved and pickled lines.

In the frozen lines, namely halibut and salmon, the supplies already show signs of weakness and one can predict safetly that if weather keeps cold as of late, the prices will certainly advance considerably.

Frozen smelts which are generally abundant in this market at this time of the year are scarce and high, due to the demand which is increasing every year from the United States markets.

Tom cods are a little late this year, but whatever came to this market so far have sold readily, and at remunerative prices.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax.—The lobster season is now on. It opened on Thursday of last week under unfavorable conditions. The weather was stormy and the fishermen were unable to set many of their traps. In consequence few fish were marketed, and those that were offered for sale were small. Few large lobsters are marketed here. The best stock is shipped alive to the Boston market, and some even go as far west as Chicago.

There is keen competition for the fish between the canneries and the buyers for the United States fish houses. Small lobsters are selling here at 15 cents a piece.

There is some improvement in the receipts of fresh fish, several small cargoes having been landed here during the past week. The fish were mostly cod and haddock. Halibut continues scarce. Smelts are now coming on the market in good supply. The quality of the fish is better. Ex vessel cod is selling from 50 cents to 75 cents lower. July herring are quoted at $4.75 to $5, and Newfoundland at $3.50. Stocks of mackerel are light, and No. 1's are quoted at $20, and No. 2's at $16.

How a Consumer Sees Importance of Retail Grocer

The most numerous of all the various divisions of the retail trade is that of the Retail Grocer.

There are two hundred and fifty thousand retail grocers in America. We can't eat a meal without first interviewing a grocer. You can omit the preacher, waive the lawyer, but you'll have to send for the doctor unless you deal with the right grocer.

Our lives are literally in his hands.

He supplies the fuel that keeps our vital processes in motion. Just a little of the wrong kind of food and our outlook on the world is disturbed and the young men carry us out.

"Of all the men in my employ, the only one with whom I dare not break friendship is the cook," said Frederick the Great. He would better have said "my grocer," for the cook cooks what the grocer provides. Of all men, the retail grocer should be a man of integrity and intelligence.

The grocer has often stood to us as a glib and oily party who sold us sand for sugar, chicory for coffee, alum for cream of tartar, and axle grease for butter. Then another reason why we have despised him, is the ease with which the sheriff has sold him out. He hasn't made enough money to be really respectable, and we all recognize that a man hopelessly in debt is dishonest. No man on half rations can ever tell the truth.

A clergyman does not necessarily minister to society as much as does the grocer, and should not be granted any more privileges or honors.

A grocer recently took off an order route, having found that most of the customers had telephones. He spends half an hour or more each morning telephoning to one after another of the customers. At first the latter did not like it, but now they have become used to it the plan seems to work pretty well, and the grocer is pleased, as he says he gets the orders much cheaper than heretofore. Some grocers have young lady bookkeepers who know how to use the telephone to great advantage.

W. L. Senn, Brantford, Ont., has purchased the grocery business of F. Corey, Colborne St.

E. Walsh has opened a grocery business at 227 West Mill St., Brantford, Ont.

Canadians to Study B.W.I. Conditions

Railway Co. and Steampship Line to Run Excursions for Commercial Men to Visit the Islands This Winter—Impressions of a Writer Who Recently Spent Several Months in the South—His Suggestions for Trade Improvement with Canada.

By David Williams.

It has been announced that it is the intention of the C.P.R. and also the Pickford & Black steamship line to convey commercial men to the West Indies this winter with a view to studying the extension of trade between Canada and her southern sister. It is further stated that the steamships conveying them will take also several tons of samples of Canadian products for exhibition purposes among the Islands. This is along right lines and is to be highly commened.

When visiting the Indies recently there was one thing that impressed me everywhere. That was the good feeling that prevailed towards Canada and the desire was constantly expressed for more extended trade relations. At the present time a large part of the importations of the Islands and also Demerara are brought from the United States, much of which might well be supplied by the merchants and manufacturers of Canada. The main reason for this is not because the importers of the West Indies are more favorably disposed towards United States goods than to Canadian, but that for a number of reasons it is often much more convenient to trade with that country.

Should Study Conditions.

One thing that is particularly necessary for the extension of Canadian trade in the West Indies is a closer study by Canadian exporters of conditions there and the requirements of the market. This would enable out exporters to supply the West Indian merchant with the goods he wants and in the way he wants them. Both these points are important for it must be borne in mind that the West Indian merchant is English or European in his methods and does not fall in readily with newfangled United States or Canadian ways of doing things. Another thing that would greatly facilitate trade between these sister British domains, would be the appointment of capable Canadian trade commissioners who would have the time and opportunity to make themselves thoroughly conversant with the requirements on the one hand and the capabilities of supplying them on the other.

Select the Proper Men.

The appointment of these men should be made not haphazard or on the patronage plan, but selected with a view solely to their fitness for the task, their knowledge of conditions and their ability to adequately fulfil the requirements of the office. One of these offices should be stationed where now is Commissioner Flood—who is the only real Canadian Commissioner on the Islands. He should have his sphere of operations much enlarged. Instead of acting only for the little Island of Barbados he should supervise work in the whole of the Windward Islands. The Island of Barbados is so situated that communication is comparatively easy with all the Windwards, as nearly all the great lines of West Indian ocean steamers converge there.

Another live man similar to Mr. Flood should be stationed in Demerara and another in Jamaica. As it is now, the so-calleh Canadian agents in these latter places are simply native merchants who are given an allowance for their services to Canada. Usually these services are about equal to their allowance, but it is only natural that their positions would be used largely for their own benefit or the benefit of the firms with which they are connected.

U. S. Aggressiveness.

The visitor to the Indies, especially to Jamaica, is impressed with the great and rapid advancement of United States export and import trade with the Island. One of the important reasons for this great development is no doubt largely attributable to the presence in Jamaica of an active, energetic and capable United States agent. This man is said to often know more about the requirements of business houses on the Island than their owners, and he is thoroughly versed in the possibilities of trade between his country and Jamaica.

He, it is said, sends out tons of letters directed to all parts of the United States informing manufacturers, producers and handlers of United States products of the requirements and possible requirements of the people among whom he is stationed. This, no doubt, is one of the factors contributing to give United States traders such a grip upon Jamaica's export and import trade.

The Labeling of Tapioca and Sago Compulsory

In view of the article in a recent issue of The Canadian Grocer on the differences between tapioca and sago, the following order promulgated recently by the Board of Food and Drug Inspection of the United States, Dept. of Agriculture will be of interest to readers:

"It has come to the attention of the Board of Food and Drug Inspection that there exists among the trade in various parts of the United States a very general misunderstanding with respect to sago and small pearl tapioca. Sago is prepared from the starch obtained from the pith found in the stem of several species of palm trees, natives of the East Indies, and tapioca is prepared by heating in a moist state the starch made from the root of the cassava or tapioca plant, which is indigenous to certain South American countries. Both products ordinarily reach the consumer in granulated form and are designated as "pearl sago" and "pearl tapioca," respectively. While "pearl sago" and "pearl tapioca" are separate and distinct articles of commerce, each resembles the other closely in appearance, and fine pearl tapioca frequently has been labeled and sold as sago.

"Under the Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, articles of food are misbranded if the labels or packages contain statements which are false or misleading, or if particular articles are imitations of or offered for sale under the distinctive names of other articles. In the opinion of the Board, the name "sago," or "pearl sago," without qualification, means the product obtained from the pith of East Indian palm trees, and starch products of different origin will be held to be misbranded under the act if labeled or offered for sale as "sago," "pearl sago," etc. The prepared starch product derived from the root of the cassava plant is tapioca, and should be sold and labeled as such.

"There is also on the market an imitation sago made from potato starch. Imitation food products are misbranded under the act unless they are labeled so as to indicate plainly that they are imitation products and unless the word "imitation" is also plainly stated on the packages in which imitation products are offered for sale. Potato or other starch prepared to resemble pearl sago, therefore, should be labeled, for example, "Imitation sago. Made from potato starch," the words "Imitation" and "Made from potato starch" being declared as plainly and conspicuously as the word "Sago." The word "Imitation" must appear on the label, but an equivalent expression may be substituted for "Made from potato starch," which will indicate unmistakably that the product is not made from the pith of East Indian palm trees, but is derived from a different source."

From the above it will be seen that the information given in The Grocer was correct.

A Coffee Purchase Involving Half a Million — Fake Tea Peddler in Chicago—Kingston Grocer Discovers an Old Paper—What Blue Point Oysters are—How to Pile Dried Fruit Boxes —Crusade Against Bad Eggs In Chicago.

One of the large United States coffee houses recently purchased 30,00 bags of coffee valued at present prices at half a million dollars.

A bogus tea agent in Chicago took orders from consumers for a high grade tea at eighty cents a pound and delivered in its stead a mixture of cheap tea and what is said to be chopped hay. The women have appealed to the police.

Secretary Wilson of the United States department of Agriculture in his annual report says the farmers do not receive exorbitant prices for their products. High prices to the consumer he attributes to the cost of distribution and advises consumers to buy all the foods they can over the retailers' heads. He evidently needs some tutoring.

The Seattle Grocers' Association are preparing to ask the civic authorities to regulate the registration of families and persons whose household goods or effects are moved from one locality to another within the city limits, or from a point within the city to a point outside and providing a penalty.

A Kingston, Ont. grocer submits a copy of The Empire, Aug. 7th, 1888, which has since become the Mail and Empire, published in Toronto. He found it behind an old mirror. On the market page flour is quoted at $4.50 for first patents. To-day the price is ranging between $5.40 and $5.50 and this comparison indicates with several exceptions, the differences between prices past and present.

Blue Point oysters are grown in Great South Bay off the south shore of Long Island. It is claimed to be an ideal oyster culture ground. The popular idea regarding these oysters was that the name had no real significance. Blue Point is an actual name and the oysters grown off that part of the coast have a particular flavor and deliciousness.

Toledo grocers have abolished the trading stamp, likewise the long established custom of treating in some way or another their customers when bills are paid; and the giving of Christmas presents is practically abolished.

Rochester, N.Y., retail grocers' association have as their object: to unite retail grocers to co-operate for the benefit of all; to abate trade abuses; to disseminate useful information; to expose fraud and food adulterations; to watch and influence legislation toward the better protection of capital; to assist members in collecting delinquent accounts; to protect them against fraudulent customers; to promote social intercourse; to encourage members to close their places on Sundays and holidays and to co-operate with the State and National Associations.

Three employees of a big New York wholesale grocery firm have been arrested on charges of robbery. One is a clerk and the others were engaged as drivers. It is believed the thefts have been going on for six months and will amount to $30,000. One of the trio has made a statement implicating the others.

In piling boxes of dried fruits it is well to leave an inch of space between the rows for air circulation.

The beginning of a crusade against spoiled eggs was marked in Chicago recently when 5,000 lbs. of canned eggs were seized by government officials.

The G. T. R. company has issued a bulletin to the effect that general stores are needed in Beaudry, Cabot, Gregg, Oakner, Rivers and Uno, Manitoba; and in Allair, Birmingham, Bradwell, Cana, Goodeve, Hubbard, Jasmin, Leney, Leross, Mortyn, Punnichy, Quinton, Raymore, Undora, Venn[illegible] in Saskatchewan; a[illegible]

The Mayor of Des Moines, Ia., has started on a crusade against grocers and butchers and the wholesale dealers in food products, and will lay before the grand jury evidence he has which he believes will show the existence of a combine to hold up prices. The dealers are indignant over the matter and make strong denials.

DERIVATION OF TEA NAMES.

Where The Hyson, Oolong and Congou Teas Get Their Names.

The derivation of the names of teas is a matter of general interest. "Hyson" is a corruption of two Chinese words one of which signifies "before the rains" while the other "Hi-chun" is the name of a young girl, which being translated means flourishing spring. About two hundred years ago this girl suggested to her father an improved method of sorting his tea. He adopted it and the tea having become famous he gratefully called it after his daughter.

"Oolong" is a name meaning Black Dragon owing to the fact that one Su was the first to bring to notice the peculiar excellence of a tea plant in which he had discovered a black snake coiled up.

"Congou" simply means "well-worked." Applied to Ceylon tea it is used to mean tea made from the lower and coarser leaves of the plant, as opposed to the Golden Tips, which sufficiently indicate the young buds growing higher on the main stem.

The Chinese call "Orange Pekoe" by a name meaning superior perfume. The pure Pekoe is called Lau-stze's eyebrows. Pekoe means "white hair" and is applied to the young leaves, owing to the fact that they are covered with a fine white down.

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY FORMED.

The proposed co-operative association in St. Thomas, Ont., mentioned in The Grocer a few weeks ago has become a reality. The company has been given a charter by the Ontario government and it will be known as The Ideal Co-operative Association of St. Thomas, Ltd. The share capital is placed at $40,000 divided into shares of $5 each. The objects are set down to be the following: (a) To manufacture, buy, sell and deal in goods, wares and merchandise of all kinds; (b) To carry on the general business of a land and building company, with incidental and subsidiary powers and the usual limitations and restrictions.

The provisional directors are L. D. Gillett, E. N. Compton, G. H. Sloggett, C. W. Dyer, Neil Marple, Charles Scrace, T. G. Campbell, Keppel Hastings, T. G. Courtenay and John Heard. How long will it last?

A Dominion charter has been granted Hodgson's Limited, Montreal, to carry on the business of manufacturing, buying, selling, and dealing in all kinds of gum, confectionery, biscuits, jam, etc.

Crescent BM&Co. TRADE MARK Brand

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

A Merchant seldom discontinues his subscription to The Canadian Grocer unless he goes out of business

For over a year the editor of The Grocer has been furnished regularly with a list of dealers cancelling their subscriptions, And he has made a point of finding out exactly why they did so.

There were not many of them, but even one cancellation means a loss of thousands of dollars to the annual purchasing power behind this paper.

It means also—where the merchant in question continues in business—that he has not found the paper worth $2 a year. And that to the editor is a serious proposition.

In 95 per cent. of cases the cancellations come from dealers going out of business.

In the few other cases we discovered that the paper was not being read. After giving actual instances to show that good merchants in every section of Canada save many times the subscription price every year by studying our market quotations and general reading matter closely we generally got a renewal order.

In this space two weeks ago we pointed out that The Grocer has for some time made a net circulation gain of over 100 a month. Last week, for instance, the net increase was 27; the week before 26; the week before that 24, and the week ending Nov. 26 it ran up to 31. Figuring the annual purchases of each one of these merchants at only $10,000, there has been an increase in the annual buying power behind this paper of over $1,000,000 a month.

Robinson's Patent Barley!

As a healthful, nourishing and enjoyable food for young and old, Robinson's Patent Barley is unequalled. Druggists sell it; grocers can sell much more of it—It is a food and right in their line. Those who are wise will always sell it.

"Simcoe" Brand Baked Beans

One of our lines that has become exceedingly popular in various parts of Canada by reason of a combination of high quality and generous quantity.

As the green label on each can tells your customers, these tins contain more beans than the 3's flats that are sold at a higher price.

And you can guarantee the quality, because the beans are all hand-picked, processed with exceeding care, and nothing but the purest sauces and spices are used.

We extend to every member of the trade our best wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

ATTENTION, MR. GROCER!

Will you permit yourself to be subjected to the losses, errors, disputes, delays and many other vexations arising from antiquated methods of handling credit customers? Or will you join the ranks of progressives and adopt the ONE WAY to avoid them?

Allison Coupon Books

point the way to safety. They guard against loss; they hold the credit customer in check; save time money and trouble.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.—No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

The Ultimate Effect of Parcel Post

Writer Thinks That the Express Companies are The Chief Opponents—Why This is a Mistaken Impression—The Retail Merchant is the Chief Obstacle—Parcel Post Would Tend to Break Up Prosperous Rural Communities and Congest the Cities.

A Sarnia, Ont., reader of The Grocer in a letter respecting Parcel Post, says:

"You say that cheap parcel post is desired by the mail order houses; very likely. But this old story has been going the rounds until it is threadbare. The real opponents of parcel post are the express companies, who do not want any interference with their present monopoly at fancy prices.

"After a good many years' experience of shopping in small towns in Ontario I venture the opinion that the local dealer himself is a loser by the excessive cost of getting small parcels, not so much directly, but in ways that he does not perceive. It prevents him from procuring things that are not in stock, promptly, and at a reasonable price; and this in turn drives people to the catalogue houses, not so much because of prices but because they have the assortment.

"Here is the way the thing occurs: A customer asks for something that is not in stock. It may be a specialty, or a novelty, or repairs, but anyway it is not in stock, and the dealer says: 'Haven't got it—anything else?' Some times he will express regret, and sometimes he will behave as though the enquiry were a reflection on his methods of store-keeping. So the customer trys another store, with no better result; and then, thrown on his own resources, hunts up the mail order catalogue, which is now as common as the big bible on the parlor table used to be twenty years ago.

"If he finds what he wants he mentally adds the express charges, and grumbles at the expense. Just at this point his attention is attention is attracted by some other items, and it occurs to him that by ordering a good sized parcel he will save some freight. Consequently he sends five or ten dollars out of town when he only intended to send one or two.

"Needless to say, this does not account for every instance, but it is a good rule for local dealers never to refuse business for anything that can be procured and delivered at a fair price. At present the express rate on small parcels between Ontario points averages about $10 per cwt. with a minimum of 35 cents. It is absurd, and altogether beyond the fair cost of the service, or the value to the ultimate consumer."

A Common Mistake.

EDITORIAL NOTE.—The Canadian Grocer was glad to receive this letter because it gives an opportunity of pointing out a common fallacy on the part of many people. It shows that the writer of that letter has also been drawn into the trap skillfully laid by the quiet manipulations of the mail order houses who are anxious to have everyone believe that the express companies are the only opposition to such a measure.

When he says that the real opponents of parcel post are the express companies, he is mistaken. To prove this one has only to ask himself the question: How long would it take to establish parcel post if the merchants were quite willing that it should come? The great opponents are the merchants, not the express companies. No one will undertake to dispute the inference that the express companies charge fancy prices. This has been the general impression, and the finding of the Commission appointed to investigate express conditions in Canada arrived at that conclusion. We can therefore expect that within the coming three months some amelioration with respect to the excessive rates charged by these express companies, and consequently we should not be able to say at the end of that time that we ought to have the parcel post on account of these high rates.

Where Merchants Err.

What the writer subsequently says contains on the whole several truths. It is true that in most towns, villages and country sections, there are merchants who do not pay enough attention to assortment and who are not overanxious sometimes to serve a customer with an article not in stock. But in a town the size of Sarnia, one is constrained to question the inference that frequently he is unable to get goods required from some merchant. The whole trouble in connection with this misundestanding lies in the fact that merchants in all lines of trade do not advertise their goods through the public press or otherwise, sufficiently to let the general public know the assortment they carry. If every merchant boomed his own business in proportion to the manner that the mail order houses do, there would be very little business leave any town, village or rural community.

This is what the trade newspapers of the MacLean Publishing Co. have been pointing out for years, and a great many cases are known where the mail order business has been greatly reduced simply because merchants have adopted more aggressive measures.

To get back to the main issne: the retail merchants base their opposition to parcel post on the assumption that a parcel post would give the mail order concerns greatly augmented power in competition with local merchants in all the smaller cities, towns, etc., in every province.

These houses have already appropriated a large portion of the trade of a great many retail merchants. Add to their present advantages, the services of the government in providing them with greatly reduced transportation rates and rural mail delivery, and the effect of the intensified competition against retail merchants becomes to the latter alarmingly evident.

But here is the situation in brief: the question concerns not alone the survival or the prosperity of the retail merchants; it concerns, through them, also the prosperity and individual welfare of our rural population and our smaller cities, towns, and villages, whose merchants are the main support of public improvements, of libraries, of the professions and of civic progress in general.

A parcel post, therefore, means more than cheaper transportation or resistance to any extortions on the part of express companies; its evident vital relationship to commercial and political condtions in every community demands attention.

It is for these reasons, The Grocer maintains, that the contention of the great and, so far, unsurmountable obstacle—the retail merchant—to the parcel post should be given proper recognition.

Draws Life From Rural Sections.

What has been said above is fully substantiated by the New York Journal of Commerce, one of the leading lights on trade and commercial questions in the United States. It says: "The strongest advocates of parcel post are the large department and mail order stores in centers of distribution for merchandise. Some of them now send catalogues and circulars all over the country and take orders by mail, but their business is restricted by the necessity of delivering most of their goods by express.

"If they can get the government to carry and deliver them a thousand miles at the same rate as from the village post office to the outlying farms, what will be the effect upon the local storekeeper? He may find the most profitable part of his trade drying up, and he cannot prosper by merely buying and selling farm produce. Retail trade in villages is important for the conservation of community life. Its prosperity is good for all the neighboring country and its languishing would be a calamity. Parcel post would tend to its extinction and counteract the effort to encourage living in the country, by increasing the tendency to congregate in cities and large towns. Trade and industrial life need to be diffused and not concentrated more and more, and the government ought not to divert its mail service to increasing congestion and drawing the life from rural towns by blighting their commercial side."

Has the Ear Marks of a Good Salesman

Story of How a Young Clerk Made a Sale Long Before the Goods Actually Left the Store—He Did Not Allow the Prospective Customer to Mope About—A Big Future is Predicted for Him.

A young man who is commanding a big salary away up in the four figures for his salesmanship ability with one of the largest commercial enterprises in the world to-day recently related an incident which had impressed him, for it clearly demonstrated the opportunities which come to the retail merchant but which in the vast number of cases are allowed to slip by. In fact he claims that they are not recognized.

"I was in a shoe store with my wife," he began. "A clerk was serving her. I walked up and down until presently a young clerk approached me and said: 'I would like to show you a fall and winter boot that we are handling this year.' The incident by the way occurred about six weeks or two months ago.

Getting in Early Work.

"I told him that I did not need any new boots just then, but he replied, 'Well, I just want to show you them. It may not be long until you do want a new pair, and anyway I think you will admire them,'

"Well, even if I had not wanted to look at them there was hardly any escape and soon the young man was expounding the virtues of these particular boots. They were a good seasonable kind and there wasn't a single good point that the young fellow did not touch upon. 'When you get a pair of rubber heels on them,' he said 'you will go a long way before you will find anything to equal them for comfort during this time of the year.'

"My wife had made her purchase; I thanked the young clerk who had interested me and we left. There was not a sign of disappointment on his face because I did not buy. In fact he seemed pleased at having interested me.

"About three or four weeks later, I felt that I needed a pair of good, stout, every-day boots. Do you think I could forget that young clerk? Why, the boot he had shown me was the one I had been thinking about and had decided I needed. I went down to the store and asked for this clerk.

" 'He is not here in the day time,' was the answer. 'You see he works in an insurance office during the day time and comes in here in the evening.'

When the Sale was Made.

"Well, the rest of the story may be shortened. Of course I found him an evening later and bought the boots he had recommended. He was learning salesmanship, although he satisfied me that he was to the "manor born." I need hardly say that he had sold me the boots that very evening when I was with my wife. He took advantage of my presence in the store. He did not let me mope around and go on about my business. But in a nice, pleasing manner he drew my attention to a seasonable article and sold it to me. If that isn't salesmanship of the 24 karat kind. Well I am going to watch that young chap. He is going to make his mark."

TO INSTRUCT CLERKS.

Cincinnati Retailers Impressed With Necessity of Clerks Possessing Salesmanship.

At a recent meeting of the Cincinnati (O.) Retail Grocers' association, at which more than 200 of the retail grocers of the city were present, A. C. Secrest, who delivered an address entitled "How Can a Small Buyer Improve His Condition?" said that the secret of improvement lies in the bettering of the salesmanship qualities of clerks in the retail groceries. He advocated the education of the clerk along the lines of knowing the origin and cost of what he sells and how to differentiate between various classes of goods.

So much impressed was the association with the talk that an arrangement has been made whereby monthly lectures will be delivered to grocers' clerks this winter, showing the origin of the goods they handle, how they are packed and how to sell them most advantageously for their employers. Many of the lectures will be illustrated.

WAS HE RIGHT OR WRONG?

There are tricks in all trades. An Old Country grocer relates the following experience. "A woman walked into my shop the other day and asked to taste some American cheese. At the time the best American cheese was selling at 7d. per lb. She tasted five different ones, and then said, "Have you nothing better, something about 8d. per lb? I don't care much for the taste of these." As it happened I had half a cheese under the counter, the fellow-half to one she had already tasted. I said "Certainly ma'am! Here is one at 8d. per lb."

"After tasting it she said "Ah! That's better. I will take 3 lbs. of it."

A Goderich, Ont., grocer recently reported the receipt of a shipment of butter which proved to contain a considerable amount of tallow. The retailer promptly shipped it back, and says that if the firm which sold it to him does not prosecute the makers, he will do so himself.

BELIEVES IN TAXING LAND, NOT INDUSTRY

By Ald. Ross, Calgary, Alta.

We must tax land not industry in order to raise money for governmental purposes. All taxes on buildings, improvements, farming implements and stock, business machinery, food, clothing, etc., should be be abolished, and all governmental revenues should be raised by the taxation of land values. Land should be taxed exclusive of all improvements upon it.

Land values are created by the community at large. As the Province of Alberta is settling up year after year, the selling price of land is yearly increaseing. Manhattan Island, N.Y. once sold for $24 worth of goods. To-day it is assessed for more than $2,400,000,000. A lot in Calgary that sold for $5,000 ten years ago, is worth $50,000 to-day. The world is full of concrete examples. These values are all created by the community at large. By raising governmental revenues by taxing land values, the community would retain to itself a very small part of that which it itself creates. Surely this is no robbery.

If a citizen is enterprising and industrious, and paints his house, builds a fence, lays down a lawn, or does anything to beautify his home and incidentally the surrounding neighborhood, his assessment is promptly raised. If he builds a house, we increase his taxes. If he pulls one down, we decrease his taxes. If he converts the prairie into a garden, we increase his taxes. If he divides a market garden into town lots and holds the land idle waiting for a rise in prices, we reduce his taxes. The more a man does for the community, the less the community does for him. The less a man does for the community, the more the community does for him.

A tax on land values would not only relieve labor and capital of the tax burdens which they now bear, but would increase their share in distribution by providing them with locations for homes and industries and with raw materials for their production on better terms than those on which they can now be secured.

A tax on production acts as a check to industry. For plainly if it costs a given amount to produce a given article, any tax imposed on that article must be added to the price, and the more it costs, the less of it will be consumed.

A window that sold $100 worth of goo ds on Saturday preceeding Christmas week—dressed by Harry McClement and his clerks.

Windows that Made Good as Selling Agents

One Dealer Says That His Christmas Display Sold $100 Worth of Goods in One Day—Another's Display Pulled People Across the Street to Make Purchases—Symmetry and Attractiveness Aimed at in Both—Suggestion Made to Keep a File of Good Window Displays.

Toronto, Dec. 29.—"Every photograph of a window that appears in The Canadian Grocer, I cut out and place on file until I have an opportunity to use it," says Harry McClement, a grocer at 1717 Dundas Street. He places more confidence in his window as a trade getter than in any other asset he has, with the possible exception of personal salesmanship when he gets his customers or prospects into the store.

Many of the windows The Grocer has reproduced during the past year he has used with good results. A close study of his window shown here illustrates the care he took to make his Christmas display a positive salesman.

The symmetry of it demands immediate attention, but of course this is not so pronounced in the cut as if the original window were before our view. The Christmas tree in the centre laden with stockings, etc., made a good background and caught the attention of every passing boy and girl. This in itself was a splendid ad. because it got the children talking about the Christmas tree at McClement's.

On either side of the tree is a barrel of Almeria grapes with a block of dates between. A case of oranges flank each barrel and nuts, oranges, dried fruits, boxes of chocolate, and wines are placed with perfect symmetry on the floor of the window. This combined with a few Christmas decorations here and there went to make up an effective display.

Makes His Windows a Salesman.

A window that doesn't get business is not much good. Mr. McClement always figures on a selling display and not simply a picture and his Christmas window this year, he says, was one such. He calculates that on Saturday, December 17, it sold at least $100 worth of goods. His entire business that day amounted to more than $240 in excess of that of the corresponding Saturday of a year ago. He is a believer in price tickets, especially in a district where the majority of the purchasers belong to the laboring class and he always aims at supplying the quality desired.

ISLAND'S CHRISTMAS DISPLAY.

In dressing his window, J. W. Island, 262 Dundas St., paid particular attention to attractiveness and appropriateness as aids to the making of sales.

As the accompanying illustration signifies there was considerable work spent on it. In the first place the window had to have a false bottom to make the floor slant. A few boards of lumber were required for this and it was well repaid by the better appearance resulting. The partitions between the sections of dried fruits, candies and nuts consisted simply of slats covered with different clored tinsel. Each section runs into a common centre in the shape of a half moon filled with peel. The stars on either side consist of currants and the letters in "Seasons Greetings" are written with loaf sugar. Many would not take the trouble, but Mr. Island cut the loaves of sugar so that each letter was made properly. This necessitated considerable work, but had the letters been constructed with whole prices of the sugar they would not have been of the correct shape and therefore not in general keeping with the attractiveness of the remainder of the display.

The background was simple but neat, consisting of figs and dates symmetrically arranged. It was not high, so that a passer-by could see past it into the store.

In order to prevent reflections a white sheet was hung up to the rear of the window, but even this precaution did not altogether eliminate the trouble.

Objects to Price Tickets.

It will be noticed that there are no price tickets in this window. This is not because Mr. Island forgot, but that he doesn't favor them for a trade such as his. He says his customers are the kind who do not pay much attention to price but who depend on the dealer to give them quality at fair cost. When he has a special price to offer, he deems it advisable to use a card.

Island's store nearly always has a well-dressed window, not for ornamental purposes, but because it pays. Both Mr. Island and his partner maintain that their Christmas window made many sales. It had even pulled many people across the road and brought them into the store to purchase, and there can be no better illustration given of its selling power than this.

As suggested by Mr. McClement, these illustrations ought to be placed on a special file for future reference; they will come in handy sometime, if not for imitation, for suggestion.

Meat Slicer Means of Landing Big Contract

Five Hams Ordered By Church Organization for Social Function—One Customer got Biggest Pound of Bacon in his Life—New Computing Scale Saves Time and Labor — Evidence of How a Dealer's Selling Power can be Increased by Store Fixtures.

Toronto, Dec. 29.—When a dealer instals a store fixture he is anxious that it will save him the money that the salesman said it would. If it doesn't he regrets having purchased it and usually accepts the first opportunity to dispose of it.

J. W. Island, Island's Grocery, 262 Dundas street, purchased a meat slicer some months ago and his testimony of its efficiency is interesting.

Proving a Business Getter.

"We wouldn't be without it," he enthusiastically said, "and we wouldn't sell it for any money if we couldn't get another.

Got a Big Pound.

" 'Well,' he said, 'that's the biggest pound of bacon I ever got.'

"The machine had made about twice the number of slices he had been accustomed to receive."

Island's Grocery recently secured the contract to supply a church entertainment with sliced ham simply because they were able to attractively do the slicing. The contract was a large one, some 5 hams being required. In addition to all the above evidence, this firm maintains that people are attracted by modern equipment since the appearance of the store is enhanced.

This display was the means of bringing people across the street to purchase goods shown—dressed by J. W. Island and his partner.

"We have increased our sales of bacon a great deal among our every day customers and we have others who come in for their bacon only just because they get it sliced correctly. Eventually we will get some of them regularly. It isn't everyone who can slice bacon evenly with a knife, no matter what edge it has, but with the machine the work becomes simple to anyone.

"The other day a customer bought a pound and I weighed it. He asked if the scales were correct. I believed they were. I told him, for I had just bought a new computing scale.

New Scale a Time and Money Saver.

Their new computing scale is also admired. It saves time and labor since it is known at a glance the cost of an article weighed.

"Even if there is a little more on the scale than is asked for," remarked Mr. Island, "It does not matter. We simply say that there is such and such a value there and customers accept it; we cannot lose."

This firm expects to gradually increase their store equipment from time to time. They are strong advocates of the value of interior appearance, and store fixtures that give a superior service.

The above experience proves conclusively that a dealer's selling power can be increased by modern equipment and indicates that in time such a fixture will pay for itself.

The Clerk Did Not Want to Sell from the Window

One of the most potent weapons of the grocer in meeting dangerous competition is the show window. A small stock is no bar to the successful use of the window. But there must be no reluctance to sell from the window, as was recently exhibited by a clerk in a Winnipeg tobacconist's store. A customer asked for a staple brand and was told that the store was out of the goods. He came back with the reply that a lot of the goods was stacked up in the window, and the clerk admitted the fact, but pleaded the objection that he did not like to "spoil the display." The sale was eventually made, but not until the customer had relieved his mind of some caustic remarks.

Show windows should be treated with an eye to the standing of the store and the classes of people to be reached. The coldly dignified display may suit one neighborhood and not suit another. But wherever the store is situated, the one rule always holds good—that constant care should be bestowed upon the window.

Plans to Overcome Mail Order Trade

Use the Newspapers Judiciously and be Honest in Advertising so as to Gain the Confidence of the People—They Must be Given as Good or Better Value for Their Money Than They Can Get From the Catalogue Houses.

By W. R. Patterson.

Undoubtedly the merchants in the smaller towns all over Canada, feel the effects of the mail order business done by large departmental houses, who make a specialty of this kind of trade, and not only do the merchants suffer, but the town as a whole must feel the effects of so much money being sent away instead of being spent at home.

The subject has been discussed from every point of view, but discussion alone has little effect in keeping trade at home. Very few merchants seem to have made any definite efforts to accomplish this, and to stem the outward flowing tide of orders to mail order houses. Much of the discussion has been after the style of the small merchant running a "behind the times" general store, who said in commenting upon the situation, "It simply must be stopped." When asked how this was to be done, he could offer no suggestion.

Face the Matter Fairly.

It requires action on the part of merchants, to keep the mail order trade from invading a town, and carrying away cash that should go into the cash register of the home stores. Looking at it from the buyer's standpoint may help the merchant to see wherein lies the attraction, and, as a result, what obstacle they have to contend with.

In the first place, there is no law which compels the person living in a small town to spend his or her money there if it seems advisable to send it to Toronto, Montreal or any other place. One of the most important steps to be taken is that of letting the public know what he can do for them.

In many of the stores the arrangement of stock is such that the customer would have no idea that certain goods were kept in stock, did he or she not ask for them particularly. To educate the public as to the ability of the stores to serve them, it is necessary to advertise as extensively as possible. Tell what lines are carried and at what prices the goods are sold. Do not be afraid to tell the public exactly what you have on your shelves, but do not overlook the fact that honesty is the best policy in advertising, even if it does not seem to be the case in some lines of business. Honesty in your advertising will create confidence in your store, and you will get the reputation for giving full values. Everyone has heard of some store where prices seem high, but where it is generally conceded, it paid to shop.

Get the Public's Attention.

Use the newspapers, fight the mail order house with its weapons by constantly bringing your store and goods to the attention of the public.

The retail business is not done to-day even as it was a year ago, let alone twenty years ago. Many and many a retail merchant who fifteen, twenty or twenty-five years ago, found it comparatively easy to make a little money, to-day has discovered that it is almost impossible for him to make a respectable living and interest on the money invested. Such men to-day will say to you, that some way or other, things have changed. They tell you that years ago they were making a little money, but to-day it is hard for them to do so. The trouble with such men is that conditions have changed, and they have not. They fail to understand that to-day, as never before, it is not only one's neighbor who is his competitor, but it is every other man on the face of the earth.

Our fast railroad trains, our electric lines, our telephones, telegraph systems, wireless telegraphy and rural mail delivery have made of us one family. To-day the retail merchant must compete with every other retail merchant in the civilized world. No longer is trade in local boundaries bound to him. It goes where it pleases, it goes to the men who to-day know how to appeal to it and reach it scientifically.

A Frank Statement.

Speaking for myself, I wish to inform the farmer's wife, the merchant's wife, the banker's wife, or the mechanic's wife, that I will never be the one to spurn her cash (for I need the money) and I will tell her frankly to trade where she can get the biggest value for her dollar, whether it is in Toronto, Montreal or any other city; but if prices will range equally the same between the mail order house and the local merchant, I think all fair-minded people will agree with me when I say I think she should favor the latter, for the reason that every dollar spent at home helps to enhance the value of her property as well as mine. It is practically useless to talk of loyalty to the home town. To the customer it is individual with individual, and not a case of loyalty. Therefore it narrows down to a question of supplying the right goods at the right price.

There is no reason why the mail order trade in a town may not be reduced to a minimum, if a real effort is made, but it cannot be done if merchants fold their arms and grumble at the mail order houses and at the people who buy from them. It is the merchant who must take the first step and give the people the opportunity to get the goods they want at home. It is hustling and enterprise that has built up the mail order concerns and it will require hustle and enterprise on the part of the merchant to bring the outgoing trade to their own stores.

Use Mail Order House Methods.

To sum up, my last word is this: in grappling with the mail order problem, adopt as much of the system of the mail order house as possible, investigate their methods, prove to your people that you can make shopping at home, as bright and attractive and fascinating as it can possibly be by mail, do everything to inspire your people's confidence and make good use of printers' ink.

A WORTHY OBJECT.

Everyone who reads the accompanying article will observe that it has been written by a hard-headed business man, capable of going beneath the surface when he thinks. W. R. Patterson is a Collingwood, Ont., business man, keenly interested in the development of his own town. Recently a number of papers were submitted to the Collingwood Advancement Association on the question of Loyalty to Collingwood, by men interested in the building up of the town. Mr. Patterson's was among the number. These papers have been printed in pamphlet form and distributed among the citizens, who are requested to give them serious consideration.

Preventing the Inroads of Rats and Mice in Flour

The following is one grocer's method of keeping mice and rats from finding a way into the flour and feed storeroom:

"Every grocer is confronted with the problem of how best to keep mice and rats out of his flour and meal. For years I have tried cats, traps, poison and other methods of exterminating the pest with but little success. At last I have found what is absolute security against them, having partitioned off part of my wareroom large enough to hold all my flour and meal. I lined this room on sides and top with metal lath and covered the floor with one and one-half inches of cement. The door is a good solid frame covered with metal lath and closely fitted and furnished with a strong spring which will keep it closed at all times, thus preventing neglect of clerks and myself to close it after entering or leaving the room.

"I would advise those contemplating the erection of a building for store purposes to use metal lath throughout the building, and to cover the false floor with metal lath before laying the floor.

Customers Depend on Dealer's Judgment

In the Majority of Cases He Supplies the Brand, Which Illustrates the Confidence His Customers Repose in Him — Personal Salesmanship a big Asset in Moving Out Goods but the Grocery Salesman Must Know Groceries — Other Selling Forces Used — Story of How This Dealer Lost Interest in one Manufacturer's Products.

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 29.—"Nine-tenths of my customers simply ask for soap in their orders," states Hugh Malcolmson, a local retail grocery dealer. "The other tenth stipulates the brand."

This illustrates one thing in particular; that is that Mr. Malcolmson's judgment is given a high place in the estimation of his customers. It means that he acts as an advisory board to his patrons and that the latter have every confidence in his decisions.

Not only is this the case with respect to soap; in practically all their purchases his customers name the general article and he supplies the brand that, in his opinion, is best suited to them. If he thinks someone should have Jones' Worcestshire sauce he gives him Jones'; if Brown's he sells Brown's always bearing in mind the profits he derives from each. The matter is left to his judgment.

This is, of course, a result of the building up of a reputation and goodwill. It is a condition that is almost bound to exist where the merchant handles his customers carefully and never betrays a trust. On the other hand if the merchant does not study his trade and does not know what to do when he becomes the executive committee, he will not have the confidence of many of those who deal with him.

Strong Advocate of Advertising.

This is the opinion of Hugh Malcolmson who is a strong advocate of the development of Selling Power in the retail dealer. Among his chief methods in increasing the power of his sales forces is the use of newspaper advertising.

"I would just as quickly close my door as to stop advertising and I would just as soon stop advertising as to neglect changing my ad. copy every day," he said.

Mr. Malcolmson did not go into advertising blindly; he first invested in retail advertising course and studied the science of advertising. He doesn't maintain that he knows everything about it now for he is still studying. He reads carefully the advertisements written by paid experts such as the ads of the big mail order houses and gets many pointers in this way which when combined with his own ideas and the conditions of his own trade, make effective copy. He is not averse to stocking new and worthy goods which are not known by his customers, because he can create demand for them if he so desires. They must, of course, cary with them a fair profit. To create this new demand one of his chief mediums is newspaper space. He always advertises new goods in the newspapers and gets results because he writes the convincing kind of copy.

Salesman Must Know Groceries.

Mr. Malcolmson is a great believer in the value of personal salesmanship as a means of moving out goods. But he qualifies this by saying that the salesman "must know the goods." He maintains that a superior salesman from say a drygoods store, cannot sell groceries at first. He might be all right in a few cases but if a customer were to ask whether this is green tea or that is sago or tapioca he would be at sea. A woman likes to deal with the salesman who knows the goods and can talk intelligently about them.

The telephone conversation is another good asset in selling goods although this Chatham grocer prefers to get the customers into the store.

"They see more when they come in," he says—which goes to show the value he places on interior display.

Opinion of Substitution.

He does not believe in substitution. He thinks that if a merchant is carrying a brand of goods asked for he should fill the order; but he does not believe in using the selling forces at his command to sell an unprofitable article or one that does not meet with his idea of quality. In other words he gets behind the manufacturer's goods which allow him a fair profit and uses all his practical methods to sell them. A customer frequently asks him his opinion of two or more articles and "I always sell her the one in which I am the most interested—the one that I am familiar enough with to talk intelligently about it, taking into consideration the price and profit," he declared.

Dropped a Manufacturer's Line.

"A long time ago there was a certain firm's goods that I used to handle extensively," he told the writer. "I carried them before they built a factory in Canada. Once they sent me poor goods, no doubt by mistake, and I wrote back to tell them so. This they denied saying that I would have to accept them or they would place the account in the hands of a lawyer for collection if I did not settle up.

"To avoid any trouble I paid them but didn't order any more of the goods. A month later a traveler of the firm called to see me but I said, 'No.' He wanted to know how I could get along without them because they were widely advertised to the consumer who was well acquainted with them.

"I told him I could get along very well without them and that I didn't care to stock any more. He, of course, said they would make me stock them, but I claimed they wouldn't—I haven't handled those goods since simply because I considered I wasn't used right and I lost interest in the goods."

Provided for Stable Room for Farmers' Horses

A Pennsylvania town was losing much of the country business because it provided no adequate accommodations for the farmers' teams or even for the farmers themselves when they came to the city to shop. The result was that they were enticed to more distant cities where the accommodations afforded them were more in keeping with their purchases; but there was one retailer in this city who realized the importance of the farmers' trade and who took measures to afford them accommodation which the city would not provide. Consulting the manager of the most centrally located livery in town, this retailer made an agreement with him to redeem "standing-in coupons," which he would issue to certain farmers on his mailing-list.

This coupon, which entitled the holder to free standing-in privileges for one horse one time at the largest livery in the city, was mailed to farmers with a personal letter, explaining the use of the coupon. The only stipulation was that the holder should purchase $1 or more at this store. The coupon further stated that the store guaranteed satisfaction or their money would be refunded. Each coupon was stamped with a serial number, so that each recipient felt that he was receiving this coupon together with a favored few. In order to make the coupon finally good at the livery, one of the clerks stamped it to the effect that the holder of this coupon had purchased goods amounting to $1 or more.

The result of this letter campaign was that many farmers, who had been going to other cities to trade, were, by this little schme, induced to return to this city and continue their patronage there. Another retailer, in another city, has varied this scheme to the extent that in his letters to farmers he says, "You will have no more trouble about hitching when you come to town. Use the standing-in ticket we are enclosing absolutely free with our compliments. Come into the store and get another one to use the next time you come to town. This offer of giving free standing-in tichets is entirely original with us. We realize the trouble farmers have had in the past in this respect and have decided to furnish standing-in tickets to leading farmers absolutely free. No other store has been so enterprising—no other store has ever been so liberal."

This retailer further strengthened this scheme by removing from the mind of the prospect any idea that there was a trick behind his offer. He said in his letter, "There are absolutely no strings to this offer. The enclosed ticket entitles you to one standing-in at ———'s stable, whether you trade with us or not." He then went on to say, however, that there was no reason why the recipient should not trade with him, and showed conclusively in his letters from purchases made at their store more than justified this small outlay.

PARCEL POST PROBLEM.

On another page is an article on the Parcel Post problem, pointing out just what effect such a measure would have on the commercial life of the country, and particularly in rural communities.

Some readers may wonder why this question is being exploited just now, since there is no immediate prospect of a bill being introduced into the Canadian parliament. But Parcel Post is under consideration in the United States and President Taft has even gone so far as to favor its establishment on rural free delivery routes. This is only the thin edge of the wedge and later on, if this goes through, one may expect to see parcels mailed across the continent just as cheaply as to a nearby village.

Mail-order houses in Canada will then likely seek the same legislation. But if Canadian members of parliament are thoroughly made acquainted with what will be the ultimate effect on the general welfare of the country, it would be a simpler matter to prevent it being introduced than to kill it after it is introduced.

Therefore, since "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," let each merchant who feels that he is at all concerned over this question, take the matter up with the member for his constituency and gain his opposition right away.

There will soon be no necessity for the Parcel Post on the grounds that express rates are high since these, according to the finding of the Railway Commission, must be reduced to a reasonable basis within three months' time.

PROTEST AGAINST THE BILL.

The present is a good time to interview the member for your electoral constituency in the Federal house about those Co-operative bills; during the holiday season he is likely to be home. But if you cannot see him personally, drop him a card and ask for his opposition to the measure.

Co-operative joint stock companies allowed to operate differently from any similar concern is class legislation and is dangerous to the stability of our commercial welfare. There is nothing on the statutes at the present time to prevent them being established as joint stock companies responsible to parliament. If this is done there will be few complaints on the part of merchants; but when these societies want permission (which is granted to nobody else) to form companies which are not responsible to parliament, there will be established a precedent which is almost sure to prove detrimental to business in general.

Unresponsible joint stock companies are an incentive to wild-catting. It will be remembered that at the time a certain co-operative store went into liquidation some months ago in a Canadian city, the promoters of the scheme were nowhere to be found. Some of the shareholders—most of them poor people who had recently come to Canada—were interviewed by the writer and in tears they told how those who had promoted the company had disappeared with the money they had with much difficulty scraped together.

If wild-catting can be so carried on under present conditions what may we expect under the conditions sought by those behind the Co-operative bills.

Each merchant should at once request the member for his constituency to oppose the bills and when the time comes each should be prepared to join the big deputation to Ottawa to protest personally against the passage of any such measure.

WHY TURKEY PRICES HELD.

There are always a great many turkeys consumed in Toronto around the Christmas festive season, and this year was no exception. There have been times, however, when the retailer lost money on turkeys, but this year an exception was made.

It will be remembered that a year ago the cry went up some days before Christmas that turkeys were scarce. Retailers grabbed them at around 25 cents only to find that two days before Christmas they were down to 18 and 20 cents with the natural result that they had turkeys on hand after the day had passed or that they sold at a loss.

This year things were different and turned out fairly satisfactory for Toronto retailers. Some time ago the produce men had an understanding that no more than 20 cents per pound was to be paid farmers no matter what the latter demanded. This had the effect anticipated, as wholesale produce houses bought their turkeys eventually, if not at first, for 20 cents and even 19 and 18 for inferior fowl. The retailer secured them at 22 cents and less so that he was able to sell at 25, 26, and 27 cents, make a little profit and at the same time he felt pretty secure that few could offer them more cheaply. This was the reason why prices were so well maintained during the week before Christmas.

There was no shortage in turkeys in most places; many families of course invested their allotment for poultry in geese, chickens and ducks because they were cheaper.

Reports from other places indicate varying conditions. It was estimated that on Saturday morning last 200,000 lbs. of turkey went into Napanee, Ont., and as high as 22 cents was offered. In Hamilton farmers were asking 25 to 27 cents; this turned attention to ducks, geese, etc. On the St. Thomas market they sold at from 20 to 25 cents; at Owen Sound from 19 to 22 cents; Stratford, 20 to 22 cents; London, 24 to 25 cents; Collingwood, 17 to 20 cents.

On the London market there were only about 100 turkeys offered, demonstrating that produce buyers had been pretty busy there prior to the Christmas week.

BETTER POULTRY AND MORE EGGS.

It would seem only natural to see improvement in poultry raising and preparation as a result of the farmers' own initiative. Yet the longest step so far made in this direction is the result of a campaign for better conditions carried on by a Montreal produce house for some months past, and which culminated recently in a prize poultry competition open to all parts of the Dominion.

The entries for this have been large and representative, coming not only from Ontario and Quebec, but also from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, and as far west as Saskatchewan.

Naturally the $100 offered as prizes has gone a long way toward making the competition successful, for this educational campaign is sure to have its effect. Farmers who received the instructions provided for the competition, will in future know how their poultry should be prepared to bring the best prices, how it should be fed previously, and the value to themselves of raising such stock.

In the past all the average farmer thought of in this regard was to kill, dress and get to market with the least trouble to himself. Now that he has been shown the possibilities of his business by a practical list of instructions and the resulting effect on his birds, there is no doubt that a long step upward will be the result.

THE GROCER, WHERE WAS HE?

A prospective purchaser entering a store expects to see some one there to serve him.

His expectations are not always realized. A case in point happened in Winnipeg last week when a buyer walked into a grocery store to purchase a quantity of bacon. There was no one there. Thinking that the proprietor or a clerk would appear soon he waited a moment or two, but still the silence in the warehouse, cellar and upstairs reigned supreme.

The result was that the dealer lost a sale of bacon and a probable customer, for it happened that the buyer was a representative of a family which had just moved into the district. He purchased his bacon elsewhere.

This little incident is probably insignificant in itself, but it bears a moral. The general public of the nineteenth century would possibly have been satisfied until "something did turn up,"—as Dickens' Micawber would put it—but the public of the twentieth century wants service. It is so common now-a-days that it can be easily secured somewhere. The old-timer may have made some money in the past, but his old-time ideas are anti-profit-producers of the present day.

BUSINESS COSTS AND EXPENSES.

The National Association of Credit Men recently formulated the following simple but comprehensive rules for business accounting:

1. Charge interest on the net amount of your total investment at the beginning of your business year exclusive of real estate.

2. Charge rental on all real estate or buildings owned by you and used in your business at a rate equal to that which you would receive if renting or leasing it to others.

3. Charge in addition to what you pay for hired help, an amount equal to what your services would be worth to others: also treat in like manner the services of any member of your family employed in the business not on your regular payroll.

4. Charge depreciation on all goods carried over on which you may have to make a less price because of change in style, damage or any other cause.

5. Charge depreciation on buildings, tools, fixtures, or anything else suffering from age or wear and tear.

6. Charge amounts donated or subscriptions paid.

7. Charge all fixed expense, such as taxes, insurances, water, lights, fuel, etc.

8. Charge all incidental expenses, such as drayage, postage, office supplies, livery or expense of horses and wagons, telegrams and 'phones, advertising, canvassing, etc.

9. Charge losses of every character, including goods stolen or sent out and not charged, allowances made to customers, bad debts, etc.

10. Charge collection expense.

11. Charge any expense not enumerated above.

12. When you have ascertained what the sum of all the foregoing items amounts to, prove it by your books, and you will have your total expense for the year; then divide this figure by the total of your sales, and it will show the per cent. which it has cost you to do business.

13. Take this per cent. and deduct it from the price of any article you have sold, then subtract from the remainder what it cost you (invoice price and freight), and the result will show your net profit or loss on the article.

14. Go over the selling prices of the various articles you handle and see where you stand as to profits, and then get busy in putting your selling figures on a profitable basis, and talk it over with your competitor as well.

CALL THE CLERKS TOGETHER.

Just now one of the most important things any merchant can do is to call his staff of salesmen together and talk over plans for getting a larger share of the profitable trade anticipated during 1911.

The man who does the buying, the clerks behind the counter, the window trimmer, ad. writer and book-keeper, and even the delivery boy, should be given an opportunity of making suggestions as to what goods to buy, and how to display, advertise, sell and deliver them.

There are few merchants who do not put forth every effort to make the next year outshine in preparations and in profits the one that has gone before, and he is already well on his way who knows where his last effort can be improved upon, where the staff, regular and temporary, can be strengthened, or where his last year's stock fell short. All this information cannot be stored away in tablets of memory but the best system is to have some data to steer by.

The ideas adopted for next year's trade must be something original or at least mark a departure from that featured before. Now is the time to plan, to hold a conference and adopt plans which will not only increase sales and profits but make the cogs of the business wheel run smooth.

Make one member of the staff responsible for the ad. writing, another the window dressing, etc., and see that their work is planned well ahead. Then encourage a friendly rivalry and ask every member of the staff to jot down some suggestions and hand them to you in, say, a week's time.

The first thing to do is to get together and enlist the co-operation of the entire staff. Then keep in close touch with what is done, encouraging every member of the store force to do his utmost for his own and your good.

The merchant whose clerks know that he is listening to every word they say to every customer who comes in will not have employes who will develop any great amount of confidence in themselves or in the employer.

"A GIGANTIC FRAUD."

Such is Term Used by Retail Dealer in Describing Daylight Bill.

Editor Canadian Grocer—I would have great pleasure in "dropping you a line," a clothes line, or even a brick, if only I could convince you that the "Daylight Saving Bill" is a gigantic fraud.

If it is really necessary to start the day earlier, by all means do so, but don't tamper with the clock.

There is one side of the question that has not been mentioned as far as I have seen, viz., when the housewife really does her shopping. My experience has been that most women (I mean working men's wives, for they are the backbone of the trade) do their shopping "between the lights," that is when it is too dark to do the housework and not dark enough to turn on the lights. They will, I am fully convinced, still adhere to that plan, call the hour whatever you like. Then it seems earlier closing will not be effected by this means.

The only remedy that I can see is to fix the hour and to stand to it, whatever that is.

J. K. KADWELL.

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 28, 1910.

EDITORIAL NOTE.—Mr. Kadwell's letter is interesting. He, however, does not make clear the point re early closing. If a grocer closes at, say 6 o'clock in summer or even 7 o'clock, he would not have his store open at all during twilight as twilight does not come in summer until between 8 and 9 o'clock. The point made in the article in last week's issue dealt with early closers. If dealers keep open until ten or eleven o'clock at night there would, of course, be no difference to them because they would not be enjoying any daylight after hours.

Readers of The Grocer would, no doubt, be glad to hear again from Mr. Kadwell or in fact from any other dealer who has a decided opinion on this question.

Methods of Hiring and Retaining Help

Character, Utility, Experience and Ambition Among the Items That an Employer Should Seriously Consider—Finding Fault For Small Errors Discountenanced—Occasional Encouragement for Good Service Goes a Long Way to Insure Interest in the Store.

By O. S. Johnson.

Have you ever thought why you find it difficult to retain some of your clerks? If not consider for awhile and you will most likely agree with some of the following statements.

Store enthusiasm is always aroused by the knowledge that one is doing well and that one's efforts are being appreciated. The ambitious clerk will spend his last ounce of energy for an employer who gives him all due encouragement and is not backward in saying "Well done" when occasion arises.

Some merchants refrain from acknowledging satisfaction in their employes' work and rather seize every opportunity to magnify a simple error, and endeavor by harsh methods to make the clerk believe that he has committed some gross and unpardonable mistake.

This policy is doubtless a wrong one. It is moreover detrimental for the employer to prevent a good clerk from framing a high estimate of the value of his services to the store.

There are only a few employes who will be spoiled by being told that they are good salesmen, but on being continually informed that their work is unsatisfactory they will begin to look out for a more encouraging and genial employer.

Get the Clerk Interested.

Conditions around a store must be pleasant, otherwise employes will not evince that keen interest in their work which makes them invaluable to their employer. Until the employer lets his salesmen know from his own lips that their progress is bringing them steadily nearer promotion, they will not banish the idea that there are better chances to improve their position under different management.

Every merchant has his own way of running his business and of handling his help, but as far as the latter is concerned there is certainly one method which could be beneficially utilized by all, and which would tend to create a strong feeling of rivalry among clerks, and spur them on to get home by more than a short head.

A system or recording the sales and general conduct of each employe—in other words, of writing up a short account of the week's doings in the store—would allow each clerk to see whether he had made a backward or forward move, and would also give him an idea of what his manager thought of him.

The idea of the other fellow getting ahead would soon arouse a keen desire in him to go one better the next week.

Investigation on Hiring.

The value of an efficient salesman does not lie entirely in his ability to secure ready sales. Careful inquiries should be made before hiring. While questioning the applicant for a position in his store, the merchant should pay close attention to suggestions on character, temperament and habits which may be brought out by conversation.

He should make sure that the man's aim in life is settled, and that he is determined to remain in the grocery business, as otherwise his services would only be temporary and not so valuable.

Few merchants on examining applicants remember to question them concerning their health. The man that is capable of doing hard work and whose physical condition is strong enough to bear continuous strain, if necessary, will prove a greater acquisition as a rule than the individual who possesses good selling abilities but who is subject to some inherent or contracted disease.

"What experience have you had?" is one of the regular series of questions put to all applying for a position, and one which leads to the production of references. Care must be taken in the perusal of the latter, and further information than provided should be sought as many employers have a stock letter which they hand each member of their firm when leaving, whether his services have been all that could be desired or otherwise.

It is advisable to leave the experience question till the end, since out of it arises a discussion about salary, around which, as a matter of fact, all interest centres, and because the merchant by that time has a good idea of how much the applicant wants, how much he is actually worth, and how much the position will pay.

By carefully cross examining all applicants on the subject of character, health, utility, experience and ambition, the merchant will make his task of choosing good, reliable help lighter, and will also give him an insight into the nature of the man he employs, such as will remove any doubt he might otherwise have.

Playing Game of the Mail Order Houses

Village Store Issues Big Catalogue Filled With Illustrations of Everything Required in Food, Dry Goods, Hardware and Furniture Lines—Various Articles Advertised Described in Modern Style—This Year's Catalogue Twice the Size of That of the Last.

Brownsville, Ont., Dec. 29.—Meeting the big catalogue and mail order houses at their own game is the method of Joseph Corbett, whose departmental store in Brownsville, a village of some 300 inhabitants in Oxford County, Ontario, has thrived on whatever competition it has had to meet. Figuratively speaking, Mr. Corbett has taken a page or two from the book of systems these large city establishments employ, and with a confidence that foreruns success, has adopted a broad policy that should counteract the influence from abroad and keep trade at home.

One criterion of Mr. Corbett's success is found in his annual fall and winter catalogue, which also covers the Christmas trade. It is this year more than double the size of the catalogue issued a year ago. From the standpoint of brightness, attractiveness, and from a business form and sense, it is much better than the 1909 catalogue, and even that was quite pretentious.

A Good Business Talk.

Twenty-eight pages, exclusive of the cover, are required to advertise some of the goods handled in this store. The very first page is impressive. The illustration is well chosen and emphasizes the following little introductory talk: "Making your dollars go farthest is a problem that confronts a good many people, especially at this time of the year, when so many things are necessary to add to one's comfort during the fall and winter season. We feel positive no store will offer you better values, and our range is so wide to choose from. Whether judged from the point of view of mere sight-seeing, or from that of intending purchases, you will find our store is a very interesting place. Read this catalogue carefully from first to last word. It will pay you, it carries with it a message of interest to everyone who appreciates and practises saving money. In every department we carry full lines. We have not begun to mention all the articles in each, but merely draw your attention to our prices in each department, and in any of your wants we can supply you at correspondingly low prices."

Lesson on Quality.

Such is the general introduction. The grocery department has the following brief announcement apart from the articles and their talks and prices. "Practice economy always, but never sacrifice quality for price, especially so with regard to food products. Our groceries are high grade in every particular, and can be served with the utmost satisfaction. Our stock consists of everything that is desirable for Christmas cooking. Prices quoted are of economic interest to you."

The following is an example of the confidential talks upon the various goods, "Coffee! Try our delicious ground-while-you-wait blend at 40 cents per lb. It makes a delicious beverage. Save the bags, return ten and get a pound free. Extra good value is our special blend whole bean coffee, ground-while-you-wait at 25 cents per pound. One pound in a beautiful lithographed tin, as per cut, 40 cents."

Suggestions for Planning a Large Seasonable Sale

By A. H. Harvey.

In planning a big seasonal or special sale it is usually best to advertise it extensively in the local newspapers which circulate among the farmers, but live retailers have learned that the newspaper publicity can be given an individual and personal appeal, which is doubly effective when introduced by letters. These letters are primarily for the purpose of calling the customer's attention to the announcements of the sale running in the newspapers, and for making each recipient feel that the retailer has written him or her a personal letter, so that it will be possible for them to take advantage of the bargains which are offered. But in order to make this letter as effective as it should be, it is often necessary to add some inducement not included in the newspaper advertisement. These extra inducements are put up to the reader in a way that makes her believe that she is one of a favored few.

One excellent scheme of this kind that is used is a special discount card. In the first letter which the prospect receives there is enclosed a card, which entitles the holder to a discount of five or ten per cent. from the regular sales prices quoted in the newspaper advertisement. The recipient is told that this discount to her is only one being sent to a favored few. Her name is filled in with pen and ink, and the card is stamped with a serial number. It also shows the limit of the offer, usually five or ten days.

This first letter is followed up by another within a week, calling the recipient's attention to the card and the fact that the limit on the offer is about to expire. Occasionally a third letter is written to the persons whose cards have not been redeemed at the store, stating that the retailer has decided to extend the limit for a few days longer. In this letter another discount card is enclosed and marked "Special Duplicate." The new time limit is also stamped over the limit set on the first card.

Some Problems Discussed by Retailers

The Following Somewhat Broken Conversation Serves to Show How Dealers' Minds are Broadened at Association Meetings—The Value of Giving Credit and of Personality in Business—Honesty in Business and Thoughtless Knocking.

"What and why is the credit system in a retail business?"

Attention was abruptly turned to the new speaker who threw out this query implying at the same time that he knew the answer and would give it. Conversation had been upon system in business and one speaker had dwelt upon the points in favor of the strictly cash system. The others agreed with his sentiment to a certain extent, but the majority were hardworking grocers who had only a one-third cash business. The rest was credit.

"Credit is a convenience," said the speaker after a pause. "The majority of housekeepers demand it and appreciate it. They may not go out of their way to tell you about it, but nevertheless, they like it. A customer of a "cash only" needs some particular goods. She knows she is going down town that day and says, 'Well, I might as well buy it at Seaton's or one, or one of the other big stores with the other stuff.' That is the tendency. Take the convenience away from retailing and it wouldn't be long until the small retailer would be a thing of the past.

Put Up With Much.

"It's a corker what the people will tolerate in these big stores. When they find they have not received the value for money spent on some article they do not rant and rave and hunt up the proprietor, yelling 'thief, robber, etc.' at him. They made the purchase from a clerk, a part of the machinery of the big store, and a clerk pays as much attention to a complaint as does the big clock over the main street entrance. There is no personality in these big stores. You cannot find the proprietor to tell him what you think of him, whether he is wrong or not. You have to wait four or five minutes, often more for your change, but Pshaw! Somebody hit upon the truth when he said: "the people like to be done."

An Oyster Episode.

"This is a strange world, but it is nothing like its people. Why only last week a man brought back a quart of oysters, one of the new brand kind that have a continental reputation. He said they were rotten. Imagine that. I sold all the rest of the shipment and not a word of complaint. But to this man they were bad. Funny! Why I know they were good, but what are you to do? I would rather lose a little money than a good customer's entire trade."

Honesty in Business.

Another grocer said: "We should not be led away with the idea of success to such an extent that we become blinded by the almighty dollar. True, the world may seem to judge a man by the money he has, but the final question every time is not how much he has made, but how has he made it. According to the standard of wealth, some of the worst scoundrels are recognized as successes. But you and I know that they include men devoid of character in its broadest sense. There are bloodstains on their money bags. By paying low wages to their young men and particularly to the young girls in their employ they have wrung their success from the bodies and souls of these employes. Personally, I would rather be a failure and fail honestly, than be a success and jeopardize my reputation whether the world knew it or not." And this is, I think, a sentiment that is characteristic of most of that large body of Canadian grocers.

A little play on words had a double meaning. One of the members said, "To win the confidence of the people you must deliver the goods." He was speaking in a general sense but it was pointed out that prompt delivery pleases and is one of the features of convenience.

Thoughtless Knocking.

Conversation turned into different channels. Then the following. It was one of the weaknesses of the trade the speaker said and he had heard it frequently.

"This is an example.

"It is midafternoon and two clerks are in the storeroom opening up new goods. 'Well, get onto this stuff,' says one. 'Look at what he expects to sell for thirty cents. He must have been crazy when he bought that.' The anvil chorus is doing nicely at this stage. 'Why nobody asks for this stuff around here. I never heard of it before. Some traveler must have had him on the string.'

"The next morning the proprietor sets out for the fruit market. His sympathetic clerk has something to say about his general appearance. He calls to a fellow employe. 'It's a wonder he isn't ashamed to drive that old rig up the back lane. Just look at it. If he'd slap a little paint onto it, it wouldn't be so bad. I suppose we'll not see him now for the rest of the morning;' the clerk finishes with a vicious snap at the string he has been using in tieing up a five pound bag of sugar and cuts the paper by the unnecessary force he applied."

The relater of these incidents finished with: "Now, how can a store become a success with disloyalty of that kind rampant?"

The above comment was recently heard at a meeting of a retail grocers' association. Talks like this serve to broaden a dealer's mind and make him see matters in a different light.

The Causes of So Many Business Failures

Lack of Clear Knowledge of Percentages and of General Business Principles with a Tendency to Overlook the Small Details —Do Ninety Per Cent. of Those who Enter Business Fail Sooner or Later?

By Howard R. Wellington.

It has been said that ninety per cent. of those who enter business fail sooner or later. Just how near this comes to the truth we hardly know, but there are undoubtedly a large number of failures which might be prevented if merchants would adopt more systematic and practical methods. Of course, there are exceptional cases, when force of circumstances compel a man to discontinue business, and even if additional capital were available, it would make no ultimate difference. As a practical illustration of the erroneous idea of some merchants in regard to expenses and percentages, we will suppose that we commence a jobbing business, with every prospect of a turnover of $100,000, on which we expect to make a margin of profit of 25 per cent.

One method—Profit on -100,000 at 25 per cent. equals $25,000; our selling expense is 10 per cent., or $10,000; our inside expense is 6 per cent., or $6,000; our cash discount is 2 per cent., or $2,000; our profit is 7 per cent., or $7,000; total, $25,000.

The correct method—Profit on $100,000, at 25 per cent., or $20,000, selling expense is 10 per cent., or $10,000; inside expense is 6 per cent., or $6,000; cash discount is 2 per cent., or $2,000, profit, 2 per cent., or $2,000; total, $20,000.

It will be seen by comparing the two statements submitted, that instead of clearing $7,000, we actually earn $2,000 in profits, the percentage of expenses, discount, etc., being figured always on the sales.

A Definite Basis to Work on.

We believe firmly that a certain percentage of profit should be added on each line of merchandise, and that this is governed entirely by the class of goods handled and the situation of the store. There is a tendency to purchase an article for a certain price and mark the retail price immediately without carefully ascertaining what the usual margin is. While it is undoubtedly necessary to cut prices sometimes to compete with an opposition, the correct selling price should be known, as it may be possible to make up the difference on something else.

Stock-taking.

Would you be surprised to know that there are merchants doing a fair business, who never take stock; who seem to have enough cash to pay bills when due, but who cannot know how much profit has been made for a period, or possibly how much loss has been made.

It is such accounts as these that are the credit man's worst enemy, for while a merchant may apparently be prosperous for a certain length of time, in spite of his lack of system, he will surely go under sooner or later without some definite basis to work on.

Figuring Expenses.

Then in the matter of expenses, unless the merchant actually takes stock and draws off an annual statement, showing his turnover, his various charges against profit, and his gross and net profit, it is impossible for him to know whether his business will stand the expense he is charging it with, for salespeople, advertising, rent, etc. Of course, he may argue that his expenses are as low as could be possible, whether he had a statement of affairs or not, but is there any impetus for a merchant to lessen his expenses if he does not know how his sales compare with expenses and profits?

The Annual Statement.

Just to give some idea of the statements which are handed to the mercantile agencies sometimes for distribution to the wholesaler or manufacturer, we are giving here a statement recently submitted, signed by the retailer, and declared to be correct. As a basis of credit we consider this statement a fair risk, but either through the total ignorance of the dealer, or on account of fraud, the whole aspect of his business is changed in a few months' time.

The figures given are approximately correct, with original statement as presented:—

Statement, Feb. 28, 1910.
Stock on hand	$3,400.00
Cash	150.00
Accounts receivable	400.00
Furniture and fixtures	300.00
	$4,250.00
Accounts and bills payable	$ 850.00
Surplus	$3,400.00

Liabilities are apparently very small, and in such a case, his affairs are in good shape.

Regarding Liabilities.

Perhaps some merchants overlook the fact that is absolutely essential to record accounts and bills payable. A complete record of all purchases should be kept as carefully as a record of sales. Frequently, when an accountant or assignee is called in to take off a statement, the utmost difficulty is experienced in ascertaining the actual liabilities to creditors, although at the same time the debits to customers are carefully recorded. Invoices for purchases should be journalized, and the totals credited to the respective creditors. When accounts are paid, creditors' accounts should be debited, or when drafts are accepted, the same course should be taken, and a record kept of the days on which acceptance falls due.

Statement, Nov. 1, 1910—
Stock on hand	$5,000
Cash	50
Accounts received	200
Furniture and fixtures	300
	$5,550
Accounts and bills payable	$22,550
Deficit	$17,000

You say such a state of affairs is incredible in such a short time. Perhaps so, but this is an actual case, and while it is quite evident that fraud was practised, it should be a warning to every merchant to keep a clear record of his liabilities.

OUT AFTER PEDDLERS.

Kingston Merchants Waging War Against Men Selling Without Licenses.

Kingston, Dec. 29.—The members of the Kingston Retail Merchants' Association are out with a big stick, after the men who go around the city, from door to door and throughout the country, peddling without a license, and they have decided to fight the matter out to a finish. The matter has been discussed from time to time by the members and at the meeting held recently it was decided that it was time to get a detective on the case, and have every guilty party brought before the magistrate.

The city police have had a few cases of the kind before the magistrate, but the members of the association feel that the matter has not been given the attention it should have received and on this account they have decided to take the matter into their own hands, and employ police to work it out. Legal advice is also to be secured, so as the members of the association can find out just what rights they have in the matter.

The statement was made at this meeting that during the past two weeks an outsider who had been working in this district, and who had not taken out the necessary license, had realized over $1,000 on aluminum goods alone. This is not fair to local retailers.

As far as the local merchants are concerned, it will be war to the end, as they have decided that the thing has got to stop.

The Kingston merchants would like to get the co-operation of the merchants of other places along this line.

Who is it always has the most desirable clerks working for him but the man who is himself the most desirable employer?

Don't let the idea get possession of your head that there is only one kind of advertising just because you never used but one kind. Look over the field and see if you aren't missing a good idea somewhere.

The Markets—Dried Fruit Situation

A Review of the Various Lines and the Condition Existing in Most of Them—Evaporated Apples, Raisins, Currants, Apricots, Prunes, Peaches, All are Firm And Interest will be Centred Upon this Market Until the New Crop Condition Begins to be Felt—Sugar is Dull and Weak—Coffee Firm but Quiet — Canned Goods Strong.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Evaporated Apples.—½ to 1 cent higher.

Gallon Apples.—Price advanced.

Apricots and Peaches.—Price advanced.

Toronto, Dec. 29.—A combination of conditions are responsible for something akin to listlessness in the trade in the interval between the holidays. Judging from the presence of the travelers one would consider it "Old Boys" week but it is safe to assume that there is more than a festive spirit attached to the apparent holiday they are having. Preparations are under way for a good beginning with the opening of the new year. The various houses are holding consultations, a banquet is heard of as having been held or as a future event and all in all a big effort is being made to get away to a good start.

Actual business is rather tame this week. There is some passing but not much more than is hoped for at this time. The old year leaves behind it some markets of almost unsurpassed strength. The dried fruit situation, the canned goods situation and one or two others of lesser importance are certainly decidedly firm and it is probably that during the coming year some top figures will be reached.

Sugar just now is weak and it is generally believed that prices are due to decline almost at any time now.

There is a likelihood of not a few changes with the new year but that remains to be seen.

In regard to the dried fruit situation the following refers to conditions in California stocks and is from a reliable source.

"If the present demand continues there will be nothing left for the spring trade, neither domestic nor foreign, French and German operators have been purchasing heavily in California of late taking prunes, peaches, apricots, raisins and apples and at prices much higher than was imagined they would be at this season.

"There is little of anything left. It looks as if there would be less raisins on hand on Jan. 1st, 1911, than was ever known at that time of the year. Never have the stocks in growers' and packers' hands been so light and never has the demand for the season between Thanksgiving Day and Christmas been so heavy.

"It requires a lot of raisins to supply the trade from January 1st to October 1st, in fact from 30,000 to 40,000 tons. Reliable authorities say 41,000 tons were shipped between January 1st, 1910, and October 1st, 1910. Just now there are not 20,000 tons in sight in California. In the way of prunes they are so few that they are hardly worth mentioning. Estimates run from 100 to 150 cars. That is nothing.

"In the way of peaches, never was there so steady and persistent a demand. With apples at a high figure and likely to go higher it is not to be expected that peaches are going to remain at a low figure.

"Apricots are so few that it is hardly worth while taking them into consideration."

Sugar.—Trade in sugar is dull. The demand is light and the prospect is for lower prices. Willett and Gray say, "Regarding Cuba crop there are no receipts yet at principal shipping ports. Fourteen centrals are working against 56 at the same time last year. There should be a large increase working after the holidays." This refers to the market in raws. The market just now is uneventful. Indications point to a declining market, and while there is always the possibility of something intervening, that something is not very apparent just at present.

Dried Fruits.—The advance in prunes announced last week seems to have been well warranted. Apricots and peaches are also quoted at higher prices and all the way down the line with but few exceptions the position is one of strength and is likely to remain that way for an indefinite time. There may probably be a lull for a short time following the holidays but the trade are expecting the markets to come back later when the real conditions will be laid bare and the situation will be fully comprehended.

Coffee.— The attention of the trade is directed away from staples just now and coffee is one of them. The result is a little quietness.

In the primary market it is apparent that coffee is receiving a rest and a more conservative tone is manifest. One reason given is that all staple goods feel the pressure of holiday trade flowing temporarily in other channels. Attention is drawn from coffee and for the present there is a feeling of dullness.

Tea.—The market is firm and while the strength may not be apparent as far as material changes are concerned still it is there, according to reports.

One report says: "Distributors and blenders are making great efforts to secure by private treaty, the unsold balances of crops of some estates at prices considerably in excess of current market values. . . . There are fresh indications that the investing public is now again seriously turning its attention to tea as a speculative investment of promise.

"There seems little doubt that, should prices, as seem probable, be maintained at the present level, even for a month or two, profits of many of the companies whose crops have been prolific will be quite phenomenal."

The total export of black tea from Ceylon during 1910 up to November 7th was 147,320,395 lbs. as compared with 151,905,994 lbs. in 1909. The total shipment of green tea from Ceylon during 1910, up to November 7th was 5,180,069 lbs. as against 4,683,515 lbs. in the same period of 1909. The exports of all Ceylon teas this year show a comparative decrease of 4,089,045 lbs. The total up to November 7th, 1910 was 152,500,464 lbs.; total up to November 7th, 1909, was 156,589,509 lbs. Rubber exports from Ceylon show an increase of 1,469,213 lbs. or nearly 138 per cent.

Evaporated Apples.—This market has new strength. Stocks are practically out of the hands of the manufacturers. They are reported decidedly light no matter who has them and while prices are now higher it is believed by some that they have farther to go.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—The trade in canned goods is unusually good this time of the year, even though orders are small. It emphasizes the contention of brokers and packers that the supply in the hands of whoesale and retail grocers is so small that they have to come into the market more often. Buyers are showing a tendency to take chances on the future rather than stock up now, realizing that the canned goods market is fickle. Tomatoes are all cleaned up, while corn is firm but inactive both on the spot and for future delivery. Peas are quiet and unchanged. There is little demand at present for either spot or future goods. Other canned goods are firm under unusually light offerings, but there is not much demand.

TORONTO.—Higher prices in some lines of canned goods are reported in the wholesale district. Gallon apples are noticeably higher and different lines of peas are up. The whole market is a strong one, although during the present there is not a great deal of activity.

The National Canners' Association of the United States show that the total pack of tomatoes in the United States was 8,031,000 cases, which was about 3,000,000 cases below the 1909 pack. The result of this compilation of figures, it is said, has strengthened, considerably, the market, though without any radical advance.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS:—

Prunes—Scarce.

Tarragona Almonds—Very short.

Coffee.—Weaker.

Montreal, Dec. 29.—All Montreal markets are under the holiday spell, and no operations of importance need be expected till the New Year. The dullness is not, however, accompanied by weakness, as there are quite a number of inquiries for certain lines.

The unusual scarcity of prunes is attracting attention and many are wondering whether there is a shortage in the crop or whether supplies are being held for future developments.

Sugar.—There was a holiday dullness noted in the sugar trade, and most circles feel that activity need not be expected pending the close of the year.

Nothing new has developed in refined sugar, the business being seasonably light, as distributors are going slow, pending inventories.

The visible supply of sugar in the world is now 3,050,000 tons, which compares with 2,790,000 last year at this time, an increase of 200,000 tons.

Syrup and Molasses — There is a steady distributing movement in grocery grades of molasses, though the usual year-end slackening is noted. Prices are firm, but demand is somewhat slack, owing no doubt to the high prices prevailing.

Dried Fruits.—There is a brisk demand for the principal varieties of California dried fruits, particularly prunes, but the buying is of the hand to mouth order. Advices from the Coast reflect a strong feeling among holders, who have comparatively little stock left. Peaches are firm, and higher prices are confidently looked for, in view of the high cost of competing fruits, especially evaporated apples. Valencia raisins are exceptionally scarce, and the demand for currants is strong. Yet the recent arrivals seem to have satisfied present requirements of consumption, and little new business seems to be coming to the surface. Figs are quiet, the immediate needs of consumption having been covered.

Spices—There was no feature in the spice market, the demand being seasonably dull. After stock-taking is over, about the second week in January, dealers expect quite a change in the situation, some believing that cream of tartar will stop soaring and come nearer earth again.

Coffee.—The coffee market has been quite a dull affair for the past few days, most of the trade seemingly to be simply evening up for the holidays.

The spot coffee situation shows no improvement, only a light jobbing demand being recorded, but the deadlock will probably be broken about the turn of the year, when it is expected that prices will show either an upward or downward tendency.

Rice and Tapioca—While distributors are showing more interest in rice, the trade has not yet become excited by the strength in the South. Grocers seem to be temporarily supplied, and are able to hold off for further developments.

The tapioca market remains steady, there being quite an improvement in the demand.

Beans and Peas.—Things remain much the same in this market as last week, only the demand has been somewhat weakened, no doubt, due to the absence of buyers on holidays.

Evaporated Apples.—No one expects a great demand for evaps. at such high prices, yet the inquiries have not been so frequent as anticipated, and dealers are by no means satisfied. How long are these prices going to hold, is the question now being asked.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS:—

Prunes—Stronger.

Evaporated Apples—Firm and scarce.

Coffee—Higher.

Tapioca and Sago—Firm.

Winnipeg, Dec. 29.—Trade during the entire fall and Christmas seasons has been fully up to expectations, but is now drawing to a close, and both wholesalers and retailers look for a quiet market till after the Christmas holidays, or about January 10. During this slack period orders will be confined to hurry up shipments by express, and to merchants who require goods to sort up. The stocks held here are exceptionally heavy this year in anticipation of a steady business all through the winter months. Wholesalers state that the time is passed when there will be any great lull in trade during the winter months.

The expectations of the wholesalers regarding the collections during the last few weeks have been fully realized, as they are still keeping up exceptionally well, which speaks admirably for the general trade throughout the country.

Other lines besides those mentioned below have been in great demand especially canned goods, and more particularly in canned vegetables. While the stock held here is fairly heavy, yet some wholesalers claim that there is a certainty of a great scarcity in the spring.

Sugar.—The demand for sugar as well as all staple products continues firm but slow owing to the increased trade along other lines during the Christmas season.

Foreign Dried Fruit.—An active market still continues in all kinds of dried fruits, which are on a general advance, especially prunes and currants. Supplies of prunes are hard to secure and an advance of ½c a pound is expected to be in force early next week. The stocks are almost completed, the total amount held this year being not 25 per cent. of that held at the corresponding period last year. So limited is the available supply that some packers predict big advances before long. Currants and raisins both made slight advances of from 50c to 75c per cwt. during the last week, but it is expected that after the first of the year a slight reaction will set in here. The entire supply of Christmas raisins has almost all been sold off the jobbers' hands.

Nuts.—In spite of the fact that the supply of nuts was a little late in arriving they were nevertheless distributed to the retail merchants in time for their Christmas trade and buying has been satisfactory. The Brazil nut trade was a disappointment owing to the delay of a shipment which should have arrived in October, but has not yet reached the city. Among the new nuts to arrive during the last week was the first shipment of shelled walnuts from Bordeaux, the price of which is about 1c higher than the old ones. The first car load of Manchuria walnuts also reached the city and proved a great success. This was only a trial shipment and came via Vancouver, in whole, shelled halves, and shelled pieces. They are regarded by many as being more meaty and of a nicer flavor than the European walnut.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, December 29.—As is usual in Christmas week, business with the wholesalers was rather quiet last week, while the retailers report that business was never better. Everybody seems prosperous and in consequence they bought liberally of specialties and fancy goods as well as the staple articles.

Turkeys sold at 24 to 26 cents, wholesale, and other kinds of poultry were in good supply. Eggs are higher, hennery eggs selling at 40 cents and case eggs at 28 cents per dozen. There was a good supply of vegetables at moderate prices.

Granulated cornmeal has dropped from $4.90 and $5 to $4.65 and $4.75 per barrel.

APPLYING FOR A POSITION.

A First Prize Letter Answering Advertisement for Grocer's Assistant.

In answering an advertisement such as "Grocer's Assistant wanted—state salary expected and experience, etc.," what would a clerk say?

At a recent grocer's exhibition in London, Eng., a prize was given for the best letter in reply to this advertisement: "Wanted a competent first-hand in a good Family and Ready-Money Trade. Applicants to state their Qualifications, etc."

The first prize was captured by the following application:

Dear Sir,—Responding to your advertisement, I beg to respectfully offer my services as first-hand. I am an abstainer, non-smoker, married, aged twenty-nine, height 5 ft. 9 in. Photograph enclosed.

After serving an indentured apprenticeship I came, eight years ago, to my present employer, who has the largest family and ready-money trade in this town, and for four years have served him as first-hand. I invite your kind consideration to his testimonial (enclosed) which speaks of my character and service during the past eight years.

It is not easy to write about one's own abilities. But I may state that I am fully competent to lead at either grocery or provision counter, and am considered a quick, pleasant, and successful salesman.

Window-dressing (including ticket writing) and coffee roasting have been included in my regular duties.

I have had considerable experience in soliciting, taking one of our most important journeys weekly. The list of customers on this round has more than doubled since I took it over.

I claim an intelligent knowledge of the tea trade, am qualified to test, select, and blend, having made a special hobby of this important department during leisure hours.

At the London Grocery Exhibition I have secured prizes for coffee valuing, tea matching, advertisement writing, essays on the tea trade, essay on "How to become a successful assistant."

Should my application gain your favorable consideration, I shall be glad to call upon you or to supply any further particulars you desire. Assuring you of my dilligent and faithful service always, I am,

Yours obediently,
&c.

COMMON SENSE.

A Requirement Necessary in Building up a Retail Business.

By J. M. Mortimer.

One quality which the man who would run a store successfully must possess is common sense; it is indipensable. Advice is a good thing, but no man can furnish advice which is sure to exactly fit the requirements of every merchant who reads it; common sense must be used by each merchant in using such portions of it as will be good for him and in adapting them to fit his particular requirements.

One merchant may spend a certain percentage of his gross sales in advertising, while for another merchant the same percentage might be too large. One merchant may use premiums in one form or another with excellent success, while for another merchant to introduce them would be far from wise. A strictly cash business may be the best thing for a certain merchant, where for another to attempt it would be suicidal.

In all things, common sense must be used in applying advice, suggestions or other people's ideas or experiences in any form to one's own particular business. No one else knows as much about the merchant's business, about his trade and the conditions under which he does business, as the merchant does himself, and he is best fitted to decide what is good for it and what is not.

If your advertisements turn out conspicuously poor in spite of all your efforts, give some of the help a chance to write some for you. You may make a discovery.

When you find yourself getting into a rut, call in one of the neighbors and ask him how he would go about improving your business. Almost anyone will have an idea that you never would evolve.

The business world is full of good one idea men, men who have one first class idea. Unless they know enough to call on outside help when that one idea is worked out, they cannot go very far.

We all know the ball player who throws his glove down and jumps on it when he muffs the ball. He is like the advertiser who lays it to the public when his advertising doesn't draw.

Salesmanship isn't all talk. The customer is entitled to ideas about the goods in question and he is entitled to express those ideas. Learn to be a good listener.

TO ALL Wholesale and Retail Grocers, Commercial Travellers, Friends, etc., from the Atlantic to the Pacific—

WISHING you a Prosperous New Year and all the good that life can bring.

An Opportunity for Bright Clerks

THE competition on Constructive Salesmanship instituted by THE CANADIAN GROCER is open to clerks as well as to merchants. The clerk who is a real salesman is always in demand; by studying the methods his proprietor and himself have used and are using in building up a business, he can become even a better salesman.

¶ By telling us how these methods have been used and systematized, he can bring himself to the front and this will naturally be to his own advantage. A young man who has earned a medal for his ability as a salesman is a young man to be desired by any firm.

¶ Decide now to enter THE GROCER'S competition. There are nine medals, all of the above design, to be won.

Next Ten Years

Unmistakably the outstanding development in the trade of Canada during this first decade of the 20th century just closing has been the remarkable advance of Red Rose Tea. There is scarcely a grocer in Ontario, who, ten years ago, would have thought it possible that Red Rose Tea would be by now a leader in the tea business in Canada. It is, and the year just closing is by far the largest in the history of the business.

I believe you are pleased with the progress Red Rose is making. It is due largely to the confidence of the Trade in its high quality. Beginning next week another year and another decade, it will pay you more than ever to push RED ROSE TEA. It is quality that counts.

Deliverer Hit the Horse with the Weight

This Caused His Employer to Discharge Him — Story About Another Delivery Man Who Was Using Strong Language—Grocers Exchange Experiences Before Their Association Meeting.

Two or three grocers had taken their seats in the association hall. They were the advance guard of those who would attend the regular meeting that night.

And wherever two or three are gathered together, talk always turns to some phase of the grocery business.

On this occasion it was about the delivery man.

"I fired my delivery man just the other day," remarked one and of course every one was anxious to know why.

Overruled by His Temper.

"Well he had an awful temper and because he thought the horse was not doing what he considered it should, he hit it with the weight. As soon as I heard about it, I told him to go for I wouldn't keep such a man about the place.

"I had a delivery man not long ago who refused to go down cellar to fix up some boxes because he said he wasn't hired to do that. He got his leaving ticket too."

A Gentle Chiding.

Another grocer told about his deliverer whom he heard using some "strong" language while hitching up in the back yard.

"Next day I said to him: 'I heard you using some pretty loud talk yesterday.'

" 'What time was that?' he asked.

"So I told him the time and hinted that I didn't care to hear any more of it. I asked him if he thought he could stop it and he said he believed he could. Since then I have heard no more swearing."

All in a Day's Work.

The delivery men were not all criticized. Someone told of a young man who when asked if he would fix up the warehouse a bit remarked that he would be glad to: "It was all in the day's work."

Then there are delivery men with the religious turn of mind as the following story indicates: "I had a man working for me once, who whenever he heard any person using "strong" language, took them to task in a quiet way of his own. He would say, 'Oh yes, that's a very dear friend of mine.' This usually had the expected effect."

Outlook in Tea Points Towards Advanced Prices

"There are too many elements of uncertainty to make speculation as to the future course of tea prices a profitable pursuit," says a writer in The Financial and Commercial Supplement of the London Times, "but those who know most about the conditions prevailing in the countries of production, and about trade developments abroad, are said to believe that values may be maintained henceforward at a level that will make the production of tea more remunerative than it has been hitherto.

"They base their opinion on the fact that only small extensions have been made for several years, that the preference for British-grown tea steadily increases, that Ceylon's annual output will decline owing to the encroachment of rubber, and that more tea is required in the aggregate every year, which is shown by statistics of the world's purchases. Whether China's trade will revive after a year or two of higher prices and make it once more a dangerous competitor is the question to which no answer can be given, but so long as British growers can bring their produce to market, as they do now, at a cost which ranges from 3½d. per lb. for common to 9d. for fine and valuable crops, it is thought by many to be impossible for China really to shake their position. Only approximate figures can yet be obtained respecting the total af the year's export from Java, Japan, and China, but it is estimated to be from 15,000,000 lb. to 20,000,000 lb. heavier than in 1909. Nevertheless, it has made little if any difference to any of the markets for British-grown tea."

Another authority on tea says that as each week goes by and the Indian tea-growing season draws nearer to a close evidence becomes stronger that India is not going to have a repetition of last year's conditions. Then good weather prevailed in the closing month, but now the latest cablegrams received from the tea-growing districts all mention that cold weather has set in and state that the season is now practically closed. The hope of the buyers from that direction is thus fast disappearing. Ceylon also continues to fall back with its supplies, and the estimated shipments for December from the island are 9½ million lb., as against 10¾ million lb. in December last year. At the same time the demand by the public continues to grow.

Russia and Australia are also taking more tea direct from Calcutta and Ceylon than they did last year.

New Laid Eggs are Quoted at Reduction

Price Has Declined During the Week, Owing to Supplies Being a Little More Plentiful and the Demand Being Rather Quiet—The Situation in Poultry—Live Hogs and Lard Shows Higher Prices, and Question Might be Asked Has Turning Point Been Reached?—Advance Not as Yet Expected to be Heavy in Any Case.

The "turkey" season has at any rate brought no regrets. At least so far there have been no complaints of dealers being burdened with stocks that they would have to dispose of below cost. Some may not have had the same success as others, but if so they have not as yet persisted in lamenting that fact. The general opinion is that the trade in poultry this year was quite satisfactory. In some sections the price was reported at a low price. Lindsay, Ont., is one instance of this. On the other hand some localities had turkeys selling at 28 and 29 cents. Among the stories of the trade are some telling of retailers who bought the week before and on the 24th found they could buy at a price much lower than they had paid. On the whole, however, the trade seems to have been satisfactory. The stocks for New Year's are fairly good and may be sufficient to meet whatever demand is felt then.

Jobbers state that their hold over after Christmas was quite small.

Live hogs are up a little this week and lard is also higher as the result of the influence of the American market. Lard supplies are light and some regard the advance as only temporary. The feeling in regard to the provision market is still unsettled. Some say that the confidence shown by those who welcomed the recent long slide in prices was not entirely warranted and that the time has come now for the market to reassert itself. However, that is a difficult question. Prices in some respects are a little higher just now, but in others they are lower. More definite intelligence than is at present known must be forthcoming before the market can be carefully estimated. At present the opinion of one side is as good as that of the other.

Eggs show a little easier feeling this week due to more liberal supplies of new laids. It is believed that henceforth supplies will be freer.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—The most notable feature of the provision market was the increase in the price of dressed hogs, which sold for half a dollar more per cwt. Lard remains firm, while pork and compound lard both are a shade easier.

Butter.—There is quite a good demand for winter butter and receipts show a falling off from previous corresponding periods. The market was not liberally supplied with fancy fresh creamery because the bulk of the stock is more or less defective.

Poultry.—Things have quieted down considerably since the holiday rush is over. Dealers report a dropping off in the trade this year, the demand for turkeys having been considerably curtailed by the high prices prevailing. The other day a woman entered a butcher's shop and asked him at what price he was selling his turkeys. "Twenty-five cents, madam," was his reply. The decision of the woman, "It's too dear, I'll have to take something else," about explains the fact that there are a number of birds still in cold storage and on the retailers' hands.

Eggs.—An easier feeling is apparent in the egg market. Supplies of new laids are more plentiful and the price has declined. The demand during the past week has been lighter than usual and will continue so until after the holidays. It is expected that supplies of new laids will be slightly heavier than during the past six weeks.

Poultry—Turkeys seem to have held generally close around the 25 cent figure, retail. The supply was none too plentiful, and while the demand seems to have been entirely met, the opinion is that the surplus was limited.

At any rate there have been few, if any, reports of having been caught this year. Jobbers have quite a few for this week, some of them held over, but it is thought that the next holiday will clean them out. Locally, the price of poultry in general was well maintained, and there is a feeling of satisfaction apparent.

A DEALER'S PHILOSOPHY.

Don't be too particular about sticking to one line of goods. If you see a chance to build up trade in another line, break into it right away. Other merchants don't hesitate to stock your kind of goods.

It pays sometimes to have some exceptional values on exhibition in order to catch the people who are "shopping" around, comparing prices and looking for bargains.

If you can't say "No" to the urgent traveling man, buy by mail. Some grocers ought never to allow a traveler to show them his line, they are so easy.

An empty or unattractive show window is like a salesman with untidy clothes and his back to his customers.

Never omit prices in any kind of advertising. Your customers must know the cost before they buy, and your competitors will find out your prices anyway.

The mussy store soon has a lot of mussy customers and mighty few others. Like attracts like in all cases.

OPPOSED TO EGGS BY WEIGHT.

John L. Walsh the new commissioner of weights and measures for New York city is opposed to the idea of selling eggs by weight. In this regard his opinion is in direct contrast to that of his predecessor, Clement Driscoll. The latter appointed a date at which eggs would have to be sold by weight. All parts of the trade were aroused, and when the time came, the word of the "chief" had been forgotten.

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

Most Perfect Made.

All Grocers are in business for profit. Goods that do not sell readily and repeat often are not profit producers. Royal Yeast is one of the best profit producers in a Grocer's stock. No profit is ever made in handling unknown brands.

Flour and Cereal Markets Unchanged

Trade Has Been Fairly Good Considering the Time of the Year —Other Countries are Heavily Exporting Wheat, but Canada and the United States are Holding Their Stocks at Quotations That Do Not Promise Much Business — Rolled Oats in Good Demand, but Export Trade is Light.

The holidays naturally have a quieting influence on the grain and flour markets and the past week has, as a result, been rather uneventful. Trading has been light and it is hardly expected that there will be anything important till after the beginning of the new year, at any rate. Flour is in steady demand. Cereal business is at a high level and the principal factories report heavy orders to meet which employes are working overtime. Rolled oats are in strong demand and just at present seem to be occupying a strong position. The Canadian visible supply of wheat this week shows 10,638,000 bushels, as against 8,988,000 bushels a year ago, and the figures for oats are 6,458,000 bus., as compared with 4,473,000 bus. a year ago. As far as local supply is concerned there is no special reason for expecting an advance near at hand. In regard to wheat one grain letter says: "We are inclined to look for a break in the market, as there is nothing in the statistical position to warrant present level of values."

Exports of flour last week from St. John, N.B., were 27,694 sacks, as against 60,133 sacks a year ago. Enquiries from European markets have, of late, been more numerous and in cases where prices were right considerable business was transacted.

There is one rumor that in the spring a pool or corner in wheat may be felt. The U. S. government report shows a crop much heavier than was expected. To meet the competition of other export countries, it is believed that Canadian holders will have to reduce their quotations if theyw ish to keep up with the export business. The quantity of wheat and flour, as wheat, now in transit to Europe, together with the visible supply of wheat in the United States and Canada, is equivalent to 86,904,000 bus. as against 62,931,000 bus. a year ago.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—Winnipeg wheat stocks on Wednesday showed an increase at terminals of 546,794 bushels for the week, and now aggregate 6,322,897 bushels, as compared with 4,022,278 bushels at the corresponding time last year. Despite the holidays, trade has been fairly good. Some of the dealers still look for lower prices before there will be any appreciable activity in Canadian wheat and flour.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

Gunn, Langlois & Co., Montreal, recently held a show of the poultry entered in their competition, whereby $100 in gold is distributed among the winning farmers. In addition to these, they purchased the prize birds from the Guelph, Ont., and Amherst, N. S., shows. The display filled two large rooms in their Montreal depot. They were packed artistically and with the beautiful white skins of the properly prepared poultry, they made a most appetizing and pleasing display. Turkeys, geese, chickens and ducks were all well represented. Only one or two entries showed any dropping off from the usual high standard. The latter only serve to point out the inadequacy of the haphazard methods heretofore so prevalent. From an observer's point of view the judge, Prof. F. C. Elford, of Macdonald College, had his own troubles in picking the prize winners. Undoubtedly there must be differences to the trained eye, but the class of the display is certainly uniformly high, and the casual glance of a non-expert would find it impossible to choose. Pioneers in every line are the builders for the future, and in taking this step, Gunn, Langlois & Co. have carved out another step forward.

The old established firm of Purnell & Panter, Ltd., Bristol, Eng., have been successful in securing the contract from the admiralty for pickles.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

Merchants and Board of Trade of Edmonton Want Higher Licenses on Peddlers—Watching Credit Customers in Lethbridge — Weighing Sugar Automatically—Retail Dealer Praises Book-Keeping Machine — Methods of a Chatham Grocer to Facilitate Stock-taking.

Higher License on Peddlers.

Edmonton, Alta., Dec. 29.—The board of trade of this city has endorsed the action of the Edmonton Retail Merchants' Association in asking for a higher license against transient traders.

The resolution recently passed by the board was as follows: "Resolved—that the Council of the Board of Trade heartily endorses the general principle of the memorial of the Edmonton Retailers' Association asking that the city by-laws regarding the licensing of peddlers, transient traders and others referred to in the memorial, be amended so as to provide that all such traders and others shall contribute their full share to the revenues of the city, and to afford all reasonable protection to legitimate resident traders, so far as this can be done without undue restriction of trade, and with due regard to the limitations of the city's authority in the matter."

The merchants recently called the city's attention to the fact that transients were not paying a license in keeping with the amount of business they were doing.

An Eye on Credit Customers.

Lethbridge, Alta., Dec. 29.—The Business Men's Protective Association, at a recent meeting adopted the constitution and by-laws drafted by the executive. There are ninety-two members enrolled, and it is expected that the number will soon reach 100. Business men in other towns have asked that they be allowed to become members, and it has been decided to extend the territory so that towns from Cardston to Coleridge, and from Coutts to Carmangay, be included.

It may be that the Lethbridge organization will affiliate with the Western Retail Merchants' Association.

The new secretary, J. E. Kennedy, announces that members must send in their lists of accounts on the 7th of each month, in order that said accounts may be included in the monthly list.

Sugar Automatically Weighed.

Stratford, Ont., Dec. 29.—An appliance used by the Barnsdale Trading Co. to overcome delay in parcelling sugar is an automatic sugar weighing machine. The sugar is placed in a bin on the floor above, and when a certain quantity is required the weighing apparatus is set for that amount and a slide pulled out. The correct amount is always weighed out.

No Accounts to Render.

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 29.—For bookkeeping purposes Egan Bros., Talbot St., have an account or credit register which they prize very highly. They have used one for 5 years and wouldn't be without it, since, they say, it saves them many tedious hours of journal and ledger keeping.

When the traveler called on P. L. M. Egan to sell him a machine, he listened to the commercial man's arguments and immediately remarked, "that's just what I've been looking for, for years," and installed one right away.

The chief advantage of it, he says, is that at any time he knows exactly what each customer owes him. It saves rendering accounts, transferring from journal to ledger and all the accompanying worries. He has between 350 and 400 accounts and he maintains that if he had to render bills for all these he would at times have no time to look after other things.

Prizes to Cash Purchasers.

Edmonton, Alta., Dec. 20.—As a method of attracting business and encouraging the payment of cash, the Purvis Co., general merchants, announced that to the 12 persons making the largest total cash purchases in their store puring the first 21 business days in December, valuable prizes would be given. The prizes included furs, silk dresses, smoking jacket, bath robe, coat sweaters, shoes and a man's hat—ranging from $50 to $3 in value.

Instructions were announced as follows:—Keep all sales checks secured with your purchases at the store. No matter how small your purchases may be the amount goes to make up a large total. (Have the clerk write your name on all checks.)

On the night of Saturday, December 24th (Christmas Eve), bring your checks to the store, showing the total amount of your purchases.

To the person having the largest total cash purchases will be given the 1st prize, and so on with the 11 next largest totals.

Purchases may be made in any department of the store—but be sure and keep your sales slips, with your name thereon.

Only purchases made up to six o'clock on December 24th will be counted in this contest.

Stock Taking Devices.

Chatham, Ont., Des. 29.—H. A. Andrews of this town keeps a book that assists him grreatly during stock-taking time. He calls it a "cost book" and in it he keeps track of every article in the store, the amount paid for it and the freight charge.

It is alphabetically arranged and indexed so that no time is wasted in looking up a particular article. Whenever Mr. Andrews gets a new invoice he compares the cost with the last cost marked in the cost book and if there has been any advance or decline in price he makes a change in the book. He has therefore the cost price of every article up-to-date and when stock-taking time comes along he has no "last invoice" to hunt up. He simply refers to his cost-book for the last cost and no delay results.

Each page of this book is double-ruled—one space for invoice cost and the opposite for freight. The total cost can therefore be easily obtained. Another stock-taking facility in the Andrews store is the weighing of the empty bins used for tea, spices, coffee, etc., and marking the tare on the interior. When taking stock, the entire bin is weighed and the tare substracted. This eliminates the handling of goods, saving their flavor and the staff's time.

Gives No Calendars.

Quebec, Que., Dec. 29.—No calendars are given away in the store of A. Drolet, Valier St., at Christmas time. The proprietor does not take kindly to calendars, but instead aims to encourage cash purchases by allowing 5 per cent. off. The amount of each cash purchase is shown on the cash register ticket. This, M. Drolet claims, attracts new customers, whereas a few customers are often overlooked in the matter of calendars and frequently lost. There are many people too, who come for calendars who do not deal regularly in the store, and it is a waste of money and time giving them out to these.

A neat display of bon-bons, oranges, raisins, peels, assorted biscuits, jellies, Christmas plum-puddings, bottled syrup, ginger, wine, etc., sold a large quantity of goods in this store. Price tickets were used, and M. Drolet claims they made many sales.

ONE OF THREE WAYS.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 29.—The White Candy Co., of this city, manufacturers of confectionery, have called a meeting of their creditors for January 19, when three propositions will be placed before them. The first is an application for an extension of time, the second a proposal to reorganize the company and the third is the consideration of an offer of sale. The company is capitalized at $75,000 and Thomas F. White, is the president. The principal reason given for the difficulties at this time is the action of one large firm, from which the company got a large part of its supplies, refusing any further credit. It is stated that the assets are above the liabilities and that the past year more goods were sold than ever before.

All After Money in the Grocery Business

Dairyman, Farmer, Ex-School Teacher and Printer Take a Turn at Picking The Dollars Off the Bushes—But They Were Inexperienced and Had to Move on Again—The Need of Specialists in This Modern Age.

By W. E. Elliott.

For making a fortune, quickly, there is nothing like the grocery business. Everyone outside of the trade knows that.

Here is a true story of a grocery business in a Western Ontario town of 5,000 where the travelers of London wholesale houses do the heavy selling. To be certain that the moral is read, it goes in here: "They all look good when they're far away!" In more dignified language, the idea is this: "Training is absolutely necessary to success in 9 cases out of 10, even in the grocery business."

A dairyman who was but a recent graduate from the farm started this business about 1889, in a new and small stand in the town referred to. His entire technical knowledge of groceries consisted of a firm belief that there was money in them. Fortunately for him, he had sense enough, being almost without capital, to commence on a small scale, and so avoided one of the commonest pitfalls of the beginner—overbuying in proportion to capital. It is only fair to add that later the stock became so large that he could not take all his cash discounts.

A $12,000 Stock; Turnover $20,000.

It was sixteen years later, or only five years ago, when Mr. Ex-dairyman gave up the grocery business. He had moved into larger premises twice, increased his staff from none at all to six or seven, and the stock carried had grown from a few dollars worth of feed and staple groceries to about $12,000. His turnover for several years had been $20,000 annually. The largest part of an excellent country patronage was his, and he conducted as nearly a cash system as most grocers can manage to reach. So the public, including many fairly intimate friends, were morally certain that in the toe of some sock, figuratively speaking, the grocer had put away plenty of coin for a leisurely old age.

As a matter of fact, in spite of the strong constitution built up by an outdoor life, the grocer's health was broken by fifteen years of confinement indoors. Further, he had to wait for the purchase money from his successor to pay off his own paper outstanding. He had just paid his way through the years and sent a family of boys to school. But few residents of that town could be induced to believe, to this day, that that grocer did not retire with thousands, in spite of the fact that he is working hard at another business even now.

Soon Sold the Business.

His successors were two men of some experience in the grocery business, though not particularly in touch with the constituency of this individual store. They were keen buyers, and there seemed no reason why they should not pull out of the business the thousands their predecessor had failed to land. Yet in a couple of years they sold.

A School Teacher on Deck.

The next firm on the scene was composed of an ex-school teacher, who had watched the immense amount of goods handled in this very store, and saw that there was money in the business, and a farmer past middle age, who had also been a customer, and saw a chance to profitably invest part of the price of the acres he sold.

But something failed to pan out as anticipated, and the school teacher found another partner. This was a man who had been a first-class printer, knowing the art preservative from A to Z and back again. He also knew that there were fat dividends in the grocery business, for he had handled the advertising of this and other stores. The vision of playing advertising manager for a firm in which he would be partner "got him going" and he fell for it.

The printer's latest successor in double harness with the school teacher is another farmer, who gladly laid down the irksome cares of shouldering sacks of wheat and carrying feed to ten-dollar-a-hundred hogs, for the glories of a white apron and an overdraft at the bank.

The Training's The Thing.

"How is the new firm doing?" the original owner of the business was asked the other day.

"They seem to be doing not so bad," was the half-wistful reply. He has been five years away from the grocery business now, and after paying cash over the counter from the outside during that time, is probably half convinced again that "there's money in the grocery business even for the inexperienced."

This is an age of specialists. Surely a grocer needs training. Lack of it invariably means waste, perhaps unconscious, but serious, in materials, time and energy. And most grocers will concede that in 1910 the ultimate profit of any grocery business which has not extraordinary facilities for gain is in the elimination of waste the ability to serve and sell goods beyond the actual, everyday demands of customers.

TRADE NOTE.

British Guiana, South America imports the bulk of its butter from France. In 1908 the imports from that country amounted to $33,863 and in 1910, $70,777. The corresponding figures for Canadian butter are $12,316 and $10,614. In 1908 Great Britain sent $57,078 worth and in 1909 only $18,413. The large importation from France in 1909, was due to the low price ruling in that market, and this is made more profitable from the fact that in the year 1908 the low price of butter in Great Britain gave that country the first place. The price of English butter as given in the customs valuation in 1908 was 22 cents per pound, and French butter 21½ cents. These prices include charges for freight and package. The high price in Canada in both these years may account for the small contribution from that source.

Clerks Ask Aid for Early Closing from Labor Unions

Lethbridge, Alta., Dec. 29.—The Retail Clerks' Association of Lethbridge has received its charter and a few days ago held an organization meeting. At a subsequent special meeting a resolution was unanimously passed that all secretaries of local unions be asked to urge all members of their respective organizations not to trade with those stores that keep open after 6 o'clock other than on Saturdays.

Cranberries Show a Weaker Feeling

The Holiday Rush is Not Yet Over for Retail Trade and Some Reports Indicate a Record Business—Wholesalers Doing Considerable This Week—The Busiest Part of Cranberry Season is Over and the Tendency is Toward Lower Prices — Potatoes and Onions are Firm—Apples Holding at Higher Prices.

The Christmas season passed with a good demand for fruits and vegetables and it is fully expected that the increased trade will be felt until after the first of the new year when the public in general will resume its sober, staid way. There is the possibility of some re-action in prices following the heavy trade, although it is held that prices have not been inflated for the present holiday trade. According to one despatch cranberries recently dropped one dollar a barrel in New York, owing to plentiful supplies, and a feeling that after the festivities cranberries will not be so heavily sought after.

Apples are selling readily especially in the standard qualities and are bringing a high price. Oranges are just a little easier in feeling. The sale of grapes was satisfactory and grapefruit is bringing good prices. The demand for potatoes continues heavy and present supplies are just about meeting demand, leaving no surplus.

New grown vegetables are scarce as yet and in some cases are bringing fabulous prices, that is for vegetables. When a basket of new peas will find a buyer who will pay $25, it will be understood that shippers are not overburdened with supplies. Hotels that are famous for the dinner rates have to get these goods and the fortunate growers are reaping a harvest. The trouble seems to be that even at that price the supply is not sufficient. It will not be long until these new vegetables will be coming freely across the border.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—As usual at this time of the year there is quite a brisk business passing in all lines and is expected to continue till the turn of the year when there will be the customary weakening in the demand. The fruit trade has not been so satisfactory as anticipated, but nevertheless dealers have little cause for complaint.

Vegetables—"Very, very slow indeed," was the reply of a dealer when asked about the state of the markets: "We will have plenty of time to smoke and chat till the turn of the year. Green Fruits.—The market does not show many changes this week. The trade has been good and the holiday demand will not spend itself until after New Year's day. It will then be possible to get an idea of what the situation is likely to be. Some retailers state that their Christmas trade surpassed all previous years and they still have the New Year's trade to handle yet. Local jobbers are doing a fair business this week, but it is apparent that the retail trade is pretty well stocked up for the present.

A FIREPLACE WINDOW.

This is Built of Dried Fruits and Attracts Considerable Attention.

London, Ont., Dec. 29. — Scandrett Brothers, Dundas street grocers, have a unique Christmas window display in the form of an old fashioned fireplace and mantel built chiefly of fruits. Orange and citron peels, convex surface outward, form the body of the fireplace. The hearth is built of ordinary raisins, surrounded by a little wall of pressed figs. An electric light behind red tissue paper supplies the fire effect in the centre, and boxes of table raisins slope down from the hearth to the window. Little banners display here and there appropriate mottoes.

The windows of John Diprose's "Three Popular Stores" take on a holiday appearance long before Christmas, by virtue of the fact that he is a believer in displaying fruit. Oranges are always a feature in the Diprose windows, price tickets are used, and once in a while a special bargain is offered in a good orange. Apples are also used liberally, as well as attractive boxes of dried fruits. The store at 56 Dundas street has a large frontage in proportion to its depth, and the amount of fruit and vegetables on display here, even after the store is closed, is attractive to customers, actual or probable. The lights are always on till midnight, at which time an alarm clock contrivance turns them off.

CALENDARS FOR 1911.

The nineteen hundred and eleven calendar sent out to the trade by J. J. McCabe, wholesale fruit broker, Toronto, is an exceedingly attractive one. The picture is from a painting of Palm's and is called "The Huntress"—a life-like picture of robust womanhood. Miss Malvina Longfellow, grand niece of the poet and an accomplished actress, was the model from which the drawing was made. The calendar is out-of-the-ordinary variety being narrow and long and decorated with ribbon.

Connors Bros., packers of sea foods, etc., Black's Harbor, N.B., have issued an elaborately designed calendar entitled "Buttercups." The illustration is from a painting by Savage Cooper, a celebrated London artist. It is a study in green and yellow of a beautiful woman gathering buttercups by the bank of a brook. The border of the picture is decorated with leaves and blossoms of a grey color, which add materially to the appearance.

Do you pay enough attention to the appearance of your store? Is it modern and attractive? Take a look at it now, from the standpoint of the man on the street.

Fish - Oysters

Retailer Should Hold Fish Trade

During the Period Between Advent and Lent He Should Endeavor to Maintain the Business Acquired During Advent—Demand for Fish Has Been Good and Supplies Have Improved in Quality—Oyster Business Continues at Satisfactory Condition.

The present is the season when the retail fish dealer will have to put forth a few extra efforts to maintain a demand for fish. There will be a certain trade, but to insure a fair business between Advent and Lent the wisest and safest plan is to SELL fish. It will require greater salesmanship, but the extra work will hold the trade and lay the foundation for a good business during the Lenten season. Supplies are fairly plentiful and the trade is in a healthy condition. It is entirely to the interest of the retailer to "push" his fish trade just now when there may be an inclination on the part of consumers to overlook it.

ONTARIO.

Toronto.—The past week was quiet in fish demand, owing to the heavy special holiday trade. Prices remain unchanged and business is showing itself noticeably in general lines with heavy demand for white fish, halibut, herring, etc.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

St. John.—Receipts of fish were a little better last week than they have been. The heavy gales, lately, interfered much with the catches and bait is also reported scarce. The total receipts of fresh stock last week amounted to about 70,000 pounds, mostly haddock. There has been a brisk demand from the western provinces and prices are practically unchanged.

The catch of smelts on the Miramichi has been disappointing thus far and the fishermen are becoming discouraged. The schooner Blanche was lost last week, while on a voyage from Freeport, N.S., to St. John. She had on board 20,000 pounds of haddock.

There is considerable interest here in the order of the railway commission that the Dominion Atlantic Railway Co., must reduce the rate on finnan haddie from Digby to St. John, from 20 cents to eight cents for carload and eleven cents for smaller lots. While this is not expected to have any effect on local prices, it will make a considerable difference in shipments to the west.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—The fish business as usual during the holidays has quieted down. The principal demand now is for oysters, lobsters, finnan haddies, frozen salmon and halibut. Prepared, pickled, and salt fish are completely ignored. Once demand starts again an advance in prices is expected for some lines, especially halibut and salmon. The supplies have been greatly reduced in the past few weeks, particularly salmon which no doubt will be in strong demand. Frozen haddock and codfish, owing to good fishing lately, will be sold cheaper for some time.

The first cargoes of frozen herring from Newfoundland are said to be in transit now. There is yet a good many summer frozen herring on the market, and for this reason the trade will be reluctant to touch the Newfoundland supplies immediately.

The Regulations on Herring Fisheries

Local and Central Control Compared—Conditions Existing in the Motherland—What is Being Done in the U. S.—Some Herring Statistics.

By A. M. Payne.

To do justice to any review of the government report on herring a word or two on government regulation may not be out of place. Ordinary research indicates clearly that local control of fishery operations has always been urgently advocated in seafaring nations by those immediately interested. Obviously, there are two sides to the question. As a nursery for seamen, central national control suggests cogent arguments, while on the other hand, the actual prosecution of the fishery industry (taking an unbiased view of its risks, uncertainties and hazards) presents an aspect endorsing the need of special regulation in close touch with fishing communities.

The System in Scotland.

In efforts to improve the herring fishery of Canada, or in fact any branch of the industry, Canadian fishermen naturally seek for enlightenment in the first instance from the Motherland. Although the geographical compactness of the British Isles favors central control, a separate local jurisdiction in Scotland, as is well known, has resulted in marvellous progress, particularly as regards herring. Even Yarmouth, the English centre of the industry, depends not only on Scottish methods, but on Scottish labor for carrying it on from year to year.

Almost as naturally we compare conditions with the neighboring Republic. There, it is to be observed, official recognition by the U. S. government of the welfare and development of fishery interests engrosses unceasing attention. Generous appropriations from the national purse are voted annually to promote improvement on a thoroughly comprehensive scale. It is competent, however, for each individual state to adopt its own legislative regulations without interference from Washington, although supreme control might be acquired as in the case of the export of meat in the event of a contingency.

In Canada the B. N. Act empowers the Federal Government to exercise supreme control of the fisheries as an adjunct to marine affairs. This report is consequently submitted to the Ottawa authorities in the 42nd annual report of the Department as appendix No. 19 on page 365.

Yield of Herring.

The sub-divisional districts visited during the midsummer and early fall of 1908 for purposes of investigation and plans of betterment were Grand Manan and Caraquet in New Brunswick, and Gaspe in Quebec. The survey did not extend to Nova Scotia, but the general deductions in the report, more especially with reference to the important branch of salt herring, are applicable to the whole Dominion. At Grand Manan the herring fishery appears to be the staple industry. The yield for the period under review was not large, except in smoked herring, viz: 1,610 bbls. pickled herring; 55,000 lbs. fresh herring; 1,351,000 lbs. smoked herring; 70,000 lbs. skinned and boneless herring.

At Caraquet, on the north shore, the returns were: 34,000 bbls. pickled herring; 350,000 lbs. fresh herring.

At Gaspe the figures were 2,875 bbls. pickled herring.

The all-round tenor of Mr. Cowie's report indicates with justifiable emphasis that the present status of this great natural resource, with which the coast waters of Canada (especially in Nova Scotia) fairly teem at certain seasons, is far below what it ought to be and what it might be under improved methods. The reasons for the unfavorable annual results and the remedies needed, as defined in Mr. Cowie's conclusions, are in every sense worthy of earnest consideration.

Convincing verbatim extracts in a succeeding article should open the eyes of Canadian fishermen to the furtherance of their future vital interests.

The True Merchant Says "It's Got to Go"

Different Types of Retail Buyers a Traveling Salesman for a New Line Meets—The Large City and Small Town Present Various Types of Dealers—The Merchant with the Forethought and Who Knows His Selling Power is the One Who Wins.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

trade-papers; more about solid values.

The man who markets a new article in a big city is said to have "his work cut out for him." And he does not go far in the work ere he realizes that he is in serious business. On the other hand, he who goes after big city trade—and GETS it—is broadened in character by the experience. He learns a lot that is very valuable, and, if he is a philosopher, as many commonplace salesmen are, he is in a position to do a lot of analyzing and classifying when he gets time to sit down and think it all over.

The average city merchant is not as good a merchant as is the country storekeeper—meaning the man who does business in the town of 2,000 to 3,000 population. Note that I say the AVERAGE; because there are brilliant exceptions to prove the rule. This condition is very discouraging to the man who for the first time hits the city job. He works against a dead wall of dense indifference, if nothing worse; of men who "have no time to talk;" of grocers who have certain hours—very short—during which they "see salesmen," which hours are usually from 10 to 12, thus being so bunched that no man can possibly get in to see all desirable prospects in the limited time; of dealers who listen for a minute and then say, "create the demand and we will stock your goods;" of a few who are so ignorant of anything like true merchandising enterprise that he despairs for the future of the trade.

Selling the Country Merchant.

This is hard on a man who has theretofore worked country trade—the good, old, plenty-of-time-to-talk sort where the Old Man reads The Canadian Grocer every week and likes to pass out his own comments on what he reads! O, yes: it is different. The salesman in such circumstances has been able to show the merchant, whom he calls "John" or "Uncle Hi" or some such friendly name as carries with it no suggestion of flippancy or offensive familiarity, that the article he offers is good; will please the "women folks;" and yields a fair margin, and the buyer in such case thinks twice about the quality and promise of satisfaction to once about the profit he will get out of it. But the city grocer seems filled with but one idea, the question of how much he will get out of an article without regard to the interest of the customer. At least that is about the way things will look to the new city salesman.

But there are good times coming later on and the salesman reaches the really GOOD city grocer. When he reaches that man his faith in humanity, especially as applied to grocers, is again galvanized into life; for that merchant is good for the soul of the salesman.

Studies His Goods Carefully.

That kind of city merchant outdoes the countryman in just the proportion that his opportunities are greater. He knows more about markets; more about He reads and thinks of what he reads, even if his hair gets grey and thin at forty. And he is as conscientious as even John with the added advantage that he has to take very little on faith because of a wide, accurate knowledge. For instance: John has been told that nowadays there is no Mocha coffee and he has come to believe that yarn until he is really suspicious of any man who tries to tell him that Mocha is still grown. The city merchant knows that Mocha is still to be had, but he is interested in KNOWING that he really has Mocha to the extent that he will make the seller show the location on the Arabian map and write the guaranty on the bill. John on the other hand, is usually content with a pretty good contribution of faith—often the word of an ignorant salesman and likely as not has no idea where Mocha comes from or gets its name.

So the salesman who gets next to this kind of merchant finds the kind of audience he has been hungering for. All the merchant wants to know is, has the article genuine merit? and if that question can be answered in the affirmative, then the salesman has secured the entering wedge for which he has worked. The interview lasts from 30 minutes to three hours—sometimes half a day—for this kind of merchant wants to know all about it; and sometimes the buyer will try the article himself; then buy a sample lot of a few pounds or packages and give it to his managers, relatives and friends to try carefully before he will stock it and push it.

Why it Has to Go.

And here is where I get my text—"IT'S GOT TO GO!" for it was just such a city merchant who recently took on a new article of merit, after he had exhaustively gone over the proposition. It was perishable; a new item to him and his trade; something the users must get accustomed to and a good deal of education was called for. The first lot was received shortly before the Christmas rush and, for want of knowledge and because he was crowded with business, the merchant lost part of the shipment. When the salesman called again, he found the merchant as courteous and urbane as ever, but very busy; and the word was: "I cannot go further with that matter now ,as I am too busy; but you come in again after Christmas, and we shall take it up together. And I am going into it more thoroughly than ever at that time, for when I take it up again it's GOT to go!"

Knows His Selling Power.

That's the right idea. That man will SELL anything he takes up. He knows his selling power, and uses it. His attitude is the one I wish I might instil into every grocer, for it would be his salvation.

The commonest question any seller has to answer to the average retailer is: "Will it sell?" Salesmen are often tempted to say: "Certainly it will!" and any number yield to the temptation because they feel forced to yield. They must say something to stir up the inertia of the average retailer or they would many times miss making their quota of sales—that is, many of them would do that. There are salesmen and salesmen. Some can state the facts and give the true impression and yet sell goods, just as some merchants are successful; but there is little to choose between the average merchant and the average salesman. The true salesman answers: "No; nothing 'will sell'—YOU must SELL IT." Then he has his work cut out for him to show the grocer that really nothing that is worth while selling will sell itself.

Attitude of the True Merchant.

The true merchant approaches every buying problem with his mind absolutely open. He takes up the points of the offering and studies them carefully, giving due attention to all the salesman tells him. If the proposition is an entirely new one to him, he takes time enough to go over it so as to get it all, and then he takes more time to think it over to be sure he has missed nothing; but, after that, if the article appeals to him as a man and a merchant, he takes it up unhesitatingly and pushes it to the front. The true merchant likes to be ahead of demand; to anticipate developments in new foods; to lead in such developments rather than to follow the lead of others. Thus the true merchant makes money while the one who "lets others do the educating of the public and try out new things" merely drops in at the rear and never has anything but the "regular line" such as one can find anywhere. Thus, too, the true merchant, through exercising his SELLING POWER, skims the cream of the profits on new articles while that cream is rich and thick. Later on, when the articles have become established so that they "sell themselves," which means, when anybody can sell them, he enjoys a readier sale through having been first on the ground. He is up-to-date; ahead of the procession; noted for being "different." And that is all well worth while.

Be a careful buyer. Study propositions thoughtfully. No part of your business can bear slighting. But, when your own good judgment tells you that a thing is a "comer," take it up and then go about its SELLING with the motto: "It's GOT to go!

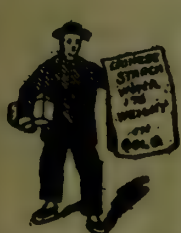
REAL TRUE CREAM AT LAST

Mr. A. McGill, the Chief Analyst to the Inland Revenue Department of Canada, wrote in Bulletin 144, as far back as under date 3rd June, 1908:—"The word 'CREAM' is largely used to designate condensed milk This is incorrect and SHOULD BE MADE ILLEGAL As a matter of fact, these so-called 'creams' are not any richer in milk fat than sugared condensed milks, and many of them are distinctly poorer. Among the samples examined ONLY ONE (No. 25628 which contains 25.20 per cent. of fat) IS ENTITLED TO BE CALLED CREAM."



This one sample was prepared by FUSSELL & CO., Ltd, LONDON AND NORWAY.

FUSSELL'S GOLDEN BUTTERFLY BRAND CREAM

Is REAL CREAM and contains from 25 to 30 per cent. milk fat. Condensed milks—the so-called "Evaporated Creams"—contain about 8 per cent. only.

The Grocer gets from its Readers a Degree of Attention—a Quality of Interest—that is Most Unusual :: ::

Not long ago a certain article was advertised in this paper, and several others simultaneously.

We questioned the advisability of using The Grocer, because we believed that the trade in which we circulate did not offer a very good field for the article in question. The manufacturer, however, was satisfied to make the trial, so the advertisement was inserted.

The Grocer brought better returns than any of the other mediums used.

Why?

It was not because the other papers have not good circulation. They have. And it was not because they are not read. They are read.

The difference in pulling power between The Grocer and these papers is due to the difference in the quality of interest that each gets from its readers.

Thousands of good dealers save many times the subscription price by studying this paper closely every week. They give it a degree of attention—a quality of interest—that is most unusual.

That is why The Grocer, with a comparatively small number of readers who could be considered probable buyers, brought better returns than the other papers that should logically be much better mediums for this particular proposition.
